Dear Tubby:

I was truly delighted to see you this morning, and once again want to thank you for coming to my office. I shall read, with pleasure and pride I am sure, the various documents you left with me.

The letter to Mrs. Soames comes to you with this note. But may I say direct to you, as I did in that letter, that it is a personal privilege and distinction to be associated with you in the magnificent work you are doing.

With warm regard,

As ever,

The Reverend Philip B. Clayton
c/o The Reverend Leslie Glenn 16 Kalorama Circle
Washington, D. C.

October 31, 1956

Dear Mrs. Soames:

Let me first send my warm greeting to your great father whose friendship has been one of the most cherished things of my life.

The Reverend Philip ("Tubby") Clayton has shown me your letter to ex-Winant Volunteers. I feel a sense of personal privilege and distinction in being continued as Honorary Senior Sponsor of The Winant Volunteers in the United States.

These American school and college boys who go to England to serve, under Tubby's leadership for the summers, as counselors among the underprivileged boys in London's East End, are indeed ambassadors of good will from our country to yours, as was our Ambassador Winant after whom your fine movement was named.

I am delighted to hear from Tubby Clayton's own lips how truly God has strengthened this endeavor begun by a mere handful in 1947.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Dear George:

One Jack Lambert, of 5127 Ledge Avenue, writes that Mrs. Florence Stevens, Mrs. Margery Hall, and Mrs. Anita Louise Adler, of the "Women's Brigade for Ike and Dick" should have letters of acknowledgment for their efforts, particularly in connection with welcome at Beverly Hilton. Mrs. Adler did get one, about Hollywood Bowl appearance, as you know.

What is your recommendation?

Sincerely,

SECRET

October 29, 1956.

Dear Foster:

For some days I have been wondering whether the present situations in Eastern Europe and in the Mid East might not be creating in Nehru the feeling that he might, very wisely, begin to strengthen his ties with the West and separate himself more distinctly from the Communists. If he has any such feeling, of course, we would want to nurture and promote it. Incidentally, we should be anxious, also, to find him some face-saving device.

It just might be possible that by writing to him a very serious letter speaking of our deep regret that so many innocent people had to suffer at the hands of Russian imperialism and so forth, and without asking him to do anything except to counsel with us, we might make some advances in this direction.

I assume you have been thinking of these things also, but if we do have any belief that we can do anything at all, we probably should move rapidly.

As ever,

The Honorable John Foster Dulles,
The Secretary of State,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Ray:

As we enter the last days of the 1956 campaign, I want to emphasize again the tremendously important part our precinct workers will play in the coming election.

Ohio, with more than nine thousand good citizens working for our party at the precinct level, can be an inspiration to every State in the nation. It is my earnest hope that these dedicated men and women will maintain their energy and vigilance right through election day. I know that with a clear understanding of Administration accomplishments, and with our citizens going to the polls in great numbers, there can be no doubt about the decision in Ohio and in the nation on November sixth.

I wish it were possible for me to express personally my admiration and my gratitude to each one of those who work with you in seeing that the voters in every Ohio precinct go to the polls. But since I cannot possibly contact the more than nine thousand of your associates, may I convey to them through you my heartfelt thanks for their work, and my very best wishes for their success?

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

Dear Jim:

Of course the success of your long negotiations to set up the International Atomic Association is attested by the splendid outcome. But, in addition to this, I have heard from all sides that you did a masterly job in representing America in a long and laborious effort to get this organization off on the right foot and with good will on the part of all.

I am greatly indebted to you officially. But more than this, I feel a personal obligation because of my very deep interest in the project itself.

With my warm thanks and personal regard,

Sincerely,

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

Dear Harold:

Tom Stephens told me that he saw you at the Rally at the Garden last night. I am sorry that I did not have a chance for a word with you, or even a special wave -- but, as you know, such political affairs are the worst places in the world for any kind of personal exchange.

At any rate, thank you very much for coming.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

The Honorable Harold E. Talbott

Dear Dan:

Mrs. Eisenhower and I truly enjoyed being back at the Commodore for a few hours on Thursday. It was particularly nice to see you and so many of our old friends from the 1952 campaign days.

You, and the members of your staff, accorded to us the same exceptional cooperation that we remembered so well. We are grateful to all of you for taking such good care of us.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

PERSONAL

Dear Walter:

It is difficult for me to thank you adequately for the many things you have done on behalf of this Administration in the present campaign. I am always grateful for your confidence and support.

Mamie and I deeply appreciated your appearance with us on the platform at the Rally last night. You managed to convey a sense of excitement to the crowd that in large part, I know, contributed to the fine reception we received.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

PERSONAL

October 26, 1956

Your Eminence:

Recently Dick Nixon told me of the very cordial reception he had at the annual Alfred E. Smith Dinner. He spoke with particular gratification of your great courtesy to him.

I write this note, firstly, to thank you for the honor you did to a young man whom I consider to be a very splendid American. Secondly, I want to felicitate you on the great success of your Dinner, which seems each year to be a more notable event. Finally, it just seemed to me that it had been such a long time since I had communicated with you directly (I do hear of you often from Bernard Shanley) that I wanted to send along my very best wishes and warm greetings.

When I told Mamie of my intention to drop you a note this morning, she was insistent that I include her affectionate regard along with my own.

Sincerely,

THE DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LIBRARY

His Eminence
Francis J. Cardinal Spellman
New York 22, New York

P.S. I most deeply regret the attempt to drag the name of His Holiness the Pope into our political campaign. I assure you that in my own public utterances no reference whatsoever will be made to this.

October 26, 1956

Dear Fred:

Mamie and I look forward to any "appearance" -- especially here in the East -- because we can almost count on the presence of yourself and your associates to contribute glamor and good humor and a great deal of enjoyment to the audience. After all of that, it doesn't matter much what I have to say!

I am truly grateful to you, and to the members of the Pennsylvanians who appeared with you, for contributing your talents to the Madison Square Garden Rally last night.

Additionally, it is -- personally -- a joy to see you.

With warm regard,

As ever,

Dear Bedell:

Last evening I at last got a chance to read all of "Old Yeller," quietly and deliberately. I think it is such a wonderful little story that I want to tell you again how really grateful I am that you selected this particular book to send to me for my birthday.

Give my love to Nory, and of course all the best to yourself.

General of the Army George C. Marshall
Leesburg
Virginia

I am delighted to learn that you are today receiving the Woodrow Wilson Award. It gives me another opportunity to reaffirm the admiration, respect and esteem that I have always held for you. In 1948 I tried to express my feelings, thinking of you mainly as an outstanding war leader. But I could well have added what I then felt and feel now, that though I have met all or most of the so-called prominent and great in the world, you head my list of those who, I believe, deserve the most from their country and from the free world, and who have provided the rest of us with an exemplary standard of service.

Mamie joins me in warmest felicitations to you and Mrs. Marshall on this day, and in best wishes for continued health and happiness.

Dear Cabot:

The President has today signed the letter to Ambassador Munin regretting his inability to accept the invitation to appear before the Conference on October twenty-sixth. The letter encloses a brief statement of certain considerations which the President would have presented in person at the Conference's concluding session had he been able to attend.

I enclose herewith the original letter of the President with the attached enclosure. I am also sending copies for your files, and sending copies to the Secretary of State, Admiral Strauss and Ambassador Wadsworth.

I understand that the Secretary of State telephoned you today that the President would like to have Admiral Strauss deliver the message attached to the President's letter at the closing session of the Conference on Friday. I assume, therefore, that you will deliver the President's letter to Ambassador Munin and arrange with him for Admiral Strauss to appear on Friday, October twenty-sixth, and present the President's message.

We shall obviously wish to know here when we may release the text of the President's letter to Ambassador Munin and its enclosed message but I assume that if Admiral Strauss is to deliver the message in person the release date would be Friday.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT CUTLER

The Honorable Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr.
The Representative of the United States of America to the United Nations

New York 16, N. Y.

P.S.: Since dictating the above, I have talked with Jim Hagerty. His view is that the release through the United Nations, which would be your care, and that the release would achieve its best effect if made on Friday morning for the evening papers.

Your Excellency:

I beg to acknowledge your gracious invitation to address the closing session of the Conference on the Statute of the International Atomic Energy Agency on October the twenty-sixth.

This invitation has been a source of gratification to me personally and to the people of the United States. It had been my earnest hope to appear at this historic Conference, at which the largest number of nations in history are met together. But it is now clear that the special circumstances of my present life, -- which add inescapable political engagements to my official duties, -- oblige me to deny myself the honor and privilege of accepting your great courtesy. It will be necessary for me to be present in Washington on Friday of this week.

May I hope, Mr. President, that you will express my sincere regrets to the assembled Delegates, and transmit to them some considerations which I had wished to present in person at the Conference's concluding session and which I am enclosing with this letter.

Sincerely,

/s/ Dwight D. Eisenhower

October 23, 1956

Mr. President and Delegates to the Conference on the Statute of the International Atomic Energy Agency:

Almost three years have passed since I was honored by an invitation to speak to the General Assembly of the United Nations. On that occasion, I proposed in behalf of the United States that atomic power -- the greatest force science ever placed in man's hand -- be put to work for peace.

Specifically, my proposal was: first, that governments begin, and continue, to make from their atomic materials stockpiled for war joint contributions to an International Agency; and, second, that this Agency be responsible for finding methods to apply these atomic materials to the needs of agriculture, medicine, and other peaceful pursuits of mankind.

THE DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LIBRARY

The United States then pledged its entire heart and mind to finding how the miraculous inventiveness of man should be dedicated, not to his death, but consecrated to his life.

The atom was regarded, in 1953, as a terrible weapon for war. Since the first explosion in 1945, man had fearfully multiplied its destructiveness. People knew that a single airgroup could carry a more devastating cargo than all the bombs that fell on Britain in World War II. Several nations had learned to make atomic weapons and swiftly transport them across oceans and continents. To many people the doom of civilization in a nuclear war seemed inevitable. When they looked ahead, they saw no hope for a peaceful future.

The proposal made in 1953 by the United States offered: for apathy, action; for despair, hope; for the whirlpool of general war, a channel to the harbor of future peace.

From the time that proposal was made, I watched with ardent expectation the outcome of all the work done by the sponsoring powers and the working groups, and the debates in the General Assembly and at this culminating Conference. The planning and framing of the International Atomic Energy Agency has required many months of patience and intelligent effort. These labors have now been completed by the Conference's approval of the Statute.

I congratulate the Conference for what it has accomplished. The Statute, and the International Agency for which it provides, hold out to the world a fresh hope for peace.

Since the United States made its proposal in 1953, the intensity of the atom's destructiveness has again been greatly multiplied. For their own salvation, men are under a compulsion that must not be denied to turn this furious, mighty power from the devastation of war to the constructive purposes and practices of peace.

That is why the world needs fresh hope -- a new chance for man working with man to root out past frustration and past hopelessness.

That is why the United States will never cease from seeking trustworthy agreements under which all nations will cooperate to disarm the atom.

To spur the coming of such a day, the peace-loving nations have pressed forward with benign uses of the atom for man's well-being and welfare. As increased knowledge makes more terrible the atom's might, it also brings closer the realization of its potential for good.

Peace can come from nations working together. When they have a common cause and a common interest, they are drawn together by this bond.

We -- as one of the peace-loving nations -- have sought to share our atomic skills and materials.

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

Last February, we offered to make available to friendly nations, for peaceful use, 20,000 kilograms of nuclear materials -- an amount equal to that allocated for like use within the United States. And we have entered into agreements with thirty-seven nations represented at the Conference -- and are negotiating with fourteen more -- to cooperate in building in their lands atomic reactors, of all types and sizes, for peaceful works.

People have shown their hunger to learn the intricate mysteries of the new atomic science. We have tried to satisfy that hunger, to break open doors that sealed off the knowledge they sought -- through initiating great scientific congresses and by providing libraries and training courses and schools. We have been happy to offer our knowledge of ways to use the atom for peace, of ways to use the atomic isotope in medical care and cure and in agriculture and industry. Because science is without boundaries, a common knowledge of the peaceful application of this new science can help us all to a better understanding of each other.

In all these things that we do as a government, the United States does not seek for domination or control or profit. Nor shall we as a government ever do so.

THE UNITED STATES LIBRARY
EISENHOWER

It is now for nations assembled at this Conference formally to adopt the Statute.

Here is what I, in behalf of the United States, propose.

First: It shall be my care, when our Congress reassembles, to present the Statute for official ratification by our Senate in accordance with our Constitution, and to request appropriate Congressional authority to transfer special nuclear materials to the International Atomic Energy Agency. I wish my country to be among the first to recognize by official action what you at this Conference have accomplished.

Second: To enable the International Atomic Energy Agency -- upon its establishment by appropriate governmental actions -- to start atomic research and power programs without delay, the United States will make available to the International Agency, by lease or otherwise, 5,000 kilograms of the nuclear fuel uranium 235 from the 20,000 kilograms of such material allocated last February by the United States for peaceful uses by friendly nations.

Third: In addition to the above-mentioned initial 5,000 kilograms of uranium 235, the United States will continue to make available to the International Atomic Energy Agency nuclear materials that will match in amount the sum of all quantities of such materials made similarly available by all other members of the International Agency, and on comparable terms, for the period between the establishment of the Agency and July 1, 1960. The United States will deliver these nuclear materials to the International Agency as they are required for Agency-approved projects.

Assuming that all nations represented at the Conference undertake parallel steps, -- within their capabilities, -- together we can overcome the obstacles that lie ahead and prove to each other that international controls are not only feasible but generally acceptable as a way to achieve peace.

The prompt and successful functioning of the Agency can begin to translate the myriad uses of atomic energy into better living: in our homes, at our work, during our travel and our rest.

At present, we see only the first fruits of this atomic growth. Atomic-fueled plants, which are being planned or built in this and several countries, will in a few years be producing power for civilian uses: to turn the wheels of factories -- to light the darkness in countless homes.

We will not lead people to expect the advent overnight of an atomic millennium. In many countries, long and patient scientific experimentation and trial must precede the generation from atomic sources of electric power that can compete with that produced by using available coal, oil, gas, or water power. But, in the meantime, this International Agency will be encouraging those scientific labors and research to hasten the looked-for day.

The benefits of our daily living which will result from putting the atom to work for peace -- more abundant and cheaper power and light, irrigation of arid lands, less costly transportation, the opening to industry of territories hitherto denied -- may come to us more slowly than we would wish. But there is something more important than these material benefits. I mean those highways that lead to a settled tranquility among nations.

People have long been seeking a channel for peaceful discussion. The International Atomic Energy Agency offers one such channel. During the last three years of deliberations upon its establishment and functioning, this channel has been kept open. It shall be the purpose of the United States to broaden this channel and to encourage its general use.

Some day, we fervently hope, sanity will overcome man's propensity to destroy himself. Then, the world can beat its swords into ploughshares. All nations can turn their plants that make nuclear fuel to an exclusively civilian use, and the fuel in their stockpiled nuclear weapons can also be put to work for man's health and welfare. In that happy time, the giant of atomic energy can become, not a frightening image of destructive war, but an obedient servant in a prosperous and peaceful world.

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

The real vision of the atomic future rests not in the material abundance which it should eventually bring for man's convenience and comfort in living. It lies in finding at last, through the common use of such abundance, a way to make the nations of the world friendly neighbors on the same street.

UNITED NATIONS NATIONS UNIES

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I have the letter which your Embassy handed me through Secretary Dulles on October nineteenth. I regret to find that this letter departs from accepted international practice in a number of respects.

First, the sending of your note in the midst of a national election campaign of which you take cognizance expressing the support of "certain prominent public figures in the United States" constitutes an interference by a foreign nation in our internal affairs of a kind which, if indulged in by an Ambassador, would lead to his being declared persona non grata in accordance with long-established custom.

Second, having delivered a lengthy communication in the Russian language, you have published it before it could be carefully translated and delivered to me. Because of this, and of the necessity of placing the facts accurately before the public, I am compelled to release this reply immediately.

Third, your statement with respect to the Secretary of State is not only unwarranted, but is personally offensive to me.

Fourth, you seem to impugn my own sincerity.

However, I am not instructing the Department of State to return your letter to your Embassy. This is not because I am tolerant of these departures from accepted international practice, but because I still entertain the hope that direct communications between us may serve the cause of peace.

You and I have exchanged a number of letters since our meeting in Geneva on the reduction of armaments and related matters in our effort to make progress toward the goal of peace. I hope that that practice may be resumed in accordance with accepted standards.

The United States has for a long time been intensively examining, evaluating and planning dependable means of stopping the arms race and reducing and controlling armaments. These explorations include the constant examination and evaluation of nuclear tests.

To be effective, and not simply a mirage, all these plans require systems of inspection and control, both of which your Government has steadfastly refused to accept. Even my "Open Skies" proposal of mutual aerial inspection, suggested as a first step, you rejected.

However, though disappointed, we are not discouraged. We will continue unrelenting in our efforts to attain these goals. We will close no doors which might open a secure way to serve humanity.

We shall entertain and seriously evaluate all proposals from any source which seem to have merit, and we shall constantly seek for ourselves formulations which might dependably remove the atomic menace.

Sincerely,

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin
Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Dear Dr. and Mrs. Gullikson:

I can't tell you how much pleasure Mrs. Eisenhower and I found in our overnight stay with my brother. A great part of our enjoyment came from the contributions of Lucy's friends such as yourselves.

I know we are indebted to you for the delicious tomato conserve that was served with the corn meal mush for breakfast Thursday.

With my thanks and best wishes,

Sincerely,

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

Tacoma, Washington.

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Mrs. De Long:

My sister-in-law told me that you were responsible for the flowers in her house in honor of our visit there Wednesday night.

The arrangements were lovely throughout, and I assure you that both Mrs. Eisenhower and I deeply appreciated your thoughtfulness, and admired your talents.

With best wishes and many thanks,

Sincerely,

Mrs. Walter De Long
Tacoma Country Club,
Tacoma, Washington

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Jim:

I cannot tell you how unhappy I was to learn, after we left Tacoma, that through a misunderstanding, our motorcade from the Field House to the Airport passed before a lot of the people -- and school children and their bands -- had assembled.

I wish I had time to come back to Tacoma just to say "I am sorry" to all the wonderful people who did me the honor of wanting to see me and were disappointed. Won't you please tell your friends and neighbors how truly regretful I am?

With warm regard,

Ever,

Colonel James R. Stack,
Tacoma, Washington.

2106 S. Tacoma Ave.

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Mr. Jack:

Before this exciting trip to the West Coast is over, I want to dictate a note to you to thank you, and the members of the "Citizens" organization all over Oregon, for all you did in connection with our visit to Portland.

I appreciate the efforts of all of you, not only in connection with our trip, but to assure that on November sixth the Administration is given a vote of confidence by the American people, and people from Oregon are sent to Washington who will cooperate fully with us.

Good luck and warm regard!

Sincerely,

Mr. Glenn R. Jack
Oregon Citizens for Eisenhower
The Butler Building
Oregon City, Oregon

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Mr. Wyatt:

Before the Columbine touches her wheels down in the East tonight, I want to dictate a note to you to express my grateful appreciation of your efforts in making our Portland appearance enjoyable, and I hope by your standards, successful.

Thank you -- and the members of the Republican State Central Committee -- for the hard work you all put into the inevitably complicated arrangements.

With warm regard to you and Mrs. Wyatt, in which Mrs. Eisenhower joins,

Sincerely,

The Honorable Wendell Wyatt
1129 Commercial Street
Astoria, Oregon

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Mr. Mauts:

Again I want to thank you for all the hard work that you did in connection with our Oregon visit. I understand that you carried the major burden of the arrangements -- and further -- that in so doing, you disrupted the normal functions of your active law office. I am more than grateful to you and everyone who helped you.

I am quite aware that your job is not an easy one, and I am glad that you are tackling it with so much vigor and enthusiasm. I hope that your efforts will be redoubled in the final two weeks. We need in Washington the fine Republicans who are running on your State ticket.

Please remember me kindly to Mrs. Mauts.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

The Honorable Robert T. Mauts

Dear Mrs. Lexa:

Mrs. Eisenhower and I appreciated greatly your thoughtful kindness in contributing to the fine breakfast we had at my brother's on Thursday.

We found everything delicious -- and to you, especially, we send our thanks for the wonderful salt-free bread and butter.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Mrs. Anna Lexa,
812 North I Street,
Tacoma, Washington.

Enroute to Washington,

Dear Mrs. Hagen:

Mrs. Eisenhower and I enjoyed meeting you greatly, and appreciated the help that you gave to Lucy in preparation for our visit to Tacoma on Wednesday night.

My secretary will send you, after we return to Washington, that promised picture.

With best wishes to you and Colonel Hagen, and again many thanks,

Sincerely,

/s/ Dwight D. Eisenhower

P.S. I'm more than flattered that you want a picture -- it will be on the road before you can change your mind!

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Lucy and Ed:

As an harrassed, but younger, brother,
I want to send you a "bread and butter" note,
even if it must be short.

It was wonderful to spend the night in your home, away from all the clamor that attends such a trip as this.

Many thanks for everything.

As ever,

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Eisenhower,
Puget Sound Bank Building,
Tacoma, Washington

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Mr. Mayor:

I am indebted to you for so many courtesies in connection with my Portland visit that I am somewhat at a loss for words to express my true appreciation.

Thank you for your telegram of welcome to the "City of Roses"; for coming to meet me at the airport; for the superb cooperation accorded the members of my staff by the Police and other City Departments; and for many other kindnesses.

I would like by some miracle to thank all the wonderful people of Portland who came out to greet Mrs. Eisenhower and me. Failing that -- despite this marvelous age of communication -- I can only thank you, as their Mayor, for what was for us a most heartwarming welcome to your city.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

The Honorable Fred L. Peterson,
Mayor of the City of Portland,
Portland, Oregon.

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Governor Smith:

Again I want to thank you, and the people of Oregon, for the heartwarming reception we received in Portland. Also, I am mindful of the fine cooperation extended to me and the members of my staff by your associates in the State Government, particularly in helping us with traffic problems.

Good luck to you -- I shall eagerly look forward to your re-election as Governor of Oregon.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

The Honorable Elmo Smith,
Governor of the State of Oregon,
Salem, Oregon.

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Arthur:

Quite aside from the pleasure of seeing you and Mrs. Langlie again -- and my fervent hope that come next year we will have you as neighbors -- I want to thank you, in your official capacity as Governor of the State of Washington, for the many courtesies extended to us by your associates and state officials.

Also -- I want again to tell you how much I enjoyed the warm reception and fine hospitality given us by the fine citizens of your State.

With warm regard,

As ever,

The Honorable Arthur B. Langlie,
Governor of the State of Washington,
Olympia, Washington.

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Harry:

As I hope your brother told you, I sent out scouts to try to find you at the Hollywood Bowl last night. They were unsuccessful, and so I missed the pleasure of a brief chat with you.

Thank you for the message that greeted us on our arrival -- and particularly, for your admonition to dress warmly. We did -- and were very comfortable.

It is needless for me to add that I greatly appreciate your and Jack's support in this current campaign -- as I have, of course, so often in the past.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

THE DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LIBRARY

Dear Mr. Lyons:

I was distressed to learn that you were a "casualty" of our Washington State visit and that we had to leave you in the hospital in Tacoma. I sincerely trust that your knee is not too painful and that you will soon be back with us on your regular assignment.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

Mr. James Lyons,
Tacoma General Hospital,
Tacoma, Washington.

Dear Mrs. Fowler:

Mrs. Eisenhower and I were greatly intrigued with the idea that the friends of Lucy and Ed all contributed to the magnificent breakfast that we had in Tacoma on Thursday.

We join in thanks to you for your contribution of coffee cake and pear preserves (which were delicious, I assure you).

With many thanks and best wishes,

Sincerely,

Mrs. James G. Fowler,
Lakeside Country Club,
Tacoma, Washington.

Enroute to Washington,
October 20, 1956.

Dear Paul:

I want to salute you and the Helms Athletic Foundation on this twentieth anniversary of the fine organization that you founded for the purpose of inspiring young Americans to keep themselves physically fit through participation in athletics.

From our many conversations I know of the warm concern that led you to establish this splendid project, which has done so much good for thousands of young Americans through elementary school, high school and college ages, as well as amateur and professional athletes past those years.

I know, too, that the Foundation has done much to foster international good will by aiding the International Olympic Committee and by honoring outstanding athletes of every continent through awards of its World Sports Trophy.

I send you best wishes for the Foundation's continued inspiration to American youth in the field of athletics, and to express again my own and the nation's appreciation of the great and far-reaching good that your efforts have achieved.

With warm personal regard,

Sincerely,

Dear Arthur:

Of course I am glad that, after weighing available evidence, you could point a finger at this Administration.

I was up early enough this morning to read your article carefully before I start off on my Western trip, leaving here at 8:40. In listing some of the things on which you disagreed with me, I have the feeling that one of us is laboring under some misunderstanding.

When this campaign is out of the way -- and especially if I am to continue in this position -- I hope you will come down some day before the first of the year and spend a couple hours with me. I should like to get the reasons lying behind some of your judgments.

With warm regard,

As ever,

Dear Michael:

It seems that every time I hear of "Young Republicans" or "Youth" or "Citizens" doing any campaign work around this town, your name comes prominently into the picture. Also, your family tells me that you are working night and day on all sixteen cylinders to assure the extension of this Administration in office. I want you to know that I am personally grateful for all the work you are doing, because it demonstrates your faith in the kind of government that we are trying to give the country.

It occurs to me that because of this work you are taken away from your charming bride more than you should be, so along with this note, I am sending a little bunch of flowers for her as my apology for whatever responsibility I bear in her temporary "widowhood."

As ever,

Dear Al:

I really can't tell you -- especially in the harrassed condition in which I find myself -- how much I like the little, and well equipped, paint box that you and Grace sent me to celebrate the unbecoming business of having a sixty-sixth birthday anniversary. The paint box is a wonderful gadget -- provided you will also guarantee the leisure time to enjoy it. And, of course, I look forward at all such occasions to one of Grace's accompanying poems.

To both of you, my warmest thanks and affectionate regard,

As ever,

General Alfred M. Gruenther,
SHAPE,
APO #55,
c/o Postmaster,
New York.

October 14, 1956

Dear Jack:

I know that you approach your retirement from the United States Air Force with mixed emotions, as would any man so long dedicated to the service of his country. Certainly you can look back with pride upon a splendid record, just as you look forward to many well deserved years of happiness and leisure.

During your entire career, you have brought distinction and honor to the country and to your branch of the Armed Forces. For that, many citizens are grateful. I have, of course, a more personal indebtedness. During the summers that I combined work and recreation in Denver, you graciously put the facilities of Lowry Air Force Base at my disposal, and in every way possible assisted me, and the small White House staff travelling with me, in the problems that constantly occur in this office. Your courtesy and help in every matter will always be remembered and appreciated by Mrs. Eisenhower, the members of my staff, and by me.

I salute you as a fine officer, and send to you and Betty affectionate greetings and warm personal regard.

Sincerely,

Major General John T. Sprague
Commander
Lowry Air Force Base
Denver, Colorado

October 14, 1956.

Dear Major Dineen:

Someone told me the other day that you were now living in the Los Angeles area and that, unfortunately, you were bothered with a bad arthritic condition. I am writing this note on the assumption that you are the same "Jim Dineen" who was then a Captain of a Company in the Seventh Illinois Infantry when we were on the border together.

I am terribly sorry to hear of your illness, and I pray that the new drugs are being helpful to you.

With best wishes for an early improvement in your health,

Sincerely,

Major James Dineen,
c/o Mrs. Dineen, French Room,
Bullock's Wilshire,
Los Angeles, California.

Dear Bill:

Mamie and I are delighted with the handsome eagle -- and can't wait until we install him on the barn. We all ought to have some kind of a launching ceremony.

All that will have to wait until we get over the hump. But please know that, inadequate as are these hurried words of thanks, I am truly grateful to you, every minute of every day.

With warm regard,

As ever,

P.S. Thanks for your birthday telegram, too.

Dear Sig:

From the tenor of the telegrams and messages we have received here this morning, your idea about "Citizens Ask the President" was a terrific success. I send you herewith copies of the telegrams that we received early this morning -- I know you will be pleased.

It occurs to me that such a program might be a very fine thing for Dick Nixon, since one of the criticisms about him is that he does not like and understand people. The very mechanics of such a program ought to correct this impression.

Won't you please congratulate all your people who worked on the program?

With warm regard,

As ever,

Mr. Sigurd S. Larmon,
285 Madison Avenue,
New York, New York.

October 13, 1956.

GOVERNOR ADAMS

The President suggested that you read, the political experts read (not that you are not the top p. e.) and that all the speech writers read the telegrams that came in early this morning as a result of the "Citizens Ask the President." Art Minnich says he can supply copies.

Ann

October 13, 1956.

Dear Len:

Herewith copies of telegrams received this morning. Careful reading indicates that the type of program we put on last evening has a great appeal. It might be a good idea to use another half hour of your television time in the same way. For example, Nixon might do a lot of good for us on such a program.

Everyone who heard the first part of Larson's speech last night was absolutely enthusiastic about it and was bitterly disappointed that it was cut off the air in the middle. I do not see how the "Citizens" group made the mistake of inviting me in at a time when it was bound to interfere with that talk on television. It was a bad waste of money.

I suggest that we have Larson give the identical speech again before some meeting where he can get it all off. I have already had one Democrat for Eisenhower write in and ask me for a number of copies of the talk, which he wants to distribute. You might think of doing this also.

As ever,

Mr. Leonard W. Hall,
Republican National Committee,
1625 Eye Street, N. W.,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Foster:

Thank you for your note. Perhaps it is just as well that when we are together our talk must be of Suez or Morocco or South Vietnam. Because I assure you that I am even more tongue-tied than you (and sometimes I blame my inadequacy on my Germanic origin) in trying to tell you the rewards I have received from our association.

At any rate, much appreciation and warm personal regard,

As ever,

The Honorable John Foster Dulles
The Secretary of State
Washington, D. C.

PERSONAL

Dear Mr. O'Malley:

I must say that the way the Yankee pitchers were going the last four days, it didn't seem that they could have been beaten by a team made up of all the "immortals" of the game. Nevertheless, I was hopeful up to the very last that the Dodgers would rally.

One of the men that I felt really badly about was Don Newcombe. With a record of twenty-seven wins in the season -- a record that did so much to bring your team into the Series, it was a pity that he could not come through with a sparkling game during those seven days.

I have written him a little note, which I enclose herewith in an unsealed envelope. It is just possible that he might be the kind that does not like an expression of friendly interest in such circumstances. Consequently, I request that you read the enclosed note and then use your own judgment as to whether or not to deliver it. By no means would I want to remind him of something that he possibly may be trying to forget.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

The United States Library of Congress

Mr. Walter O'Malley,

Dear Don:

Hard luck is something that no one in the world can explain. Every athlete in every sport in the world knows that some days things just don't break right.

I think I know how much you wanted to win a World Series game; I for one was pulling for you. But I suggest that when you think over this past season, you think of the twenty-seven games you won that were so important in bringing Brooklyn into the World Series.

Good luck in Japan!

Sincerely,

Mr. Don Newcombe,
The Brooklyn Dodgers.

Dear Ed:

It occurs to me that my trip to the Northwest could possibly create some embarrassing moments growing out of the possibility that you still hold a grudge against Governor Langlie with respect to the nomination of Mr. Hamley to the Federal Court. Of course if you bear a grudge, it should be against me -- no one else.

Under present plans I shall meet and talk with Governor Langlie while I am in Seattle. I understand he is not coming to Tacoma. However, while we are in Seattle, it is altogether likely that you, the Governor and I may be together either in private or in public. Should you feel any embarrassment about this possibility, I can of course arrange that it does not happen. However, I do hope that you have no really strong personal feelings in this matter and that you will find no difficulty being cordial to the Governor while he is with us.

I write you thus frankly because, if you have any reservations about it, I should carefully lay out plans so that the two of you do not meet.

I trust that the addition of Mamie and her companion to the party will not inconvenience you and Lucy materially. As to the sergeant who looks after my things, if he could stay in the apartment over the garage, as you mentioned to Tom Stephens, that would be wonderful. However, if you need that space, Sergeant Woodward can always room downtown for the night and be back early in the morning. I am anxious to cause you the least possible bother.

My love to Lucy, and to Janis and her family.

As ever,

Mr. Edgar N. Eisenhower

Dear Helen:

When you dropped in to my office this morning, I found myself completely unable to express to you my true feelings concerning the campaign work you are now doing. It is touching -- it is almost overwhelming -- to realize how fully you are giving of your time and of yourself to make sure that this Administration shall continue to direct the governmental affairs of America for the next four years. You could not possibly pay a greater compliment to my associates on the Cabinet, the other individuals holding appointive positions in the Executive Department, the Republicans in Congress and myself.

All this I should like to have said to you, but with a Germanic background and therefore tongue-tied when I am deeply touched, I just didn't seem to be able to get it over.

So -- after all this -- I do thank you.

Sincerely,

Miss Helen Hayes,
Nyack,

Dear Mr. Hendrickson:

I have read with interest your long letter of October second. I read with special attention your comments on the political situation both in Ohio and New Jersey.

As you say, the "political bug" seems to be an indestructible thing once it really gets into a man's blood. While I feel certain that I have never fallen a victim to this particular germ, I do realize that it is very prevalent among most people who started their political careers younger than I did.

However, you yourself pointed out how satisfied Tom Dewey seems to be in his present work in civil life. Beyond this, he is still doing very valuable and interesting work in the political field. I am quite sure we have no more effective political speaker in the Republican stable than he is. In addition, he retains a very great influence in the state and national circles of the Party. I merely point this out so that no matter what your brother finally decides to do, he does not need to desert completely political activities.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

Mr. Dan Hendrickson,
National Cash Register Company,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dear Sergeant Moaney:

I know you realize that Mrs. Eisenhower and I have the deepest sympathy for you in the loss of your father.

It occurs to me that with the hospital bills and the other expenses, this may be a quite difficult time for your mother. I should like to feel that I could help her a little, and I enclose with this letter a present which I hope you will please give to her with the assurance that Mrs. Eisenhower and I are thinking of her in her sorrow.

This note is being brought to you by Colonel Schuls, who will represent me at the funeral, assuming that you have no objections.

Sincerely,

Sergeant John Moaney

Dear Frank:

Thank you very much for the good wishes you extend from Louise and yourself for my birthday anniversary. Personally, I would prefer the whole matter be ignored!

I am a little astonished by your "news" that I am scheduled to speak in Orlando. I would like to come to Florida sometime during the next four weeks, but at present I am not at all sure that such a thing is possible. If I do manage such a trip, I shall of course look forward to seeing you -- and I appreciate your foresight in sending me a list of my former Service friends who live in your vicinity.

Meantime, I assure you that I agree thoroughly that Mamie is the star of the political "show." She does a wonderful job.

Dear Walter:

Thanks for your suggestion. Actually, I think it is traditional for the candidates of both parties to make their final appeal to the voters, on the night before election, not on a partisan basis, but as an appeal to the voters to get out the vote, regardless of party.

With affectionate regard to Pauline, and all the best to yourself,

As ever,

P.S. In 1952 I appeared on television twice. Once was a typical political speech in the Boston Garden. The other was the last several minutes just before midnight when I appeared, together with Mamie and the Nixons. At that time I contented myself merely with asking people to vote and reminding them that they had serious questions to answer.

Mr. Walter Hoving
Chairman of the Board
Tiffany and Company
Fifth Avenue and 57th Street
New York 22, New York

Pre-press conference briefing,
October 11, 1956.

Statement on drought situation will be released, summing up what is being done (more money for hay and seed, subsidizing grain, loan for Mexican cattle, ask railroads to cut freight rates, President will go to area after the election).

Money to Tito - deadline October 16th. Intensive study taking into account recent information, intelligence we have on the world situation. Decision will be sent to the Congress on October sixteenth. President said informally that the answer just had to be in the infirmative, pointing out that if it were not, all the exchange students from Yugoslavia would be without money and the Federal government without the funds to help them.

The 2-1/2 little Russian girl who is supposed to have been kidnapped by her father, and is now in London, on her way to Russia. Very complicated story, but the President will say that we have asked the British government to see if there is some way to detain the little girl in London until proceedings can be started to try to get her returned to the United States. The little girl is an American citizen. There is some reason to suspect that the father is afraid for the life of the rest of the members of his family, now in Russia. President will also say that it is difficult to determine where the right is in this case.

Medical checkup. President may be asked when he plans his; may be reference to Stevenson report issued yesterday.

Roscoe Drummond's open letter on the school situation. It asks that the President ask members of his party who are running for Congress how they would feel on supporting the school construction bill. The President said he could not tell in what manner a bill will come to the Congress. President said, in going back to the history of the school construction bill in the last Congress, that Charlie Halleck came to see him and said that a number of his people had said that they felt if they should vote against the Powell Amendment, they would be voting against the Constitution of the United States. President had replied that he himself considered the two things separately, but if a man felt like that, he should not vote against the Constitution.

Adams said Drummond had originally suggested we poll the candidates on this matter, but said that quite realistically candidates do not like to commit themselves on such things during an election campaign.

President will say that if he is here during the next session of Congress, every influence he has will be exerted (to get the school program enacted). Our program is based on distribution of Federal funds according to need and effort, and in addition to those units already planned. Persons suggested a reference to the fact that the "storekeepers" on the Hill take the credit for every good measure, and no responsibility for failure of any good measure.

National Physically Handicapped Week. Some 66 thousand people have been restored to productive employment in this country -- a good record.

Voting of youth of 18 and over. President will refer again to the fact that in his opinion if people are old enough to fight they are old enough to vote. He may mention obvious impact of his visits on youth groups, he may make a speech on urging young people to vote - bipartisan. They have more of a stock in the future than any of the others of us.

Basic differences of the party. President is fully prepared to answer.

Alaskan elections. President will say that is purely local. The President said in passing that "This is what I ought to say: Alaska is not a territory, they are a complete dependency -- there wouldn't be 1/10 of the people there that there are, if it weren't for Federal aid."

Gore Committee investigation. "This is one of the things that ought to be on the record."

Atoms for Peace and Nuclear Power Issue. Lewis Strauss made speech last night which reflects fully the Administration point of view -- that while the Democrats want Federal government to do everything in that field, we want it to be done by private companies, with state participation.

Bomb Tests and Draft. President has said all he is going to say on the subject.

Big Business and Small Business. Extensive statement is being prepared which will report in detail what has taken place.

Right to work laws. Difficult subject. If question refers to "unfair right to work laws" President will say of course he is against anything unfair. Adams suggested that his answer be as general as possible -- it is a very emotional issue.

Question will be asked about Anti-American feeling being generated by political charge and counter charge on foreign affairs.

Loan to Israel. Mission to study matter is soon to be dispatched to Israel. Present request was rejected by Export-Import Bank on grounds not sufficiently sound.

McKeon Sentence. Sentence of dishonorable discharge was suspended, 30 dollars less pay was cut out because of family, 9 months confinement was reduced to 3 months (of which 2 served), and he was reduced to private. Secretary Thomas worked hard on this decision, which was his personal decision. President will say there is no more conscientious, dedicated man in the Administration and that he backs him up completely.

Monday - pushing of button to start work on two dam projects -- Glen Canyon and Flaming Gorge. President was simply reminded.

Vatican Representative. President said the question has never become an active one since he has been here, and he has not discussed it with State. It was more active in '52. What the President said then was any such action would be fatal to our connection with the Vatican unless the action was approved by the people. Consequently, to try to put it through would do great damage. He added so far as he was concerned, he thought it would be a good thing.

Minimum Wage. If another question comes along on this, President will refer to statement of last week, on which he stands.

Plant of letters to New York Insurance people was brought to the President's attention.

Veterans' Administration has reactivated its direct loan programs -- makes mortgage money a little easier.

Dear Mr. Evans:

Your letters of the third and the sixth arrived on my desk at approximately the same time. I would most certainly love to play a game of golf with you at the time and place you suggest, but the combination of official work and political preoccupation completely precludes the possibility.

I agree with what you say about caddies and about outdoor life. Moreover, I am not worried too much about the election. I am quite ready to abide by America's decision -- whatever it is -- with no personal resentment whatsoever. Of course I hope that caddies prefer me to my rival candidate. In any event, I promise you that I am going to renew my friendship with a lot of caddies as quickly as this campaign is out of the way.

Thank you for your most thoughtful suggestion -- and possibly we can get together some time after the election for a round.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE

ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE

Herewith is a copy of a note from the President of Panama that I should like for you to read.

As you know, I have in the past been completely sympathetic with some of Panama's complaints as to our methods and practices of operation in the Canal Zone.

Just what President de la Guardia had in mind when he said he had "almost despaired as to the present and future of our relations," I do not know. I just think there is possibly here a problem with which the State Department should keep continuous and intimate touch.

Dear Nelson:

Thank you for your report on your impressions during the inauguration of President de la Guardia of Panama. I regret particularly that the attitude of the Arias Government toward the United States seemed to you to verge on the unfriendly. We have certainly tried to be generous and understanding in every way with them -- from expediting shipments of Salk vaccine to the ever present and annoying problems of Canal cooperation.

I personally shall do everything in my power to see that President de la Guardia's intrinsic respect for the "fair play" policies of our country is maintained and strengthened.

I hope I shall see you soon. Meantime, my gratitude to you for representing me at the inauguration, and warm personal regard.

It is a noteworthy event when anybody achieves perfection in anything. It has been so long since anyone pitched a perfect Big League game that I have to go back to my generation of ball players to recall such a thing -- and that is truly a long time ago.

Dear Mr. Johnson:

The Postmaster General has shared with me your suggestion that speakers in the campaign emphasize the Administration's expanded public health program.

I am inclined to agree that the point has been somewhat neglected, and I am, of course, grateful that you, as an officer of the National Cancer Society, feel that the present Administration has been particularly helpful to your organization. Certainly we are dedicated to do everything that the Federal Government can and should do to assist in research against the diseases that trouble mankind.

I shall pass your ideas along to the various campaign speakers -- and I hope that, in one or more of my own future talks, I can find a place to stress the matter.

With my thanks for taking the trouble to call this point to our attention, and best wishes,

Dear Dr. Elson:

Now you are turning into a politician -- and a good phrase-maker. I hope to incorporate both your ideas and the particular phrase, "It was nonsense because it does not make good sense," into some future talk.

Many thanks for your note.

My dear Bishop Sherrill:

I appreciate very much your personal letter of October fifth.

Actually, not being a communicant of the Episcopal Church, I was in some doubt as to the appropriateness of my participating in Communion, even though the Church is an All-Faith Chapel and the University Chaplain, who assisted, is not an Episcopalian. However, my own doubts in this regard were set at rest by the Episcopal Minister who presided. He personally invited the participation of all present who were communicants of any Christian faith. Further, I was told that the majority of the congregation, that morning, was non-Episcopalian.

Nevertheless, if my action should have offended any member of your Church, I naturally regret it. But I am reassured by the views which you express and am grateful that you wanted to write as you did.

Sincerely,

Dear Herbert:

As you could tell from my telephone conversation, I have not any very definite views of what I might do either now or in the future in order to prevent the Suez business from getting out of hand. Some thoughts such as the following occur to me:

(a). Assuming that Foster finds the going very sticky at the UN, he might think it helpful if I should issue a White House statement outlining our position and detailing our step-by-step moves to keep the peace. The statement might also contain a frank warning that the United States will not support a war or warlike moves in the Suez area. It would insist that negotiations must be continued until a peaceful but just solution is reached -- regardless of how long is takes.

(b). Without direct reference to the Suez, we might make public some of the results of studies conducted under the leadership of ODM concerning the world's future need for big tankers. If we should conclude to go ahead with the construction of some of these (approximately sixty thousand tons) regardless of the Suez affair, the announcement of our intention might have a calming effect.

(c). Of course the British and the French are bitterly against building up Nasser. This concern has been rather overtaken by events since he has already become, mostly as a result of this quarrel, a world figure. If therefore, we can think of any plan that we could accept, even though it falls somewhat short of the detailed requirements listed by Britain and France, we might through some clandestine means urge Nasser to make an appropriate public offer. Such action ought to start negotiations toward a peaceful settlement.

(d). Should we be any more specific in our communications with Nehru in the hope that he could influence Nasser into negotiations?

(e). Could the Organization of American States serve any useful purpose now or in the future -- such as a joint resolution or the like?

(f). I assume that we are secretly keeping our communications with the oil-producing Arab States, in order to get their influence somewhat on our side.

(g). A more spectacular thing might be for me to invite a number of nations to a conference, including most of the eighteen who agreed upon the "London Plan" as well as India, Egypt, Israel and possibly Saudi Arabia.

As you know, I am immersed in the sum total of affairs necessitated by governmental and political work. None of the items in this list has been deeply studied; I send it to you more as a clear indication of my readiness to participate in any way in which I can be helpful than as a series of suggestions. Dear Dr. Rodes:

Of course I am very highly complimented by the proposal to confer on me in absentia an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from Bradley University.

It has always been my thought that the conferring of a degree by a University bestows on the recipient a very significant honor which, to be fully meaningful, practically compels his presence at the moment. While I concede that there might be exceptions to a rule of this sort, I truly would prefer to hope that I may one day be present to accept personally Bradley's honorary Doctorate than to receive it in absentia. If perhaps the Faculty and Board of Trustees of the University would wish at some future opportunity to renew their very kind invitation, I would be glad to consider it again.

I cannot close without repeating to you my deep appreciation both of the honor you have suggested and of your courtesy in allowing me to speak at the Bradley University Field House last month.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

P.S. Thank you for sending me the current issue of "The Bradley Scout." The President of Bradley need in no way be ashamed of his abilities as a reporter -- on the contrary, I thought the article was excellent.

Dr. Harold P. Rodes
President
Bradley University

October 7, 1956.

Dear Tom:

I can't tell you how complimented I am that you and Mary went to the trouble of changing your official residence in order to cast your votes in the coming election for the present Administration. The confidence and support of my old friends of military days encourages me more than you could possibly suspect.

With affectionate regard to you both, in which Mamie joins,

Sincerely,

Ike E.

P.S. Your letter gave me my first information that you live in this area. One of these days I hope we can meet.

October 7, 1956.

Dear Milton:

I have read the front page editorial in the Sunday Sun, as you suggested. If I knew him and should meet him, I would like to say this to the writer:

"I am grateful for the keen perception you have brought to the analysis of my hopes and efforts in the management of national affairs. From the words, 'So we come to the real issue ...' midway of the first column of your editorial, to the sentence ending '...with equal opportunity under the law' in the second, you have more clearly discerned and more accurately than any one else outlined my philosophy of our government's proper relationship to the individual and to the nation's economy.

"If anything at all is omitted, it is the added truth that the middle way is often difficult to maintain; that a turn to moderation and enduring principles can in itself be a revolution inciting the hatred and enmity of both extremes. You hinted at this when you said that this Administration flipped a page of history. What you did not say was that an extremist frequently attacks the moderate more savagely than he does his opposing extremist; he seemingly is afraid of any effort to incite the good common sense of the public.

"Despite this one, unimportant, observation, your editorial did more to give me the feeling of worthwhileness in the work I've personally undertaken than has anything else I've read. Thank you, from my heart."

So, of course, I thank you for bringing the piece to my attention.

As ever,

Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower.

EISENHOWER LIBRARY

October 5, 1956.

Dear Harold:

I read with interest the draft of the speech you are giving in Boston today -- and I think it will serve as a fine basic paper for the other speeches you are planning to give. I have no suggestions whatsoever to make.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

The Honorable Harold E. Stassen,
The White House,
Washington, D.C.

Pre-press conference briefing
October 5, 1956.

The President was looking over statement on H-bomb tests. He said that the statement was too long, that he felt an argument was weakened if it took so many words to defend it. He also criticized it that it was being issued by him, as President, yet he was talking about the "opposition party candidate." He also objected to quoting Senator Kefauver. He asked if it were true that the five Chiefs of Staff were unanimously against eliminating the draft (this about another statement also in preparation).

Foreign Affairs.

Suez. If Suez comes up, President will say that Dulles is in New York meeting with the Foreign Ministers and he does not want to make further statements at the present time. Will reaffirm American desire for peaceful settlement.

Yugoslavia loan. Will say that he has to make decision by October 16. President queried on how a recommendation that he might make would be delivered to Congress, since they are not in session now (he was asking about the mechanics of the delivery of the recommendation).

Arab-Jordan - refer to UN

Israel - President asked if he could hint that economic help might be given to Israel. They have asked for it; they don't want military help. Export-Import bank is coming up with concrete suggestions. Loan not very sound, but may be given.

Political questions.

President was reminded of the political trips that have been announced: Pittsburg, Pacific Coast, Minneapolis-St. Paul; New York has been hinted at but not definitely announced. Many places are under consideration. As soon as anything is decided, announcement will be made.

President questioned why he should go to the UN - which is still tentative. If pact is signed which would be culmination of speech he made before the UN in 1953 - he would say that his plan was no longer a hope but a reality. Admiral Strauss suggested he could tell what has happened in the meantime.

President queried if we were ~~giving~~ helping countries build power reactors in places where they would prove excessively expensive to operate. Admiral Strauss said in many places the plants are being built as cheaply as in the United States and that operation will not be excessive. He pointed out that in the United States power was comparatively cheap, in most other countries it is much more expensive.

Vice President. President will say that he discussed yesterday with the Vice President his trip and compared notes. President said that the Vice President was one man who is not asking him to expand his schedule.

Alaska. There is an election on Tuesday, which the Republicans will undoubtedly lose. President said he had made his position on Alaskan statehood clear time and again. Democrats will point to loss of Alaska as being because Republicans have not seen to it that statehoodhas been achieved.

Stevenson - Harlem . President will tie in any query on record on civil rights with report presented this morning by Committee on Government Contracts. Stevenson's crack about the President's testimony on segregation in the Army was brought up. It was taken out of context. President will suggest entire testimony be read.

Labor. Average hourly payment of factory workers in September is $2 per hour, weekly $85. Weekly and hourly at an all time high.

Tight money . Expected that money will be made freer in the next two weeks. President read suggestion given him by Arthur Burns. See files. Adams suggested that this would come up in the context of whether the President was for big business to the detriment of little business. Said the President had an excellent record in at least three fields in making facilities for credit available to "ltittle people." Today the Small Business Administration is swamped with requests for loans. It is doing a good job. Small Business Administration today is helping more people to get credit facilities through local banks than ever before in history. We have a story to tell about our interest and concern for the little people.

School Construction. Speaker Rayburn tried to "fuzz" up the President's remarks at Lexington. Important thing is that he wants his five year program now in 4 years.

Stevenson. President reminded of his remark that people ought to vote for the Party rather than the individual.

Right to work laws. Entirely a state matter. President said of course what labor wants is to have us enact a Federal law. President said it would be awfully difficult for him to accept any theory that the man has to belong to an association to hold a job. Mitchell has more or less supported Federal domination in this field.

Peace. Stress whenever possible.

Supreme Court. Justice Brennan. Had followed out what he said was being done, this man had an excellent record, Judge Vanderbilt, for whom the President has the highest opinion and greatest respect, recommended him highly, and he was thoroughly and unqualifiedly accepted by the American Bar Association.

Federal Trade Commission. President simply was reminded that he had appointed Ed Tait, and that the man who was not reappointed, Lowell Mason, was trying to kick up some sort of a storm about it.

Federal Judgeships. Press has reported that a Negro, A. Scoville Richardson, is under consideration for a Federal judgeship in St. Louis. Brownell is coming in to talk to the President about it. President said he was all for the idea, but felt that St. Louis was a little too far "south" to accept such an appointment at this time.

Ed Foote. President was reminded of the item in local papers that his wife had traded in certain securities, about which he might have had knowledge.

Dear Mr. O'Malley:

Again I want to tell you how much I enjoyed my first World Series game. I am truly indebted to you for providing many of the ingredients that combined to make what was a memorable afternoon. It was a pleasure to be in Brooklyn, to meet the members of both teams, and to see a game of baseball at its very finest.

I am especially appreciative of the fact that you gave up your own box to accommodate me and the members of my party. I know that the members of the Cabinet and the White House Staff join my son and me in deep gratitude for your generosity in giving us all such a perfect afternoon.

Won't you please tell each of the Dodgers of my admiration of their splendid performance and convey to them my congratulations on winning the first game of the series?

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Mr. Walter O'Malley

Dear Bimbo

I am delighted that you and Mrs. Dempsey had an opportunity to visit at Culsean. My wife and I are devoted to all the people there and in the two visits we have been able to make, we encountered nothing but warm hospitality throughout the countryside. One of the real penalties in my present situation is that I must forego, for whatever time I occupy this position, a return to that lovely spot.

Please convey my greetings to your wife, and, of course, all the best to yourself.

Sincerely

Dear Al:

I have your two notes of the thirtieth. As to the Italian post, I am glad to have the warning about our friend from New York. Actually, the job has been offered to someone from the West Coast, who is still considering the matter.

Please keep me posted on your personal plans; you know that I have more than a passing interest in your location after you return to this country!

Between official work, campaign trips, speeches -- and my first world series game -- I haven't stopped revolving in weeks. However, I am happy to report that Jim Hagerty paid me off as a result of his ill-advised and completely biased support of the Yankees!

Give my love to Grace and, as always, the best to yourself,

As ever,

October 2, 1956

Dear Walter:

Many thanks for your letter of September twenty-fourth, bringing me up to date on your discussions with the Foreign Ministers of the NATO Governments and with Sir Winston Churchill, General Gruenther and Lord Ismay. It is good to know that U. S. position concerning improvement and strengthening of NATO cooperation has been well received. I am encouraged by your impression that constructive results are likely to be achieved, especially in regard to closer consultation in the political field and to the settlement of NATO disputes within the family. Such successes as we shall achieve along these lines will, I am confident, be due in no small part to your effective efforts and leadership. You may be sure that I shall be prepared to do whatever is possible to maintain the present favorable atmosphere of cooperation in NATO.

Foster has kept me informed of your meetings with the NATO delegations and with your travels subsequent to leaving Paris. I am looking forward to hearing from you again soon on the results of your discussions at Bonn and Rome.

With warm personal regard,

Sincerely,

Dwight D. Eisenhower

Amb. Lodge (from N.Y.)
Foster Dulles suggested he call President, & give him first-hand flavor of reaction there. He said that never has there been such a tremendous acclaim for the President's policy. Absolutely spectacular.

Amb. Urrutia of Colombia (a very shrewd fellow) reported that 21 Latin American Republics were behind the President as never have they been before.

The Secretary General (fine man) handed Lodge a note: "This is one of the darkest days in post-war times. Thank God you have played the way you have. This will win you many friends....."

Afro-Asian group (2/3 of U.S. population) had meeting & endorsed moral courage of the U.S.

Pakistan Under Secretary said that anybody who is an American citizen can be very proud.

Of the 6 British newspapermen, 5 disagreed with British plan.

One very staunch Democrat said, "I don't think I am for Stevenson any more."

A New Deal Democrat in the UN Secretariat (who has been there 11 years, & always looked at Lodge with jaundiced eye) said, "You make me proud to be an American."

The busboys, typists, elevator operators -- & all on that working level -- have been offering their congratulations.

The President said too bad this story couldn't be given to the press for all the United States to hear. But probably would embarrass the persons mentioned, especially the diplomats. President will discuss it with Jim Hagerty. Lodge said perhaps someone could very tactfully approach Amb. Urrutia, right here in Washington now.

WEDNESDAY, October 31, 1956.

9:47 Senator Knowland called the President from California. Wanted to know if he was safe to get onplane -- away from telephone 3-4 hours -- in case the President decided to call Congress back. President said yes, that Knowland should, however, keep in touch.

Knowland said he was shocked by actions of our allies.

The President said (and was here talking about the British) -- one reason we should not be too bitter -- it is difficult for us to put ourselves in their shoes. He said, "I think they (the British) made a bad error, from their own viewpoint. Parliament voted 270 to 218. I could not dream of committing this nation on such a vote." He went on to say "I am about to lose my British citizenship. I have done my best. I think it is the biggest error of our time, outside of losing China. I am afraid of what will happen. I expect heavy fighting today in the Gaza strip." But he said, "don't condemn the British too bitterly).

The President went on to say that probably he would make a report to the nation, either on political time or otherwise (said that the Congress was going to have to amend that law some day).

Knowland brought up the subject of UN. The resolution having been vetoed in the Security Council, the President said it should go to the General Assembly. He is anxious to keep ahead of the Soviets on this particular matter.

The President asked about the political situation. Knowland said that he thought the Presidential race was handily safe, but he was not certain of the Congress.

TELEPHONE CALLS
OCTOBER 30, 1956.

8:40 The President called the Secretary to ask if he was coming over to the White House this morning (at ten).

The Secretary reported that he had talked by phone with Cabot Lodge, who in turn had talked with the British representative to the UN, Mr. Dixon. Cabot Lodge had reported that while Dixon was normally an agreeable fellow, "last night it was as though a mask had fallen off, he was ugly and not smiling." When asked if Britain would live up tothe 1950 declaration, he said [redacted] Lodge was shocked by his attitude and tone.

Dulles said we would soon know the outcome of the UN negotations.

The President said that none of the newspapers seemed to look on the situation with the same urgency that the Administration does, but Dulles said that the President had probably read the early editions, that the later ones did report the thing more seriously.

Later 10:40. Cabot Lodge called Dulles, who was in the President's office. He said that Britain would go along with the resolution, if the US took out words about Jewish entry into Egypt and simply left in Palestine. After considerable discussion with the President, Dulles told Lodge to go ahead with the matter as originally proposed, with change of one word "against" Egypt to "in" Egypt.

Cabot said the French would not support the US in any circumstances. He said further he thought the French and British were both bluffing (Dulles does nc think so). Dulles reported that our information was that by this afternoon the British and French military units would have control of the Canal. Lodge said that the official newspaper of the Israel government says that "the western powers will thank us for restoring the Canal" to them.

11:36 Secy. Dulles called.

Secy. Dulles, from President's office, called Mr. Macomber at State. Said he's sending over a message from the President to Sir Anthony Eden: Mr. Dulles wants to send first a quick message to Aldrich to receive it. Suggests getting it off as quickly as possible; & to keep the wire clear for message to go through.

THE DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LIBRARY

3:40 Secy. Dulles.
(Did not hear beginning of conversation -- hew.)
Heard the President say, "No, I did not know that." Mr. Dulles said they are trying to get on the radio & pick it up.
President said that, because he sent Sir. Anthony a rather impatient message, he is now sending a short one simply to acknowledge his just received.
Dulles said the whole focus of this will be shifting in a few hours -- the Israelis have accomplished their mission. Then the problem will be how to handle the British-French business there.
Only thing President sees we can do is keep hands off. That after all, we will not fight them. Does not think we should call special session of our people to get money to help them out. President added that of course this is not a considered opinion -- but he just does not claim it before our people -- they are our friends & allies, & suddenly they put us in a hole & expect us to rescue them.
Mr. Dulles' feeling is that Eden will try to give impression that we have been kept informed. And President said perhaps that is the reason he sent this telegram.
Dulles not sure that telegram is relevant. He thinks there will be a shift from the Declaration of 1950.
The President wants him to know that we are a Government of honor, & we stick by it. Said he never stated any of this publicly, & as far as the President knew, he was just as earnest as we were.

PHONE CALLS, 10/30/56 -- 3

2:17 Secy. Dulles.

He will proceed on the UN matter at 3 o'clock today. Will have their resolution then. British & French have asked that action should be suspended until consideration could be given to the Eden proposals. But they propose to go ahead, & state that 2 items (Israeli invasion; & Suez Canal) should be kept separate & distinct.

Dulles said they gave a 12-hour ultimatum to Egypt that is about as crude & brutal as anything he has ever seen. He does not think there is much use in studying it. Said that of course by tomorrow they will be in.

The President asked, aren't they partially in now? Mr. Dulles did not know, but thinks not yet. They gave this 12-hour ultimatum apparently at noon.

President asked why they suggest waiting. Dulles said their reason is that Eden has made an important speech, & they want us to wait until we study it. The President just now received the ultimatum -- so Mr. Dulles read his copy aloud. The President agreed that it was pretty rough. Dulles said it is utterly unacceptable.

President thinks they would expect the Russians to be in on this. Asked where is Egypt going to turn?

Mr. Dulles said he did not know, but agreed with President on idea of the Russians. He again said he thinks we should push ahead on our resolution.

President wondered how the request came to us. Dulles replied that Dixon gave it to Lodge in N. Y.; & they also had message from the French Embassy here suggesting we defer action on our matter today.

If we push it now, President asked, don't we tend to confuse these 2 issues? Dulles replied, no, on the contrary. One would be armistice between Egypt & Israel. The Suez Canal is still on our agenda, & should be taken up under the other agenda item.

President said it is all right with him that they go ahead -- added that, after all, they haven't consulted with us on anything.

PHONE CALLS, 10/30/56 -- 4

3:00 Dulles called the President with suggested text of message to be sent to British and French and made public here. It referred to the undesirability of the ultimatum of 12 hours they have issued.

In one place it referred to an "earnest request" that they do not issueit because of the matter being before the UN. The President asked that the sentence be made "May I urge the unwisdom of taking this action at this time" ... in other words to save ourselves, if we could, from a complete slap in the face ... not to put it in the form of a prayer that would not be answered. Doesn't think it will make much difference either way. Deesn't think either country will pay any attention.

President asked if all the State Department agreed on it. Dulles said yes. Then the President said, "I think we almost have to (send the message). At least it establishes us before the Arab world as being no part of it (the invasion).

THE EISENHOWER LIBRARY

4:00 Dulles called the President about the Hagerty draft of statement to be released, said it was a little more complete than is necessary. President agreed. Dulles, after consultation with Hoover and Phleger, suggested that somewhere be worked in statement that we did not know about the ultimatum until after it was released by the press. President agreed.

4:20 President called and re-read him re-dictated statement, to which Dulles agreed. Wants text to phone to Cabot Lodge.

4:54 Secy. Dulles.
After Anthony Eden's 2nd explanatory cable that crossed our message, the President thinks he owes him an answer. (He said this is getting to be a sort of "trans-Atlantic essay contest.") He read draft letter.

Mr. Dulles said there is another thing, of course -- the great tragedy just when the whole Soviet fabric is collapsing, now the British & French are going to be doing the same thing over again. His thought is that President could add: "I am afraid we will be back in the same pasture as the Soviets in Hungary."

President will work it in, & will of course send it to Dulles for his final editing.

President just got 2nd message from Sir Anthony. Will rush a copy to State Dept. This one purports to be an explanation of what they did & why they did it, ending up finally, "Now you will wonder why, apart from the Security Council, we have acted so promptly....."

President said, whether or not we accept his line of reason or judgment or anything else, here at last he acts like he wants us to try to understand. President therefore suggests holding up statement.

Mr. Dulles said it has already gone to London & Paris, but of course we don't have to release it. It was read to them, over the cable.

President said it does no damage to let them have it, but suggests wiring them & urging greatest caution. President's feeling is that we should have had this message yesterday. Dulles' comment -- if we had had it yesterday, we might have stopped them.

President is concerned that if we let this go along until we are completely apart, where do we get against Communism? He thinks they have acted hastily, & thinks we must make something clear here -- but at the same time, cannot let them feel we are overboard to go.

Secy. Dulles will read message, & will call back.

5:30 Dr. Hauge.
re letter to Gaylord A. Saetre, & Minnesota candidates. President said one thing he has always been frightened of is intervening without some word of apology. Thought of adding: "If you do not deem it inappropriate for me to do so, I should like to express my convictions concerning the political campaign in your State & certain of the individuals standing for office." Dr. Hauge concurred.

TELEPHONE CALLS
October 29, 1956.

8:00 A.M. Secretary Dulles called the President. Said nothing had happened overnight with regard to the Israeli mobilization.

President asked if Dulles had read cable from Lawson concerning his conversation with Ben Gurion. President said it was interest; despite what seemed to be rationalizations on the part of Ben Gurion, Lawson felt definitely Ben Gurion was not talking frankly to him.

The President said at least things on both fronts --- Hungary and Israel -- seemed a little better this morning than last evening. Dulles replied that at least "we have gained 24 hours."

Dulles said he was wondering if it would be desirable to try to find occasion for Bohlen to bring to the attention of the Soviet Government at as high a level as possible, the statement he made in his Dallas speech, saying that he had made it with full approval of the President.

President agreed, and said it might be a good thing to try to draw Nehru into it -- cited letter that he had dictated to Dulles just a few minutes before -- that Nehru must have some feelings that perhaps he ought to strengthen his ties with the West, if some face-saving device could be found by which he could do so. Dulles had been thinking along same lines, and had dictated on plane coming back from Dallas something (directed toward the Soviets) of the same nature.

The President said that they might be willing to talk sense now more than at any time since Administration has been in power. Said approach might be that things are not going the way any of us want, better have a meeting that recognizes these points.

At this point President questioned Shepilov, but Dulles said he was pretty far down in the Soviet hierarchy.

Dulles said that undoubtedly there was a battle on in the Presidium -- some of the people probably would want to go back to the old Stalinistic policies -- but Dulles said, that was now too late. He said they were "up against a tough problem." The President agreed, and said we had to take advantage of that. Now is the time to talk (more) about reducing tensions in the world. Dulles agreed, but said we would have to be very careful not to do anything that would look to the satellite world as though we were selling them out.

The President of course agreed, said nothing could be done until present thing had settled down, but went back to Nehru and said that he might now be thinking about Soviet colonialism and imperialism in slightly different terms.

The President was leaving on political trip to Miami, Jacksonville and Richmond, and said that the Secretary could reach him within a matter of minutes at any time.

In his office, disuussion being held by Hoover, Murphy, Phleger & Rountree on question of evacuation. Substantial agreement reached that Dulles recommend we inaugurate the evacuation.
President asked by what means?
Dulles replied probably use commercial means as far as possible, & military or naval craft as necessary. President thought of troop ships, but added that we probably have no good ones out there.
Mr. Dulles said President's statement earlier today gives a good cover now for doing this. If we don't do it after that statement, & then things go wrong, then people will think we are very remiss.
President asked who they will take -- Dulles said Syria, Israel, Jordan & Egypt. In first instance, would take them to Rome or Athens; at that time, they would have choice of coming home or going to some other post. There are about 350 in Jordan; considerably larger number in Egypt (about 3,000); & 2 or 3 thousand in Israel.

President asked if Dulles thought that, by starting this, would we exacerbate the situation?
Dulles replied that he does not think so. It may lead to some anti-American demonstrations; & if the British strike, it will lead to inference that we knew about it. But he thinks it will not basically make the situation more serious.
President said our statement today would take care of that one, because obviously we don't know anything about the British.
Mr. Dulles asked if President got the information about the build-up around Cyprus -- 30 to 63 in the last 48 hours; the other country's transport had been increased from 3 to 21.
President said he just cannot believe Britain would be dragged into this.
Mr. Dulles said 2 important French ships have been moved to the Mediterranean

President said in sending this message, we said we would ask both Britain & France to do something -- have we taken any steps?
Mr. Dulles said he has just talked to French Ambassador & French Charge. They profess to know nothing about this at all. The Britisher said he had some information that they had acted to warn the Israeli against attacking Jordan. But, he said, their ignorance is almost a sign of a guilty conscience, in his opinion.

President's thought is to wait till morning, to see if there's an attack.
Asked when State proposed to issue this.
Mr. Dulles said today; because if there is an attack, it would really be too late afterwards.
President does not see why it would be too late. An attack would not mean a city occupied; the rights of neutrals ought to be respected.

Secy. Dulles mentioned Joint Chiefs of Staff position. Then President said okay, go ahead. Added that, of course, it will be a world-shocking thing. To which Dulles commented: "But not much more than your statement. I think that it will tend to reinforce your statement, perhaps. Of course the British & French have done this a long time ago. They have gotten all their people out."

The President said we probably can't expect to get any answer from Ben Gurion now.

On Dulles' draft speech for Dallas. While President has made a few little pencil notations, he thinks the general tone of it is very fine.
Only general suggestion: somewhere in early part, he should make some suggestion, to make it understood that when President says decisions have been reached, policies have been built, throughout the last 4 years, there has been a meeting of the minds that involved leaders from Congress, & their advice has always been sought on these important questions.
The President is aware that Mr. Dulles does bring this in at end of speech -- but feels he should start off by saying it.

Tidelands question -- seems we are at crossroads. Calling meeting of the 2 Depts. to straighten it out. They spoke without consulting, apparently. Brownell sorry that it doesn't help with President's immediate problem.

President said he's going ahead with something like this: "Eight years ago I publicly stated -- & 4 years ago at Houston I repeated -- my belief that these tidelands belong to the States out to the historic boundary. Subsequently, a law was passed on that basis. This Administration holds to this view, which in the case of Texas I consider to be 3 leagues."

President is going on what Foster Dulles told him today. Suggests Mr. Brownell call Dulles, to make sure he is not working on false assumption.

With reference to what Harold Stassen said in this morning's NSC meeting, President thought of this: That these people might not get such a hard time of it -- there was no possibility of Russian fear -- incorporate border states into NATO -- therefore with any such fear, of course would have to crush them quickly & completely. President's question is whether we should say we have no influence in those areas -- but does not know how it can be done. Might say "we enjoy same position."

President thought of this, with possibility of putting it in speech Mr. Dulles is preparing.

Dulles said Stassen, & a group of others, were over with him having a meeting, studying this. Hard to know how to handle . . Does not want to get into anything that looked as though "backstage talks" were going on. First British reaction is not to take it through the Security Council, but to General Assembly 2 or 3 weeks from now. But Dulles is not sure that will accomplish the purpose we have in mind.

(Mr. Dulles)

President asked if he/couldn't say, in his speech tomorrow night: "It is not that the Western world has any idea of influencing them. . . . . but if they could enjoy same freedom that is now Austria's. . . "

President working on Texas speech, on tidelands. Wondered what the law said. President thought title of States would extend to the State's boundaries. Mr. Brownell said that's exactly right. President would like to say he stands by the law -- Brownell said fine.
Mr. Brownell mentioned that President had said boundary of Texas is 10-1/2 miles out. Debate made it very clear, including statement by Daniel himself. If it were ever disputed, it would be up to the Courts to decide. Louisiana is similar case.
President said we agreed that the historic boundary of Texas was 3 leagues. Do we now have to go into Court to say just exactly how many miles? Mr. Brownell is going over that, to see just what position he should take. It is possible we may have to recommend legislation.
President's assumption on historic boundary has not changed since he made his first public utterances (in '47 ?) on it. Tried to have it put in form of a map, but that was rejected. Now in a sort of fuzz -- thinks Congress should fix it exactly.
Mr. Brownell said they discussed that yesterday; came to conclusion that if President said that now, Price Daniel & Lyndon Johnson would say he is all wet, is going back on his word, etc. Would not have the same reaction after this political business is over.
But President pointed out that he is going to Texas. With him, it is a perfectly clear-cut thing.
Mr. Brownell still feels President should not go into detail on it -- could create arguments among Daniel & the others.
They agreed that "opponent has toe-danced all around this."

The Secretary, going over draft of H-bomb statement, called the President. The President said: he did not want to criticize anyone in the document, he wanted it to be so factual as to be uninteresting. He emphasized that he did not want to publicly tie hands so that in the future could do nothing.

The Secretary said that he felt the Atomic Energy people, who are violently opposed to controls, were trying to slip in some arguments.

President said he wanted in statement: what we have tried to do, lack of danger from fallouts, length of time before test can be completed after decision is made to have one. Wanted to cite the experts' opinions, completely accurately and factually, no arguments. President is going to insist it be done that way. At another time he said he wanted in the thing: Defense's attitude at the moment, what their expert opinion is; what the diplomatic history of our efforts has been, the scientific history, and the scientific opinion on which we must depend.

Secy. Dulles expressed surprise that Adm. Strauss was agreeable -- said something to effect that it was the President's "winning ways with people."

Because of the circumstances of the President's present existence, he cannot go to the United Nations, but will send message -- Adm. Strauss would like to go as representative, & read the message. President however did not know State's relationship with Ambassadors up there, but thought they could well sponsor him.

Dulles' new subject: Prime Minister of Japan is going to be in New York October 25-27. There has been some suggestion that he would like to see President then. State does not want to build up his prestige; took the position that President is going up on political business, & would not even try to include governmental business. They discouraged his coming down to Washington. Will have Walter Robertson go up to N. Y. to see him.

2:36 Acting Secretary of State Hoover.
President wondered about any plans to relieve Hendrickson in New Zealand -- or has he resigned?
Mr. Hoover said he has resigned. This has been one of the most difficult cases since Mr. Hoover has been at State. He wants to resign, then later he does not. Mr. Hoover asked if this came to President's attention through Gov. Adams.
President said no, that he has a letter from Hendrickson's brother.

Mr. Hoover said the brother has been writing a lot, & that Mr. Shanley & Gov. Adams know all about it. Hendrickson gets very morose, sometimes drinks excessively. He first wanted ~~what~~ to resign, to go back to personal business in N. J. Just as State got it all set up, he wanted instead to go to India. Then later changed to idea of resigning once again. 4 or 5 weeks ago, he said he definitely has to resign & go back to N. J. business. Went to New Zealand to say his goodbyes, agreed to stay till completion of Colombo Conference, Dec. 6 -- so all agreed on a Dec. 8 date for him to leave.

Mr. Hoover thinks what he really wants is a Federal Judgeship in New Jersey -- but that Shanley & Adams say he doesn't have what it takes.

President said the brother has been very nice. Sends presents from all over the world; never complains; just hoping his brother will be able to serve the country well, more or less bespeaking these good offices in behalf of his brother.

The brother has been writing to everyone. Mr. Hoover thinks he knows the trouble. Personal side has been handled almost entirely through Shanley. State willing to do whatever they want to do.
President mentioned this is the first he knew of it.

2:49 President called the Attorney General about a letter he had received from Dan Hendrickson, full of praise for his brother, Bob Henderson. Wondered if a vacancy came about, if there was any way that a recommendation for Mr. Henderson could be prevented from the American Bar Association.

Brownell said that both Senators Case and Smith were for him, and had recently been in to remind him about the matter. President was astonished.

Brownell told the President of the strong recommendation of the American Bar Association in the matter of the nomination of Judge Brennan. Brownell said that they had approved highly, President was sorry that they had confined their approval to Brennan. Brownell said that the ABA felt strongly that they were against appointments such as Earl Warren, because they wanted someone from an a bench and not from government. Brownell said that Warren was doing a good job and tackling the backlog problem vigorously.

President suggested that if a New Jersey vacancy came up, it would be well to have immediately on tap names of such well qualified people that no one -- even the Senators -- could say that Hendrickson would have been better.

President said there is some fear on repetition of the "wicked nonsense" expression -- unnecessarily inflammatory, & not in keeping with the attitude he tries to take. When we get into that field, could say something like this: "What kind of political quackery. . . . ."

Dr. Milton thinks it all right to take it out, though it is a good phrase. Every day Stevenson is saying things twice as bad. Today he has a terrific one on health plan: says that this Administration has cared absolutely nothing for the people, & he comes up with plan for voluntary health insurance. President commented we've done so much on this, to which Dr. Milton of course agreed. But Milton pointed out that Stevenson is putting out statements every day, & getting into headlines -- whereas President's speeches get into the headlines only a couple times a week.

Dr. Milton has to go to Syracuse to make speech tomorrow. Could come here Thursday noon & stay till late Thursday night -- or on Friday. Again on Pittsburgh speech. Dr. Milton read 5th draft -- says it is still a very powerful speech.
President said a few changes have been made; will get Emmet in & go over them together.

Meantime, President mentioned his letter of yesterday about the Baltimore Sunday Sun editorial. Said Jim Hagerty suggested letter also go to the Publisher. Dr. Milton said it would not hurt him any if President mentioned in it that he called the editorial to the President's attention. It is a Democratic paper. Dr. Milton was told about it the day before, from Jerry Black, one of his Trustees & a nephew of the owner or the paper. President said he may hold letter up until after Dr. Milton receives the one addressed to him.

On speech. President read long section on prices & consumers. Dr. Milton said he is afraid of that one. Obviously we also are in favor of higher prices to farmers. But you put it in that context & you have connotation of not being in favor.

About the 20 billion, middle of page. Dr. Milton suggested putting in before that: The opposition plans a tax cut of an undeterminate amount & at the same time proposes increased spending programs. President asked him to look at part on "political orators." Then Milton said -- In other words, if you can't make it specific, leave it out.

Page 7(a). Take out "how & why we make progress in civil rights." Instead, "Now these few examples -- real & basic conflict between our policies & those of the opposition...."
Dr. Milton's only suggestion: Whether some word other than a "sound dollar" would be a little better politically. They agreed on "stabilized living cost."

Page 8. Cross out first 4 lines. Below we say "It means assuring freedom & fostering justice." Instead, "It means a world in which all men's toil serves his advancement, not his destruction."

Page 9. President read something to add right after "The meeting of the Summit made this clear...."

Page 10. "Here again I must mention what the opposition has been saying only because it is so vital that we understand these matters clearly."

President said Alex Smith was in today. He advised, "Don't build up Stevenson by answering him -- he's a little pipsqueak."

Very last paragraph. "And I would further pray that if it be your will that I continue my present service, the years of my second Administration...."

Page 11. Dr. Milton said he is afraid of one sentence. "The history of free men is never written by chance but by choice ... meaningless scribbling of a child." If this last part were interpreted as a slap at Stevenson, it would be very bad.

At this, President talked about Poland, who probably has fought harder than anyone, & she is still a slave; & now this is the fourth division.

Dr. Milton said the basic idea of the paragraph is wonderful, but he does not like that one sentence -- unless President really wants to make a charge at him. President's remark: When I make a charge, I will make one that no one can deny.

President read to Dr. Milton his letter to Publisher of Baltimore Sun.

Dr. Milton asked if President had agreed that talks in St. Paul & Minneapolis would not be written -- President replied yes. Milton thinks it important to take a second shot at agriculture, & stabilization he cannot stay on too long.

4:00 The President called Herbert Hoover, said that he had been pondering what should be done in preparation for follow-up if no agreement was reached at the present meeting on the Suez Canal, being held in New York. He said it seemed to him that we should not fail to do something about it, possibly dramatic, possibly even drastic. He said he felt that the question of the Suez was probably #1 question in the minds of the American people. He said that we should tell the Council - "we come before you believing in the program of the first London Conference, but what other suggestions have you to offer?"

He said that there were all sorts of things to consider. The British and the French feel that they have got to cut off Nasser, but nothing would make him madder. President is sure we must do some thing more than talk.

Dulles has many things in mind, said Hoover. At the present time the Foreign Ministers are sparring around."

President mentioned the fact that Shepilov tells Dulles one thing, then does another; Hoover said that was typical of the Russian technique.

President really thinks we should find some kind of mechanism to negotiate around. One thing suggested was to have the Security Council meetings in secret, not open to the public, to give a chance to talk in a more oonstructive way. President would hope that the UN would urge Nasser to confer directly with someone -- may be the Suez Canal Owners Association.

Hoover said that while the French were adamant still on this, the British seem to be taking a more constructive position. He said he was not despairing of the thing at all.

President said he would call Dulles, but he never knew when he was free, and people chase him around if they know the President is calling. Hoover said Dulles would like to talk to him and President told him to arrange it at some time (he, the President, is always available). They did talk later in the evening.

President said we ought to think of everything, including having Nehru negotiate -- Hoover said if Menon were left out he would not mind -- President said that he thought Menon's last suggestion had merit.

About the Pittsburgh speech. President agrees that he is the only one who is listened to widely enough to smack down some of these things. Referred specifically to middle of page 7, dealing with corruption, etc. President does not know exactly how to answer it. Thought of something of this sort: "For myself, I shall not answer such drivel, but there are those serving all of us faithfully who cannot always speak for themselves in having the truth as firmly and widely told as this canard has been spoken. I know and admire the men and women who have been serving....."

Dr. Milton asked if President can afford to give that much time to this. Pittsburgh is one place where the assertions should be answered. President said they have been, at Lexington.

Dr. Milton thinks second place to give "rip-roaring" answers is bound to be Madison Square Garden -- President there will be judged not by what he says but by the amount of applause.

At places where President thought speeches would be off-the-cuff, Dr. Milton had thought of preparing 5 to 7 minute manuscripts.

Portland would be on conservation & natural resources.

If he goes to Los Angeles, speech could be on defense & atoms for peace. Dr. Milton said he is plugging for a positive TV speech on the program for peace.

The final speech, in Boston, should be: "Here are the principles that motivate this Administration."

Pittsburgh
Dr. Milton understood from Emmet Hughes yesterday that this speech is 2 pages too long. His thought was to cut it just at this part the President is getting at.

(at least to the point he'd worked)
Here, President read to him the entire speech as he revised it.

Dr. Milton commented that he had dropped out the part on education. He thought Gov. Stevenson made more hay on that because every community has an educational deficiency of teachers and school rooms. Thinks his misrepresentation there is the worst of the whole bunch. Dr. Milton would prefer President drop out something else.

Dr. Milton sees President's point -- he does not want to reply to one assertion with another.

President asked Dr. Milton to read Frank Kent editorial in today Wash. Sun. Star. Dr. Milton was just about to do so when call came in, & will. Said not to forget that Kent is naturally against Stevenson -- is very conservative, & a Democrat.

President will call Milton later in afternoon. - Milton will be home till about 3:40; then has to go to a reception, shake hands with about 2,000 people.

11:15 Dr. Milton Eisenhower.

President asked what Milton thought of his rewritten part on education, as to matter of good taste & effectiveness. He read it, & Dr. Milton thought it all right.

As to the part on crookedness, & contagion of corruption -- President thought here he would say nothing except to make one suggestion (this accusation obviously having been labeled at all the people who have been appointed to Executive Branch of our Government to carry on), & that is: "I have only one suggestion: that you name over to yourselves all that are accused and the accusers. I have nothing else to say."

Dr. Milton commented that that would be by far the nastiest remark the President has made in the campaign, & further that he would have no objection. Said that is really a strong remark.

Dr. Milton mentioned the Frank Kent editorial, that it says exactly what the President has been saying to Milton.
Milton called to President's attention an even better article -- front page of the Baltimore Sun. They have come out with a double-column, front-page editorial, "The Case for Mr. Eisenhower," which is very good. It is very quietly done, & Dr. Milton thinks President should read it (which he did later).

Milton expressed sorrow that President has to work so hard on this particular speech -- but cautioned that we can't hurt the dignity of the President.

President said when you get to the positive parts, then he feels pretty good about it.

Dr. Milton called attention to page 7, "What about the other record?" President said he will probably have to change that a little because of what he has done with the other.

President does not mind re-working the draft. Said he will stay here alone, with no one to argue about it.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

The Secretary of State, accompanied by Mr. Hoover and Mr. Rountree of his office, came to see me about the deteriorating situation in the Israel-Jordan area.

It seems to be taken internationally as a foregone conclusion that Jordan is breaking up, and of course all the surrounding countries will be anxious to get their share of the wreckage, including Israel. In fact, there is some suspicion that the recent savage blows of the Israel border armies against the strong points within Jordan territory are intended to hasten this process of dissolution.

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

On the other side of the picture, there is some indication that Britain is really serious in her announced intention of honoring her Pact with Jordan, which requires her to help defend Jordan in the case of outside invasion.

Should this occur, we would have Britain in the curious position of helping to defend one of the Arab countries, while at the same time she is engaged in a quarrel -- which sometimes threatens to break out into war -- with Egypt over the Suez question.

All this brings to the fore one particular thing we must bear in mind. It is this: As of this moment we are dealing with with the existing situation -- that is, with Jordan enjoying the rights of a sovereign country. At the same time, in view of the possible disintegration of the Jordanian government, we must be ready to deal with the situation in which the people and territory of that country would be absorbed by others.

For the moment we can deal only with the first problem.

The Secretary of State is having a long conference with the Israeli Ambassador to this country, Mr. Eban. The Ambassador is about to return to his own country and is visiting Foster to discuss some of the factors in the above problem.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD - 2.
(October 15, 1956).

I have told the Secretary of State that he should make very clear to the Israelis that they must stop these attacks against the borders of Jordan. If they continue them, and particularly if they carry them on to the point of trying to take over and hold the territory west of the Jordan River, they will certainly be condemned by the United Nations, and not only Arab opinion but all world opinion will be brought to bear against this little country. Moreover, should there be a United Nations Resolution condemning Israel, there will be no brake or deterrent possible against any Soviet move into the area to help the Arab countries. They could bring considerable forces in under the guise that they were carrying out a United Nations mandate, the ultimate effect of which would be to Sovietize the whole region, including Israel.

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

There has been some disposition to believe that Ben Gurion's obviously aggressive attitude is inspired, at this moment, by three things:

(a). His desire to take advantage of the gradual deterioration in Jordan and to be ready to occupy and lay claim to a goodly portion of the area of that nation;

(b). The preoccupation of Egypt and the Western powers in the Suez question, which would tend both to minimize the possibility that Egypt would enter a war against him promptly, while at the same time it would impede Britain's capability of reinforcing Jordan.

(c). His belief that the current political campaign in the United States will keep this government from taking a strong stand against any aggressive move he might make.

Secretary Dulles will warn the Ambassador that while, of course, we would hate to create misunderstandings and needless passion in this country over this question, at this moment he should inform his government that no considerations of partisan politics will keep this government from pursuing a course dictated by justice and international decency in the circumstances, and that it will remain true to its pledges under the United Nations.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD - 3.
(October 15, 1956).

Ben Gurion should not make any grave mistakes based upon his belief that winning a domestic election is as important to us as preserving and protecting the interests of the United Nations and other nations of the free world in that region. The Secretary is to point out, moreover, that even if Ben Gurion, in an aggressive move, should get an immediate advantage in the region, that on a long term basis aggression on his part cannot fail to bring catastrophe and such friends as he would have left in the world, no matter how powerful, could not do anything about it.

Foster will make this attitude clear and unmistakeable to Mr. Eban.

At the same time I have Foster's promise to have ready a policy or plan that would guide our action in the event that the dissolution of Jordan would actually take place and thus create a new situation in the world.

Appendix:

It is believed that one of the recent Israeli raids against Jordan involved two or three battalions of infantry, artillery, and jet airplanes. Incidentally, our high-flying reconnaisance planes have shown that Israel has obtained some 60 of the French Mystere pursuit planes, when there had been reported the transfer of only 24. Jordan has no aviation.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 30, 1956; 11:15 AM

Others present: Ambassador Wailes
Colonel Goodpaster

The President extended his best wishes to Mr. Wailes for a successful tour in Hungary. He mentioned that he had thought the world picture was brightening for some time except for the Eastern European tier of countries and for the situation in the Middle East. He even thought he saw possibilities of improvement in the Middle East, although the present developments are adverse. The President indicated he feels that if the Eastern tier of states can be made independent and neutral, the possibilities for a constructive era of world development would be greatly enhanced.

The President and Mr. Wailes discussed briefly Mr. Wailes' previous service in South Africa.

In closing the President said he hoped Mr. Wailes could find possible ways of helping the Hungarians along toward the freedom they are so strongly seeking.

Master Charles Jackson Wheeler

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, their daughter, Judy, and their son, Charles Jackson (age 13, the youngest Eagle Scout in the history of Scouting) met with the President. Charles was in his scout uniform and wore his merit badges. The President asked Charles how long a hike he had to take in order to qualify for Eagle Scout and was advised that a 60-mile hike was required. The President related that his son, John, had been a scout and had been required to hike for about 50 miles. President Eisenhower also stated that David had just joined the Cub Scouts.

The President gave Charles and Judy a silver dollar each(minted in the year of the President's birth). He also gave Charles a knife with "D.D.E." on the blade, and as Charles had mentioned he played golf, the President gave him a holder containing golf tees. Judy was given a White House pencil.

As this was not a scheduled appointment, no photographs were taken.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 30, 1956

Others present: Dr. Arthur Flemming
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Flemming said he would like to review briefly with the President the oil situation likely to result from the operations in the Suez area. The President said he was inclined to think that those who began this operation should be left to work out their own oil problems -- to boil in their own oil, so to speak. They would be needing oil from Venezuela, and around the Cape, and before long they would be short of dollars to finance these operations and would be calling for help. They may be planning to present us with a fait accompli, then expecting us to foot the bill. He said he is extremely angry with both the British and the French for taking this action unilaterally and in violation of agreed undertakings such as the Tri-Partite Declaration of 1950.

Dr. Flemming said he thought we should not help the British and the French in these circumstances unless they ration their consumption of oil. He said that the studies by his group indicate that we should have no problem for satisfying our own requirements. The President said he saw no reason for us to ration oil in that case.

The President said that by tomorrow he thinks we are likely to be getting requests for help. After discussion, he suggested that Dr. Flemming look into the possibility of fleet oilers (which does not incur dollar costs) to help meet the British shipping problem, if we should decide to do so. The British could pay us in pounds for the expenses incurred.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 30, 1956

Others present: Secretary Dulles
Under Secretary Hoover
Mr. Herman Phleger
Governor Adams
Mr. Hagerty (for part of meeting)
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Dulles opened the meeting with a report that Ambassador Lodge had initially given notice last night to the President of the Security Council regarding our desire to inscribe an item on the Israeli attack. Inasmuch as the British had not had a chance to join in, and Mr. Coulson had indicated the British might wish to join us, Ambassador Lodge withdrew his request in an effort to enable Dixon to join. Mr. Dulles indicated that, at the meeting at 11 this morning, we still hoped that the British would join with us, although if they did not we would submit the item alone.

The President asked if the French had been given the opportunity to join with us, and Secretary Dulles said that they had been given that opportunity yesterday. Neither yesterday nor this morning had they shown any evidence of desire to act rapidly on the matter. Mr. Dulles commented that according to radio reports Mollet has gone up to London today. He also pointed out that, with reference to our NATO partners, we may have to decide whether to go along with our partners who are colonial powers.

The President at this point read aloud a message which he had been drafting to Eden. At the close of this he read an INS report of imminent French and British landing which had just been received. The President suggested that Mr. Dulles take his draft message and edit it. The Secretary asked if it would not be possible to get it off immediately, and he and the President revised it to their satisfaction and sent it to State for immediate dispatch.

Mr. Phleger said that the British and French might take their action under the authority of the 1950 declaration, as a measure for protecting Egypt by establishing a "front" on the Canal area. The President pointed out that this action would have the French opposing the Israelis, whom they have supported in this action. Mr. Hoover said the thinking might be that the French and the British might simply take over the Canal, after which the Israelis could withdraw from the Canal area. The President asked if this action would not amount to repudiation by the French and British of their agreement with us in the 1950 Declaration and subsequent statements. Mr. Hoover said they might say it is not, but is simply an effort to achieve the purposes of the Declaration.

Mr. Dulles said he had talked to Secretary Humphrey regarding Israeli bank balances in the United States. Initially Mr. Humphrey thought these could be held up informally today; after further study, however, he reported that they are widely scattered, the only concentration being in a single bank in New York, regarding which informal action did not seem practicable. Secretary Dulles said that if there were any attempt to stop the flow of charity money, a great outcry must be expected. The President asked whether such a flow could be permitted, however, if sanctions are imposed.

At this point Secretary Dulles took a call on the President's phone from Ambassador Lodge who reported that the British had suggested changing the title of the agenda item to "The Palestine Question," removing all reference to measures to bring to an end the operations of Israeli forces in Egypt. If this were done, they indicated they would join with us; otherwise they would not. The French had indicated they would not join with us at all. The President suggested a wording which would avoid apparent prejudgment to the effect that the aggressor in the matter is Israel. Secretary Dulles then advised Ambassador Lodge to submit the item as revised, without British or French association.

Secretary Dulles next asked whether steps should be taken to keep American flagships out of the Suez Canal. The President thought the decision should be up to ship owners; he doubted whether the British and French, if they seize the Canal, would bar us. Mr. Dulles thought that the British and French might move in and operate the Canal, that Egypt would then attack them, and that U. S. ships would be damaged or sunk. The President thought U. S. ships would have to take their chances.

Mr. Dulles pointed to the danger of our being drawn into the hostilities as we were in World Wars I and II with the difference that this time it appears that the British and French might well be considered the aggressors in the eyes of the world, engaged in an anti-Arab, anti-Asian war.

The President said that in his judgment the French and the British do not have an adequate cause for war. Egyptian action in nationalizing the Canal was not enough to justify this. Mr. Dulles recalled that the British were practically in agreement with Egypt on a resolution of the Suez dispute at the recent UN meeting, but have been delaying any solution since then. He added that this is not a question of the Suez, but is really a question of Algeria for the French and position in the Persian Gulf for the British. He thought that the odds are high that the British may be evicted from Iraq, and that the pipelines may be blown up. He suggested that it may be necessary for us to make major adjustments in our oil situation soon.

The President said it may be that the British think they can settle the matter quickly, and thus have their oil supply continue without interruption. Unless they have reached some secret agreement with the Saudi-Arabians, however (such as possibly on Buraimi), there seems little chance that the flow of oil would continue. Mr. Hoover doubted that they could have reached an agreement regarding Buraimi.

Mr. Hoover added that the British and French may feel that they have forced us to a choice -- between themselves and the Arabs. They may in fact have felt that they have forced us into a position where we must go against the Arabs. The President wondered if the hand of Churchill might not be behind this -- inasmuch as this action is in the mid-Victorian style. If oil is cut off and American ships take the route around the Cape, the oil supplies to Western Europe will be greatly cut down. Mr. Hoover thought the British may be estimating that we would have no choice but to take extraordinary means to get oil to them.

Secretary Dulles said their thinking might be that they will confront us with a de facto situation, in which they might acknowledge that they have been rash but would say that the U. S. could not sit by and let them go under economically.

The President said he did not see much value in an unworthy and unreliable ally and that the necessity to support them might not be as great as they believed.

Secretary Dulles commented that he had been greatly worried for two or three years over our identification with countries pursuing colonial policies not compatible with our own. He has had several study groups working on this. Recently he made a statement on this matter which provoked violent comment by the French and the British. At this point the President was informed that a message from Sir Anthony Eden to him had been received by the British Embassy and would be sent over promptly. The meeting adjourned until its arrival.

The meeting resumed in about fifteen minutes. The President, after reading Eden's message, commented that Eden says the attitude of Egypt over the past years has relieved the signatories of the three-power declaration from any obligation. The President commented further that the British case would be improved if the Egyptians had not simply nationalized the Canal, and then operated it effectively afterward.

The State Department group left at this point to work on the UN resolution needed this afternoon.

About twenty minutes later the Secretary called the President to advise him of reports through the British Embassy here that Eden was announcing in Commons the landing of British and French forces in the Suez Canal area. The President commented that a "hands off" attitude by the United States might well be indicated. He thought that it would probably be necessary today to make clear publicly that we have not been, and are not now, associated with the French and the British in their activities. He expressed concern over the possibility of Russian intervention on the side of Egypt, and thought that a blockade by the British (who have the forces to make it effective) might be the only way to prevent Russian entry into the area. He said he was not too sure now that Congress should be called into session -- that he had a great deal of question over any idea of asking Congress for $600 to $800 million to support oil deliveries and other economic aid to Britain and France when the full impact of their action begins to be felt.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 29, 1956; 7:15 P. M.

Others present:
Secretary Dulles
Under Secretary Hoover
Secretary Wilson
Admiral Radford
Mr. Allen Dulles
Governor Adams
General Persons
Mr. Hagerty (after first five minutes)
Colonel Goodpaster

The meeting was called to discuss the situation arising out of the reports of Israeli invasion of the Sinai Peninsula.

Secretary Dulles referred to French actions in providing, apparently, a sizeable number of Mysteres to the Israelis in excess of agreed figures and without the notifications called for in US-UK-French agreements on arms to the Middle East. He also referred to a very large number of messages between Paris and Israel yesterday.

Several of those present reviewed the reports on Israeli movements to positions seventy-five miles within Egyptian territory, and -- by air drop -- to positions approximately twenty miles from Suez. There was next a review of intelligence reports regarding Egyptian force dispositions, particularly Egyptian forces in and near the Gaza strip.

The President asked whether the very first thing that Egypt should do should not be to counterattack and hold the Israeli forces in the desert where they would have difficulty maintaining themselves. Admiral Radford doubted the Egyptians could do this.

The President recalled that in 1950 and later we have said we would support the victim of aggressions in the Middle East. The question now is, how shall we do this. Admiral Radford said the 6th Fleet is in the area. The President asked if blockade would be effective. Admiral Radford said the affair will be "all over" in a few days; when the President challenged him on how it could be ended in that time, he said he meant that the Israelis would be to the Suez within two or three days. He thought

1 COPY OF 3 COPIES

Israel simply wants to seize the Sinai Peninsula.

Mr. Allen Dulles suggested that the Israelis might still be planning to withdraw -- that the operations thus far have been in the nature of probing action. Admiral Radford thought that the operation has gone too far to pull back, and thought that the Israelis may attack Egyptian fields tonight. The President asked what Egyptian air forces would be doing at that time, and Admiral Radford said that their quality is not of the best, and they probably could not attack Israel in night operations. He thought that Israel is counting on the operations not running more than three days.

Secretary Dulles said the operation goes further than that. The Canal is likely to be disrupted, and pipe lines are likely to be broken. In those circumstances British and French intervention must be foreseen. They appear to be ready for it, and may in fact have concerted their action with the Israelis. (At this point Mr. Hagerty joined the meeting.) Admiral Radford said that there are rumors that the British, French and Israelis have made a deal with Iraq to carve up Jordan.

Admiral Radford thought we are confronted with a question whether Egypt will ask for help from the Russians, or throw Nasser out and ask the British for help. He commented that Israel has obtained thirty to fifty Mysteres from France that we had not heard of -- and perhaps more. Secretary Dulles recalled that the supply of these aircraft must have been in violation of our agreement whereby we were supposed to be notified.

Secretary Dulles said that in his opinion there is a basic issue that must be considered. The French and British may think that -- whatever we may think of what they have done -- we have to go along with them. The President asked what they would think if we were to go in to aid Egypt to fulfill our pledge. Secretary Wilson asked whether we are committed so tightly as this by our statement, and Secretary Dulles recalled that the Tri-Partite statement, and then the U. S. statement last April, called for exactly such action. Mr. Wilson said the Israelis must be figuring on French and British support, thinking that we are stymied at this pre-election period, and the USSR also because of difficulties in Eastern Europe.

The President queried whether Mr. Hagerty should not make a statement letting the information out that we are considering what steps we could take to support Egypt and redeem our pledge in this matter -- including consideration of calling Congress back. Secretary Dulles recalled that Senator George today had referred to the possibility of calling Congress into session. The President thought that in these circumstances perhaps we cannot be bound by our traditional alliances, but must instead face the question how to make good on our pledge. He thought the UN might be the most valuable course to follow. Secretary Dulles pointed out that the USSR may beat us to the jump in the UN. He added that we have had no news from the British and French in nearly ten days. He suggested that we might plan to go to the UN, with the British and French if they wish to join us, but otherwise alone. He felt it imperative to get in ahead of the USSR.

The President said, in this matter, he does not care in the slightest whether he is re-elected or not. He feels we must make good on our word. He added that he did not really think the American people would throw him out in the midst of a situation like this, but if they did, so be it. Mr. Dulles said that one adverse result of this action may be a wave of anti-Semitism through the country, and general agreement was indicated.

The President next asked whether we should call Congress back into session, and specifically whether we could call them for the day following the election. He said that referral to the United Nations was not enough. We must take more definite action, since we are the only people the British and the French will listen to. Admiral Radford thought that we should take our action tonight, inasmuch as the situation may develop in a major way overnight.

Mr. Wilson asked what the Russians are likely to do in the circumstances (without any answer).

The President thought the British are calculating that we must go along with them (he thought they were not banking too heavily on our being tied up in the election, but are thinking in longer range terms.) He thought we should let them know at once of our position, telling them that we recognize that much is on their side in the dispute with the Egyptians, but that nothing justifies double-crossing us. He did not conceive that the United States would gain if we permitted it to be justly said that we are a nation without honor. Admiral Radford thought that this matter must be handled on the basis of principle, and the President agreed.

Secretary Dulles said that tomorrow there may well be fighting along the Canal, with the pipe lines broken, and with the British and French moving in.

The President asked what the group thought of telling the British that we know the strain the French have been under and they may be playing us false -- they have given extra Mysteres to Israel and there has been a sudden rise in their messages to and from Israel. We are, however, moved to help Egypt at once in order to honor our commitments. We know the French are already involved in war, which is being indirectly supported by the Egyptians, and all things are legitimate. If, however, the British get into this operation, they may open a deep rift between us. The President said we might indicate we are considering ways and means of redeeming our pledge to the Middle Eastern countries. If the British back the Israelis they may find us in opposition. He said he did not fancy helping Egypt in the present circumstances but he felt our word must be made good. Mr. Wilson again asked how clear cut our pledge is to the Middle Eastern countries, and the President recalled that we had told Israel quite recently that they did not need from us the arms they were seeking because of the assurance inherent in our pledge.

In discussion of the military situation of the two countries, including the deployment of their forces, Admiral Radford indicated Israel can take care of the Egyptian bombers, in all likelihood, with their fighters including the Mysteres.

Mr. Hoover pointed out that if we were to side with the French and British we would find the USSR lined up with Arabs and in fact with all of Africa. Admiral Radford said we must support principle in this case, and Mr. Hoover agreed. Secretary Dulles said that the Baghdad Pact ambassadors were in seeing him today and pointed out that the United States is pledged to stop such aggression, and asked what we proposed to do.

The President thought it would be well to call Mr. Coulson, the British Charge d'Affaires, in the absence of an ambassador and have him come to the White House right away. After discussion it was decided to have him come to the front gate, and Mr. Hoover called him to arrange this. Mr. Wilson recalled that Allen Dulles had said there is still a slight hope that the Israelis have sent probing forces into the desert and would back out. Admiral Radford said that the fact of the reported air drop showed that the Israelis were fully committed.

The President said he planned to say to Colson that the French have moved fast and played a lone hand in this matter, that we propose to move as fast as we can in the United Nations, with our allies if possible, and if not then alone, and that we are going to do everything possible, even including a special session of Congress if necessary, to redeem our pledge.

Governor Adams suggested that if the situation deteriorates it might be desirable to convene the Congress before election. He saw considerable merit in putting Congress on notice to come in on a date certain. General Persons said that the purpose of the UN operation is to determine who is the aggressor and we should avoid prejudging this matter until the UN had acted. Mr. Allen Dulles reiterated that there is still a slight chance that this is a probing operation -- he recognized that the chance may be very slight. The President repeated that he proposed for us to go before the United Nations, and say we are prepared to do all necessary to redeem our pledge.

Secretary Dulles said there has been a struggle between the French and ourselves to see who will have the British allied with them in the tense situations in the Middle East and North Africa. He thought there was still a bare chance to "unhook" the British from the French (who will be even more furious than they have been) and that it ought to be undertaken.

The President said that before Mr. Colson came the group should go down to have their picture taken -- he asked whether all present should not be in the picture, and there was agreement. Mr. Hagerty asked if there would be any statement, and the President thought that there might be one later. (Mr. Dulles was drafting a few notes as this discussion proceeded.) Admiral Radford said that Israel is too far committed to back out.

General Persons suggested the desirability of having a bi-partisan leadership meeting late this week. Others commented that our position must be very clear inasmuch as there would be a great deal of political activity in connection with any such meeting.

Mr. Wilson thought we should make clear tonight that we are going to the UN tomorrow, and the President recalled that Mr. Hagerty might state that we are considering whether to call a special session. Governor Adams suggested that the consideration be hinged on the developments in the next day or two.

I raised with the President and the group the question of the position of the Soviet Union in this matter, suggesting that consideration be given to the possibility that they might take radical action, and hence to what we might do to forestall this. The President asked what we could do, and others pointed out that the announcement of our plan to go to the UN, and of our general stand in the matter, might help in this. It was observed that we and the Russians might find ourselves on the same side in this matter.

At this point Mr. Coulson was brought in and the group went down to have pictures taken. I stayed with Mr. Coulson. The President and Secretary Dulles returned in a few minutes. I was absent from their meeting for five minutes or so, and then joined it until Mr. Coulson left.

I then returned to the meeting in the Red Room of those who had left the Oval Room, and Secretary Dulles joined this meeting shortly. A press release was drafted and reviewed with all those present by Mr. Hagerty and Secretary Dulles. The group dispersed and Mr. Hagerty returned to the West Wing to make an announcement to the press.

Secretary Dulles said he would call Ambassador Lodge to put the matter before the UN at the opening of business tomorrow. After further discussion he said he would call Lodge tonight and ask that Lodge call Hammarskjold tonight in order that we may be "on record" first.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 29, 1956; 8:15 PM

Others present: Secretary Dulles
Mr. Coulson
Colonel Goodpaster

I joined the meeting after it had been in progress for about five minutes. The President was saying that the prestige of the United States and the British is involved in the developments in the Middle East. He felt it was incumbent upon both of us to redeem our word about supporting any victim of aggression. Last spring, when we declined to give arms to Israel and to Egypt, we said that our word was enough. If we do not now fulfill our word Russia is likely to enter the situation in the Middle East. In his opinion, the United States and the United Kingdom must stand by what they said. In view of information that has reached us concerning Mysteres and the number of messages between Paris and Israel in the last few days, the President said he could only conclude that he did not understand what the French were doing. Mr. Coulson said he did not know about the messages. The President said that if he has to call Congress in order to redeem our pledge, he would do so. We will stick to our undertaking.

Mr. Coulson asked if we would not first go to the Security Council and the President said we plan to get there the first thing in the morning -- when the doors open -- before the USSR gets there.

Secretary Dulles recalled that the Baghdad Pact ambassadors had seen him today, and had asked him what the U. S. is going to do to redeem its pledge. The President said that we had had a great chance to split the Arab world. Various of the countries were becoming uneasy at Egyptian developments. He does not know what Sir Anthony Eden is thinking at the present time, but he is certain that it is important that we stick together.

Mr. Coulson said it should be easy to agree in the Security Council. He recognized, however, that the French may be involved in this operation.

The President said he could not understand why the French would conceal the movement of the Mysteres. He asked Mr. Coulson to communicate these ideas urgently to London and assure Selwyn Lloyd and Sir Anthony that we wished to be with them. He said he would not betray the good word of the United States, and he will call the Congress if necessary in order to redeem our pledge.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 27, 1956; 11 A. M.

Others present: Secretary Dulles — Colonel Goodpaster
Under Secretary Hoover
Deputy Assistant Secretary William Rountree

Secretary Dulles first reviewed the Hungarian situation. It is beginning to take shape as regards U N action. The British and French, together with the Canadians and Australians, all support inscribing the matter today on the Security Council agenda. Although there was earlier thought of simply sending a letter, as long as the others want to go as far as inscription, we should too, he thought. The President indicated agreement.

Many U. S. churches and synagogues will hold a minute of silent prayer this week end for the Hungarians. Deep feelings on this matter are being manifested.

The President said he would be unable to participate directly, because of his medical exam, but would call Dr. Elson and request that he consider doing this at his church.

Within Hungary itself, the revolt has become widespread, the Secretary reported. Large sections of the Hungarian armed forces have gone over to the dissidents, and throughout the countryside there are large areas in opposition to the regime. Also, signs of condemnation of the Communists are arising all over Europe. In Italy, Spain and France there are strong demonstrations for the Hungarians.(Mr. Rountree joined the meeting at this point.) The Nagy government in Hungary includes a number of "bad" people, associated with the Molotov school, and will have difficulty in attracting support.

Our Government has been in touch with the American Red Cross, and they with the International Red Cross, who are working on means for relief, medical care, etc. A great many refugees are crossing the Austrian border. They are being given aid there, and medicine is being sent from Austria and Hungary. Secretary Dulles was inclined to think there is not much more that we can or should do at this point. Mr. Hoover commented that we may, later, be able to get food in.

The President questioned whether there had been much notice of his statement in New York on the Hungarian situation; the Secretary said there had been, and that USIA had given it a heavy and effective play. The President said he was happy that the statement had been issued.

Mr. Dulles concluded this discussion with a reference to a passage in his Dallas speech tonight on this matter.

Discussion next turned to the Middle East and Secretary Dulles referred to the partial mobilization by the Israelis, and the danger that they might make some substantial move. In response to a question by the President, Mr. Rountree suggested Jordan as the most probable direction. The Secretary next referred to indications of possible developments in Syria, and suggested that the Israelis might have information about this, and be planning to move against Jordan if anything were to occur in Syria.

Secretary Dulles then suggested to the President that the latter send a message to Premier Ben-Gurion. After discussion and certain amendments, relating primarily to the danger suggested by Mr. Hoover that tensions are so great that any armed action might set off great consequences, the President approved the message for dispatch, subject to any necessary editorial revision.

Secretary Dulles handed the President an extract from a report in 1949 of the Foreign Relations Committee indicating that U. S. ratification of the North Atlantic Treaty was not to be construed as endorsement of the colonial policies of other NATO countries.

The President wished the Secretary a good trip and a successful speech in Dallas.

The above group met with the President and an informal discussion was held on the various resolutions adopted by the Catholic War Veterans of the U.S.A. at their 21st Annual National Convention, Manchester, New Hampshire. Commander Gill specifically mentioned fourteen of the resolutions which he discussed briefly.

Resolution Number 2, referring to Congressional Medal of Honor to the four Chaplains in the sinking of the Dorchester. The President expressed surprise that these Chaplains had not been given a Congressional Medal of Honor in view of the wide publicity on this incident and asked that information be obtained on the present status of this proposal. The other resolutions were discussed in the following order:

1. Capehart Housing. -- In the current tight money market, several Capehart Housing projects have been deferred because builders could not obtain either a construction loan or a commitment for a permanent mortgage (guaranteed by the Government) after completion of construction. Defense has informally explored the problem with private lending agencies and believes that private lenders would make about $200 million available for construction loans if a firm commitment for subsequent permanent mortgages could be provided. The Federal National Mortgage Association can, by statute, make these commitments and will purchase such mortgages at a net price of 98 per cent of face value. Defense believes this price insufficient to assure necessary builder participation; Defense also believes that a higher price, which would mean a lower return to FNMA, would still compensate FNMA for the costs of its services. (U)

2. Territorial Waters. -- Over several years, State has been presenting to friendly countries the legal grounds for retaining the traditional three-mile definition of territorial waters. Defense has recommended that State dispatch three Navy teams -- one each to Europe, Latin America, and the Far East -- to present to our military allies the results of extensive research upon the damage to allied security interests which would result from extending territorial waters. Subject: Appointment with the President, 11:40 -- "Operation Victory"
- Veterans for Ike sponsored by the Republican National Committee
- Gene Raymond, movie star - master of ceremonies
- J. Addington Wagner, immediate Past National Commander of The American Legion
- Timothy J. Murphy, immediate Past National Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars
- Mrs. Bowden (Ruby) Ward, immediate Past National President The American Legion Auxiliary
- Charles McGonegal, WW I double arm amputee & Rehabilitation Consultant, American Legion
- Wayne Warrington, Director, Veterans Division, National Republican Committee.

The President met in the Conference Room with the above-named group, and photographs were taken of the President seated with Mrs. Ward and Mr. Raymond and looking at the itinerary of the caravan(which starts tomorrow). Mr. Wagner, Mr. McGonegal, and Mr. Murphy stood in the rear of the group. After the pictures were taken, the President invited this group to his office for an informal discussion.

The President was advised that 35 cities were to be visited during the next eight days in the states of Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Illinois and Michigan, and that 23 congressional districts would be involved. Members of Congress and candidates en route will join the caravan and will act as host in their respective districts. These "Ike and Dick" rallies were designed to acquaint the veteran population of the need for the reelection of the Eisenhower and Nixon ticket.

The President explained the fall out of the Hydrogen bomb and mentioned that a statement would be printed very shortly giving the full facts on this subject to allay the fears that have been raised by Stevenson's speeches. The need for continuation of the draft was discussed briefly by the President in terms that the group readily understood and could report on to the veterans they will contact. The President's Pan-American trip was also mentioned, and the need for such conferences was described -- and the progress being made in Latin American countries to stamp out communism was described also.

Wayne Warrington gave the President a briefing of the proposed itinerary and left the attached releases and biographies of the group.

Mrs. Ward mentioned that the Junior Ike Club pamphlet contained a picture of David Eisenhower and she asked if the President had seen it. He expressed surprise that he had not and was assured that it would be made available. (copies of pamphlet attached).

NOTE: After the group left the President's office they asked that the President be advised of their appreciation to him for taking valuable time from his heavy schedule today to discuss these vital issues with them. They now feel that it is possible to carry to their audiences a true and exact message from the President that will have a far greater impact than would have been possible otherwise.

Commander Strada outlined for the President the AMVETS' scholarship program and stated that seven scholarships were now being awarded to children of veterans killed in action. His organization, however, is now liberalizing the scholarship program to make scholarships available to children whose fathers died of service-connected disabilities -- not necessarily resulting from combat service. The President expressed interest in this program and stated he hoped that in the future there might be a possibility of certain children of deceased veterans being eligible for entrance into the military academies. Commander Strada stated that AMVETS would be very glad to support such a program, but the President asked that nothing be done by them at this time because it will be a matter that will have to be studied by the Defense Department and will call for new legislation to take care of the situation. When this project reaches the proper stage, AMVETS' support of the program will be appreciated. A brochure on the AMVETS' scholarship program was left with the President.

There was a general discussion of the compensation and hospitalization program, and the President restated what he has previously stated in letters to the other veterans organizations' commanders who have called on him in the last few weeks.

Photographs were taken of the President and Commander Strada with the chart showing where AMVETS' scholarships had been awarded. Commander Strada left with the President a letter requesting that consideration be given the AMVETS' resolutions. The letter was presented in lieu of the resolutions as they had not been printed.

Attached are copies of press releases made after the appointment.

FOR RELEASE OCTOBER 15, AFTER 11 A. M.

PRESIDENT ASKED FOR VIEWS ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS

WASHINGTON, D. C. - Oct. 15 -- President Eisenhower was asked for his views on three important questions concerning veterans' benefits by AMVETS National Commander Dominick L. Strada (of West New York, N. J.) today.

The inquiries were contained in a letter presented to the President during a White House conference.

Considered of "paramount importance" by the World War II and Korean veterans organization was the matter of veterans who were not disabled during or as the result of military service. The President was asked if he felt the pensions paid to these men for their non-service-connected disabilities should be liberalized.

The letter inquired if such a liberalization "should enjoy the same legislative priority as increases in the rates of compensation for service-connected disability?" (During the last session of Congress a bill for increasing compensation paid to veterans with service-connected disabilities was kept from passage by the insistence of a large veterans' group that pensions for non-service-connected disabled should be liberalized first.).

The Chief Executive was asked if he favored the continued granting of hospitalization in Veterans Administration hospitals for non-service-connected illnesses on a "bed available, financial need" basis.

The final inquiry related to the part veterans preferences in public and private employment should play in the overall structure of veterans' benefits.

PRESIDENT HEARS REPORT

ON AMVETS SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, D. C. - October 15 -- President Eisenhower received a report today on the progress of the five year old AMVETS Memorial Scholarship program from AMVETS National Commander Dominick L. Strada of West New York, N. J.

Both the President and Vice-President Nixon have received the high school seniors each year since 1953 during the scholarship winner's visit to Washington.

The President was told that since the program began AMVETS have awarded 31 four-year scholarships worth $2,000 each to the sons and daughters of deceased or totally disabled war veterans. The winners have either been graduated from or are now attending 28 different colleges and universities.

Commander Strada pointed out to the President that almost half of the students are majoring in the sciences or in technical fields. Five more are studying medicine and related medical subjects, he related.

The AMVETS leader also outlined the new AMVETS Fellowship program for the Chief Executive. Under its provisions qualified scholarship winners can receive $500.00 grants for graduate study. The first of the Fellowships will be awarded in 1957.

Secretary Benson Campaigning. -- Agriculture notes that reports from the field indicate Secretary Benson's reception in farm belt states on his current tour is exceeding all expectations. Typical of reports are these two received this morning from the National Committee: "The Secretary's appearance at Albany, Mo. (a township of 1000 population) was wonderful - all schools, etc. were closed and they had over 1200 at the airport where he spoke "off the cuff" and did a magnificent job." "Benson was a big success--an enormous success. Everywhere he had wonderful crowds and in Higginsville last night where we had estimated a crowd of 1200 (the population of Higginsville is only 2100) Benson drew 2500 people, the biggest political crowd in the history of the county. He spoke extemporaneously everywhere and even did so at the ballgame in Higginsville, where he had a formal speech but didn't follow it. He was a big hit. It has helped pep up our candidates and our organization."

MEMORANDUM COVERING APPOINTMENT OF CONGRESSMAN ADAM CLAYTON POWELL WITH THE PRESIDENT ON OCTOBER 11, 1956 - 3:02 - 3:27 P. M.

Others present - Bernard Shanley, James Hagerty and Val Washington

Congressman Powell started the discussion by telling the President that he had been to Yugoslavia and that they were prepared to do business with the United States relative to the sale of their copper. The President raised the question of Chilean copper and asked me to contact Arthur Flemming relative to a report on the subject, which I did.

Powell then pointed out to the President that he was going to support him - that he was "forced to do so" because of the vacillating position which his own party had been taking. He mentioned this as least twice and also pointed out that he recognized what the results of this would be vis-a-vis his relationship with the Democrat Party.

The President replied by saying that when a Member of the Congress who is elected by the people, decided to support him, he naturally was greatly honored by it.

Powell then raised the question, as agreed, about the proposed Javits amendment which he said he would accept in lieu of his own (the Powell amendment) and would publicly support this position.

He said to the President that he hoped the school construction bill would be submitted promptly at the start of the Congressional Session. The President replied that he saw no reason why this shouldn't be done early in the session.

I had explained to the President what the Javits proposal was prior to this conference but the President listened attentively when Powell explained what the Javits amendment was. He showed real interest but made no comments other than to suggest that he would transmit the problem to his staff for study.

Powell then said he was prepared to lead an independent movement for the President on a nationwide basis and take an active part in the balance of the campaign. During the course of the conference, the President explained again his position on the integration problem as he has done so often in press conferences.

COMMERCE AND TRADE

1. Charter of Government Ships. -- The Federal Maritime Board approved an indefinite bareboat charter, reviewable in six months, of 30 Liberty-type Government-owned ships for transportation of American coal in the world-wide trade. Commerce expects that the chartering of these ships will create jobs for about 1,200 American seamen and benefit coal-using friendly nations, coal miners, coal operators, and coal-carrying railroads. (U)

2. Japanese Textiles. -- In connection with Japan's newly established voluntary controls upon textile exports, which have been favorably received by our cotton textile industry, Japan expressed concern about state legislation discriminating against her textiles. The State Department replied that we have informed the states that we intend to take all feasible steps to solve the problem and that we have asked the Attorney General to consider court action against one of the discriminating states. (C)

DEFENSE

3. Military Procurement for Germany. -- State reports an important agreement with Germany for reimbursable military procurement whereby Germany will make full payment for each order in advance of delivery. Planned procurement over three years of some $1.4 billion - more than half for aircraft - will supplement our 1953 grant, of which about half has been delivered, of major equipment for Germany's first six divisions and 24 air squadrons. (No decision has yet been made on the German request for NIKE missiles.) (S)

4. SNARK. -- In a successful test, a SNARK "D" surface-to-surface missile flew 700 miles under control of its stellar-inertial guidance system and was then returned to its base by command control. Although deviations from the planned course during the flight ranged up to three miles, the missile was [redacted] off-course when stellar-inertial guidance was terminated. (S)

Secretary Dulles and Admiral Strauss are considering the desirability of a concurrent Presidential statement. (U)

INTERNATIONAL

1. East-West Trade in 1955. -- In his eighth report to Congress, scheduled for release on October 10, the Director of ICA will report that total trade between the free world and the Sino-Soviet bloc amounted to $4.46 billion in 1955 as compared with $3.6 billion in 1954, an increase of 24 percent. Exports to the bloc rose by 15 percent, while imports from the bloc increased by 32 percent. Since trade within the free world community also increased, however, the East-West component of free world trade increased only slightly, from about 2.3 percent in 1954 to approximately 2.6 percent in 1955.

The report gives a factual description of the volume, commodity composition, and geographical pattern of East-West trade last year, the Sino-Soviet bloc's increased use of trade fairs as a commercial and propaganda device, and the bloc's efforts to expand its economic relations with the less developed countries through bilateral trade agreements and economic and technical assistance programs. (U)

2. Wheat for France. -- State has opposed granting France's request for a 700,000 ton P.L. 480 wheat sale on the ground that it would facilitate French wheat exports and hence damage Canada's export position. Agriculture argues, however, that French wheat exports to Germany consist of low quality feed grain which do not compete with Canadian exports. Embassy Paris points out that rejection of the request would be badly received in France. (Agriculture's one condition to the proposed P.L. 480 sale -- French purchase of 800,000 tons of wheat in the U.S. market -- has been nearly satisfied.) State is reconsidering its position. (C)

DEFENSE

3. Airlift and Military Mobility. -- Defense estimates that present programs will provide nearly 2.9 billion ton miles of annual strategic airlift capacity in 1958, a more than fifteen-fold increase over 1950. In addition, airlift effectiveness, as well as Army mobility, will be increased substantially by the use of the new-type Army airborne division which, with fewer persons and lighter equipment, requires only one-half the airlift now required to move an airborne division. (S)

4. TALOS. -- Another successful test occurred October 4 when a TALOS "L" surface-to-air guided missile struck a QB-17 drone flying at 27,000 ft. at a range of 70 nautical miles. Several recent TALOS flights have achieved hits at 50 nautical miles range or better. (S)

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 11, 1956

Others present: Secretary Wilson
Secretary Brucker
General Taylor
Colonel Goodpaster

The meeting was held to enable General Taylor to make a presentation to the President regarding ~~the reorganized~~ proposed new tables of organization for Army Airborne, Infantry and Armored Divisions. Only minor changes were involved in the Armored Division organization. Airborne and Infantry Divisions were cut quite substantially from present strengths. Four principles were observed: adapting the Division to the atomic battlefield; pooling at higher echelons all elements needed only occasionally; taking advantage of improved communication equipment by which a Commander can control substantially more than three subordinate units; basing organization on new equipment, some of which must still be developed.

The President spoke strongly in favor of smaller Divisions, and thought the changes were in the right direction, although he would have preferred units cut to a strength of about 10,000. He felt sure that on an atomic battlefield there would be dispersion such as we have never seen before. He thought that ground bursts would contaminate large areas, and that small units -- largely self-contained -- would be needed which could weave between contaminated areas. With such great dispersion the Infantry company could include support weapons. (General Taylor pointed out that to a considerable extent this was being done in the new organization.) The President thought signal communications would be a difficult problem at company and platoon level. General Taylor said this was true with present equipment but with "transistorized" radios, the capability should approach the need. The President questioned the assignment of personnel carriers as organic equipment. He is not inclined to think the Division should be loaded down with them, but they should be pooled at higher echelon. General Taylor said that the existing personnel carrier is unsatisfactory but that a new lighter one is being developed, and would be used both for personnel movement and for movement of supplies cross-country.

The President said he thought there should not be a publicity campaign about the divisional changes, and specifically thought that no emphasis should be given to the placing of atomic weapons in the Division (he was here following up on a memorandum from Mr. Jackson which I gave to him this morning). He thought the Divisions should be regarded simply as experimental. General Taylor said he wanted to phase into this new organization, beginning in February, and extending through the following year and a half or two years, and the President seemed to accept this schedule.

General Taylor asked if it would be all right to inform the NATO authorities of the new Division, and the President said that he thought such action would be quite desirable. He asked if General Gruenther wanted this done, and General Taylor said he did. The NATO briefing would be on a classified basis.

Reverting to the matter of public announcement, the President recognized that information as to the new Divisions would gradually become known; he did not favor an active campaign of articles in Service journals, magazines, etc.

Secretary Wilson asked whether there would be a proposal that the personnel being taken from the Divisions would be used to form additional Divisions. General Taylor said that the savings would be offset to some degree, which cannot now be determined, by increases in corps and Army troops. The President said he would certainly think that the adoption of the new Divisions, based on fuller use of modern fire-power, would make possible over-all personnel reductions.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 6, 1956

Others present: Secretary Hoover
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Hoover handed the President a message from Secretary Dulles reporting on his Suez meetings in New York on October fifth. Referring to the passage reporting the Secretary's discussion with Shepilov, the President said he was glad the Secretary had thrown Shepilov's words "into his teeth." Mr. Hoover left the message for the President.

Mr. Hoover next showed the President a copy of a note from Nehru to the Secretary giving his ideas how further action might proceed. Later, State Department sent over a copy of this note.

In the course of discussion, the President said he thought Secretary Dulles can go along with the British so long as it is understood that what is being put forward now is simply a proposal, and that we stand ready to take it into negotiation. The President felt there must be some kind of international participation in any acceptable solution, so that the whole power of control of the use of the Canal is not left to one little country. He did not feel that all the details could or should be spelled out in the treaty. He felt that a broad provision on the powers of a general manager might be of central importance -- for example, the board (which would have international representation) might have authority to disapprove the actions of the manager by a majority vote, and fire him by a two-thirds vote. The manager must, however, have the operating authority subject to these controls.

Mr. Hoover next reported that the Egyptians seemed to be trying to split off the U. S. from the U. K. and France, using the American press in the process. The President indicated he might have himself fostered, at an early stage in this incident, one of the ideas they are now using -- that of a private consortium. Mr. Hoover saw merit in a management group coming in to operate the Canal as had been done with the oil fields in Iran. The Egyptians appeared to be suggesting this in an effort to split us off from our allies. If something like this were done, it should be formalized in a treaty, in which our Allies would join. The President indicated that there might be merit in commercial users making a deal with Egypt (possibly including the deepending and improvement of the Canal) with the arrangement confirmed by the treaty. While there was some question whether the French would want a peaceful solution, the British might accept it.

The President saw the development of the matter in terms of our offering SCUA as our proposal, Egypt making a counterproposal, and then trying to reach agreement.

Mr. Hoover referred to the visit of a group with one of our agencies on how to topple Nasser. He questioned whether this is the time to attempt this. The President said that an action of this kind could not be taken when there is as much active hostility as at present. For a thing like this to be done without inflaming the Arab world, a time free from heated stress holding the world's attention as at present would have to be chosen.

Summarizing, the President said he was highly pleased to have the Secretary's report. He thought we could go along with the U. K. and France in presenting the proposal. However, if there is any "give" on the other side, we should try to work for constructive negotiations.

Mr. Hoover reported that the studies of super-tanker development looked quite good. The optimum size might be 60,000-65,000 tons; these could transit the Canal empty and round the Cape when loaded. The key to this effort might be a statement by the Government guaranteeing to take the tankers off the shipbuilders' hands if they are unable to dispose of them otherwise.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 5, 1956, 2:30 PM

Others present: Acting Secretary Reuben Robertson
Assistant Secretary Gordon Gray
Admiral Radford
Assistant Secretary Walter Robertson
Mr. Karl Bendetsen
Colonel Goodpaster

The meeting was concerned with the subject of Mr. Bendetsen's negotiations with the Philippines concerning U. S. bases and base rights in that country. The President asked Mr. Bendetsen for his assessment of what the Filipinos were seeking.

Mr. Bendetsen said that the principal problems as shaping up relate to jurisdiction over personnel, duration of the agreement, customs controls, and acquisition of additional land. The Filipinos have seen that the United States has concluded agreements with other countries on terms more favorable to those countries than have been offered to the Filipinos. Their approach has been one of hard bargaining throughout these negotiations.

In response to a question by the President as to what additional land is being sought, Admiral Radford said that the problem arises with regard to the delineation of the boundaries both at Subic Bay and in the Clark Field-Stotsenburg area. Definite, agreed boundaries for the reservations do not exist, and the Filipinos are considering the process of establishing such boundaries as "land acquisition." The President expressed himself in favor, and all present concurred, of giving up all other base areas in the Philippines (retaining in some cases rights of access in case of emergency). Facilities in Manila and Sangley Point were specifically mentioned.

With regard to the problem of customs, Mr. Bendetsen said it is planned for us to cut down drastically on the number of PX cards in the hands of Filipinos (former members of the Philippine Scouts, and widows of Scouts in some cases, still hold such cards).

On the matter of duration of the agreement, Mr. Bendetsen said that the Philippine Constitution, although not completely clear on the point, may render invalid any agreement for more than twenty-five years. The President thought the matter of duration might be tied to the present world situation, with provision for renegotiation in event of a major favorable change. He thought it also might be tied to the duration of our trade agreement which gives special advantages to the Philippines. (Others present pointed out that it has not been considered too desirable to take the position of "buying" base concessions with unrelated concessions by the United States.) The President felt that it would be best to try to handle the base question as one "package" in light of the way the Filipinos are reportedly conducting the negotiations (they have a negotiating committee from their Congress, and as one point is conceded by the U. S. team, more are raised by the Filipinos.) Secretary Walter Robertson said that he felt there has now been worked out on the U. S. side what looks to be a satisfactory packet for Mr. Bendetsen to present to the Filipinos.

The President said he felt we should definitely get out of the Manila port and city area, and thus remove an irritation to the Filipinos. He felt Magsaysay should be told that we want to work together cooperatively for mutual benefit security-wise and economically, but with a clear understanding that if the Filipinos do not think that cooperation with us is to their advantage, we are prepared to terminate our base agreements and trade concessions.

There was discussion as to the handling of the base agreement with the Congress. Walter Robertson considered that appropriate Congressional authorities should be contacted and kept informed at the present time. The President said he would think that the negotiations should be subject to approval in accordance with Constitutional procedures of the two countries, and indicated that he would see advantage in formalizing the agreement as a treaty or executive agreement.

The President signed a letter to Magsaysay recommended to him by Secretary Reuben Robertson, who stated that Secretary Dulles concurred.

A. J. Goodpaster
Colonel, CE, U S Army

Addendum:
On the matter of jurisdiction over personnel, there was general discussion and indicated agreement concerning the desirability of adhering as closely as possible to the arrangements elsewhere in the world; otherwise continuing competition by countries concerned must be expected.

Subject: Appointment with the President, 11:15 am-Disabled American Veterans

--Major Omer W. Clark, Director of Legislative Service
-- Cicero F. Hogan, Director of Claims

Mr. Joseph Burke, National Commander, DAV, Major Omer Clark and Mr. Cicero F. Hogan met with the President. After the President greeted the group, he asked Commander Burke where he had served -- noticing that he had lost an arm. Mr. Burke advised the President that he had served as a sergeant in the Signal Corps and had been injured at Salerno. He also stated that he had stood in review when the President visited his outfit in North Africa.

Commander Burke presented the President with a bound volume of the resolutions adopted by the 35th National Convention of the DAV, and mentioned in particular the resolution that referred to the retention of the "presumptive clause" under existing laws. The President stated that he had always been in favor of adequate compensation for those totally disabled as a result of their military service, for those who had suffered injury as a result of their service, and for adequate compensation for dependents of those men who lost their lives as a result of military service.

An explanation of the "presumptive clause" was given the President by Mr. Burke who stated that this particular provision of the law had been recommended for curtailment by the Bradley Commission. By way of explanation, Section 200 of the WW I Veterans Act provided that any veteran who suffered from tuberculosis, neuropsychosis, amebic dysentery, or encephalitis should be presumed to have acquired the disability in service if it existed to a 10% or more degree prior to January 1, 1925. Veterans of WW II were not given the same benefit as the GI Bill provides that veterans suffering with tuberculosis or nervous disorders must establish their disability to a 10% or more degree three years after their discharge from active service.

The President stated that he had given his views in a letter to Cooper T. Holt, Commander-in-Chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and he asked that I make a copy of this letter available to Commander Burke (copy sent.).

Photographs were taken of the President seated at his desk and standing with the Commander.

Such a visit would include the Air Force Bases in Morocco, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Turkey, Iraq, and Iran. A formal request has been made of Secretary of Defense Wilson who is giving every cooperation to Commander Carmen. MEMORANDUM FOR MR. ALBERT TONER

SUBJECT: Item for Inclusion in Today's Staff Notes

Last April 27, after Cabinet discussion, you approved the establishment of a Committee on User Charges to analyze the Government's helter-skelter practices of charging (or not charging) fees for certain Government services. As part of its regular follow-up, the Cabinet Secretariat recently requested a status report from the Committee (chaired by Budget) and as further follow-up an officer of the Cabinet Secretariat sits with the Committee as an observer.

An illustrative thorny problem here is: Should a fee be charged for licenses which permit shippers to market plant or animal products otherwise quarantined to prevent disease? On the one hand, the license is a special benefit to the shipper but, on the other hand, is al part of a Federal program in the general public interest... The agencies involved are naturally reluctant to see charges imposed which would hamper such programs.

The Committee will first try to develop principles on the basis of which these and similar questions can be resolved. After licenses, the Committee plans to examine charges for testing and inspections, maps and charts, publications, use of money and credit, use of transportation facilities, use of public land (including grazing, mineral rights, recreation and tourist facilities).

The Committee is now meeting weekly and plans to submit principles and specific recommendations to the Cabinet in time for developing legislative proposals at the next session of the Congress.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Honorable Maxwell M. Rabb
Secretary to the Cabinet
The White House

Subject: Activities of the Interdepartmental Committee on User Charges

On September 22, you requested a status report of the results of the deliberations of the Interdepartmental Committee on User Charges thus far.

The Committee, consisting of representatives from the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Interior, and Treasury and the Bureau of the Budget, is in the process of developing a set of principles and policies covering charges for certain Government services and products and a course of action for implementing those principles and policies. It is approaching this problem by selecting the licensing activity as the first area of consideration. With respect to this activity, the Committee is now considering the philosophy of user charges, the basis of determining costs and fees, the disposition of receipts, and the methods of implementing a program for uniform and equitable user charges. After principles and policies have been established for the licensing activity, the Committee plans to examine user charges for testing and inspections, maps and charts, publications, use of money and credit, use of transportation facilities, special studies, use of public land including grazing, mineral leases, and recreation and tourist facilities.

Each agency represented on the Committee has provided the services of one full-time representative to serve as the Committee staff. The staff is engaged in developing the background for Committee discussion in each user charge area. The Committee expects to include its recommended policies and principles for each area in its report to the President.

The Committee had a late start due to vacation schedules and important commitments on the part of the Committee members. It is now meeting weekly to try to overcome that handicap. We plan to meet the time schedule established by the Cabinet, which calls for the development of such legislative proposals as may be required in time for submission to the next session of the Congress.

SUBJECT: Honorable Jacob Javits' Appointment with the President
October 2, 1956

The President and Mr. Javits discussed the political situation in New York (Mr. Javits is Republican Senatorial candidate running against Democratic Senatorial candidate Robert Wagner).

Mr. Javits indicated that he was working throughout the State. He stated that New York City looked better than he had anticipated and that there is great interest in the election there. He further stated that one of the weaknesses would be the failure to get out the vote in Upper New York State and that he would do everything he could along these lines.

There was some discussion of the positions that Javits would take if he were elected to the Senate. He stated that, whereas there may be some individual situations where he would differ with the President, the President could count on him to support wholeheartedly the principles and philosophy of the President's program.

The President authorized Mr. Hagerty to state to the Press that he needed Mr. Javits in the Senate and hoped that he would be elected in November.

MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD

SUBJECT: Senator Herman Welker's Appointment with the President
October 2, 1956

The President and Senator Welker discussed political matters. Senator Welker advised the President that the situation with respect to the senatorial races in the Midwest was tight. He indicated that McKay had a good chance but that Langlie was in very bad shape. He further indicated that Bennett was in some trouble but felt that it was nothing that could not be corrected by Election Day.

Welker indicated that he was in some trouble but felt that he could handle the situation. Part of his trouble stems from the fact that his opponent is a young personable chap which makes it more difficult for Welker to attack him directly.

Senator Welker did not mention the question of the possibility of the President going to Idaho but agreed that he would leave that in my hands. I gave him no encouragement but did tell him that I would see that the matter is carefully considered.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
October 2, 1956

Others present: Secretary Dulles
Mr. MacArthur
Mr. Elbrick
Secretary Robertson
Secretary Gordon Gray
Mr. McNeil
Admiral Radford
Colonel Goodpaster

The meeting was concerned with views relating to any reduction of U. S. force strength in Europe, and possible statements to NATO regarding such reduction and related matters, including questions of NATO strategy raised by the British and French.

The President opened by saying that he felt very definitely that we cannot take divisions out of Europe at this time. The effect on Adenauer would be unacceptably damaging. He could not agree with a Defense position contemplating such reductions, and statements to this effect at this time. He recalled that he had always supported the idea of reducing our forces after the initial period of crisis was over -- he had always considered that they had been sent over to add strength temporarily while European forces were developed. Referring to recent reference indicating that Senator George had implied a sixth division might be established in Europe out of manpower saved through streamlining, he indicated that these comments seemed to reflect a misunderstanding. He did not plan to go above five divisions, but he did feel that the strength should be maintained at five divisions.

The President went on to say that we must make use of every art of statecraft to bring the Europeans to an understanding of our way of thinking regarding our forces there, but for the moment we could not remove major units. He felt we should examine closely all of our other high priority programs. He mentioned the earth satellite, initially estimated to cost $22 million, now at $60 million, with this latter figure "only a beginning." He noted that we had not yet dropped any of the four lines of development of ballistic missiles. (Secretary Robertson pointed out the figure is now five.) He referred to the major programs of the Air, the Navy, ground forces, and Marines, and thought we should look them all over.

Secretary Robertson said that to get within a reasonable budgetary range, it appears we must be ready to go down to a strength of about 2.6 million. Careful studies are being made with the aim of cutting overhead. The President broke in to say he agreed strongly on cutting overhead, and particularly on cutting down the strength of the Army division. Secretary Robertson said that even if we were to cut out 4,000 men per division in Europe, and make reductions in administrative overhead and support, plus reductions in tactical air strength, and reduction in families accordingly, it will be hard to find the needed savings. He said he wants to keep digging. The President said he has felt since the first atom bomb was dropped that the infantry division should be substantially cut -- it shouldn't be over 12,000 men. He felt that support echelons could be cut down (not incorporating all of the units cut out of the division) since it would be possible to deploy some support units in time of war.

Secretary Robertson thought we should tell our allies what we are doing. Information would, in any event, leak out during the budget hearings.

The President said he had always insisted that the Europeans should develop ground forces to replace ours. Also he had supported off-shore procurement so that they would develop an ability to produce capital equipment and not depend entirely on us. As events developed in the past, however, there was always an unwillingness to put the matter squarely to the Europeans and now it has become extremely difficult.

Admiral Radford said that the trends discussed in the Defense paper are well reflected in NATO papers going back all the way to 1950. It is apparent that Adenauer has not read these papers. Admiral Radford referred to the problem of cutting off spare parts. Each time this has been proposed, it has been necessary to postpone this action.

Secretary Dulles said that we must be fairly specific in our ideas very soon, because the NATO Council will be taking this matter up. He proceeded to a discussion of the points in Section II of his memorandum to the President dated October 1, 1956. There was general agreement on the desirability of streamlining our forces in Europe, and paragraph 3 of the Secretary's memo was revised to meet the views of the Defense representatives.

There was next discussion of paragraph 2 which also resulted in some revision to make it acceptable to the whole group. In the discussion, Admiral Radford said the original version overstated the U K position. They were simply adopting the new look, which we had already adopted. Secretary Dulles indicated that it was one thing for us to rely on the new look, not being subject to insurrectionary or conventional attack as the Europeans are, and it is something elsé to propose it for the Europeans.

The President next suggested that we should send someone to discuss these matters with Adenauer, whose understanding of the problem is apparently incomplete and possibly in error in some respects. An explanation should be given as to how we plan to use atomic weapons. Admiral Radford agreed that this would be useful and said he would like to do it himself sometime. The President thought it might be well to have the discussion before General Gruenther comes back since he has Adenauer's confidence.

Admiral Radford next pointed out the tremendous increase in the fire-power of military units that has occurred over the last several years -- with one division having a strength much greater than many divisions had in the past. A good deal of cutting down could be considered. Secretary Robertson suggested that streamlining would not go far enough; further cuts would be required. The President thought that substantial savings could be found through streamlining, but that reduction in number of divisions does not look practicable at this time.

Admiral Radford referred to paragraph 10 of the Secretary's memo, and indicated he pre-judged the matter on which a position had not yet been developed in the U. S. government. The Secretary and the President pointed out that the proposal seemed to go beyond the scope of the treaty and its legislative history. Admiral Radford said the Chiefs see some merit in the proposal. It is now up for consideration in a Standing Group paper, and the United States has reserved its position in the matter. The President indicated that the matter could be brought up for consideration, including consideration of possible treaty revision, and suggested an amendment which would leave the matter open for this purpose. No further objections were indicated to the outline of presentation set forth in the Secretary's memorandum.

MEMORANDUM FOR MR. TONER

Subject: Report Note for the President

At Cabinet last January 27, the President gave a green light to Secretary McKay's and Director Wirth's ten-year development plan for the National Parks -- known as MISSION 66. The President specifically asked: Could some of the MISSION 66 work be started immediately?

A White House Staff member was camping in some of the National Parks this summer and reports that actual construction of additional campgrounds, buildings, utilities and the expansion of interpretative services for the public has in fact been underway during the summer. At evening campfire programs this was being pointed out to the public as "part of the MISSION 66 development, initiated by President Eisenhower."

1. Fingerprinting Visitors. -- Justice has concluded that the Immigration Act requires non-official visitors to be fingerprinted. State expects Justice to recommend legislation abolishing this requirement. To broaden East-West contacts in the meantime, State will continue its liberal yet discriminating grants of official visas for which fingerprinting is unnecessary. (C)

2. European Economic Problems. -- An extraordinary OEEC Ministerial Meeting will be held early in November to consider coordinated measures against the threat to European prosperity posed by internal inflation and external imbalance of trade. France and the United Kingdom, for example, have suffered severe inflation and are running trade deficits, while Germany shows a trade surplus of about $1 billion a year. (U)

3. Corruption Charges. -- Olin Johnson's Senate Post Office Committee will begin hearings October 8 on his charges of "job selling, bribery, and other improper political influence" involving "persons in mighty high positions in the Administration and Republican Party." Post Office reports that these unspecified charges were first made in October of 1955 and appear primarily to involve a Republican fund solicitation letter which H. J. Porter, National Committeeman from Texas and a Post Office advisor on appointments, sent to some Texas persons including some Post Office employees and job applicants. Although Justice concluded last October that a complete FBI investigation disclosed no illegality, the incident could prove embarrassing. To allow more time for planning a rebuttal, Senator Carlson, the ranking Republican member of the Committee, and the minority counsel will insist that Johnson state the particulars of his charges; if necessary, Senators Curtis and Jenner will be encouraged to join this demand. I just finished a conversation with the Tunisian Prime Minister, Mr. Habib Bourguiba.

I was struck by his sincerity, his intelligence and his friendliness. He is grateful for the help we have given him from surplus foods, particularly wheat. He says that, in addition, his country needs of course a great deal of technical assistance.

He gave as his biggest problem the existence of the French-Algerian war. He came back again and again to the expressed hope that the United States could find some way to mediate in that useless struggle. He claimed that France would have to concede very little in order to settle the proposition; on questioning, he expressed the belief that an arrangement like the British Commonwealth of Nations between France and Algeria, to become effective within a given number of years, would be most acceptable to the Algerians.

He says that if we could get this war settled, all the Western World would have a very much finer relationship with North Africa and indeed with the Arab world.

He said that the Jewish-Arab quarrel was no concern of theirs -- they are not affected by it.

I assured him of America's friendliness, and particularly of its desire to deal directly with each one of the Moslem countries in the effort to promote our common interests.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

Subject: Your Appointment with Tunisian Prime Minister at 11:00 A.M., November 21.

The visit of the Tunisian Prime Minister, Mr. Habib Bourguiba, will be for courtesy purposes. He has indicated that he does not intend to raise any substantive matters.

You may wish to have the following background considerations in mind concerning our present relationship with Tunisia:

1. Franco-Tunisian relations have been greatly strained since the recent French interception of five Algerian nationalist leaders who were flying to Tunis for a meeting with the Prime Minister of Tunisia and the Sultan of Morocco. As a result, there has been a setback to the conclusion of new agreements between the newly independent Tunisia and France regarding financial and defense cooperation.

2. Tunisia has informally asked us for economic and technical assistance. We have indicated our agreement in principle, pointing out, however, that any United States assistance will be limited and advising Tunisia that it should continue to look to France for the greater part of its external aid.

3. In a recent public radio broadcast, the Prime Minister spoke in support of the United States position on the Middle East crisis and at the same time castigated "brutal and inhuman" Soviet intervention in Hungary. He also spoke most effectively in expressing appreciation for the surplus wheat we recently made available to Tunisia, pointing out particularly that this aid was given without strings and from motives of friendship and humanitarianism.

4. In general, United States stock is high in Tunisia and that country is friendly toward the West, due in large measure to the moderate and pro-Western orientation of Mr. Bourguiba.

The President dictated the following - - after saying, we just had a very important conference (attending Hoover, Humphrey, and part of time Andy Goodpaster and Jim Hagerty).

MEMORANDUM

(1) Information, not yet official, indicates that both Israel and Egypt have now fully accepted the terms of the United Nations cease-fire plan, and that peaceful conditions should prevail soon in the Mid East.

(2) If the above hope is borne out by events of the next day or so, we should be promptly ready to take any kind of action that will minimize the effects of the recent difficulties and will exclude from the area Soviet influence.

(3) Measures to be taken under these elements, would be:

(a) Rapid restoration of pipe line and Canal operation. This might have to be done almost wholly by American technical groups, but I should think that we might also mobilize some people from Germany and Italy. This work should begin instantly.

(b) Push negotiations under the United Nations so as to prevent renewed outbreak of difficulty.

(c) Provide to the area, wherever necessary, surplus foods, and so on, to prevent suffering.

(4). Simultaneously we must lay before the several governments information and proposals that will establish real peace in the area and, above all, to exclude Communist influence from making any headway therein. There are a number of things to do.

One of the first is to make certain that none of these governments fails to understand all the details and the full implications of the Soviet suppression of the Hungarian revolt. We should, I think, get all the proof that there is available, including moving pictures taken of the slaughter in Budapest.

We must make certain that every weak country understands what can be in store for it once it falls under the domination of the Soviets.

And beyond this, however, are the constructive things that we can do once these nations understand the truth of the immediately preceding paragraph.

For example, we can provide Egypt with an agreed-upon amount of arms -- sufficient to maintain internal order and a reasonable defense of its borders, in return for an agreement that it will never accept any Soviet offer.

We should likewise provide training missions.

We can make arrangements for starting the Aswan Dam on a basis where interest costs would be no higher than the money costs ourselves. This, of course, would be contingent upon Egypt negotiating faithfully on the Suez Canal matter and in accordance with the six principles laid down by the United Nations.

We could assist with technicians in the repair of damage done in Egypt in the late unpleasantness and could even make an economic loan to help out.

In Israel we could renew the compact (Eric Johnston plan) and take up again the 75 million dollar economic loan that they desire.

We could possibly translate the tripartite statement of May 1950 into a bilateral treaty with each of the countries in this area.

We could make some kind of arms agreement -- particularly maintenance and training -- with Israel of exactly the same type we could make with Egypt.

We could explore other means of assisting the Arab States of Iraq, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Lebanon, and develop ways and means of strengthening our economic and friendly ties with each of these countries, either on a bilateral or group basis.

The President had top secret meeting with the Secretary of Defense, Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Chairman, Atomic Energy Commission, and others. He dictated the following:

"I approved today the Joint Chief of Staff's plan for the disposal to bases, fields and ships afloat all the present atomic stock pile, nuclear and fission.

"I informed the Chairman of the Chiefs of Staff that (a) the State Department should be in agreement with all disposal involving overseas bases, and (b) today's dispersal should mark the approximate number of those to be maintained permanently in the field. The bulk of those manufactured hereafter (except for air defense types) should be kept in United States reserve stocks."

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 25, 1956

Others present: Secretary Hoover
Mr. MacArthur
Mr. Hagerty
Colonel Goodpaster

The group first discussed the proposal for a visit of a group of Hungarian refugees to meet the President on Monday morning. The President approved the visit.

The President then asked Mr. Hoover if he saw any reason why the President should not go ahead with his planned trip to Augusta, and Mr. Hoover said he saw no reason, and that Mr. Dulles -- whom he had seen the day before -- likewise saw no reason. Mr. Hoover added that Secretary Dulles is planning to stop at Augusta on Sunday, December 2, on his way north.

Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacArthur said they have information that the French are now ready to accept a proposal to give to the U N the power to determine when their forces should leave the Canal zone. They added that we are now hoping to get the U K to do the same.

Mr. Hoover next discussed the critical situation and pressures developing regarding Europe's need for oil. He felt it was necessary to start the emergency committee in action very soon. The President recalled that we have held up this measure until the invading powers accepted immediate withdrawal of their troops. The President thought that, if the action is taken, there should be a careful statement bringing out that, with winter coming on, and in order to prevent widespread suffering in Europe, committees are being put into operation to see how fuel can be provided to relieve the situation. Mr. Hoover reaffirmed that he felt we should now go ahead with our actions on oil.

Mr. Hoover said that, in his talks with Secretary Dulles, the latter had indicated that in the Middle East -- Jordan, Syria, Iraq, etc. -- he thought we must go to the British and ask for an indication of their thinking as to what is now to be done. The President thought the British should say now that as soon as they have withdrawn from the Suez they are prepared to honor past commitments, participate in joint projects involving aid, etc. Mr. Hoover thought it might be necessary for us to approach the British and say that it looks as though they are "through" in the area, and ask if they want us to try to pick up their commitments. The President said we do not want to get in the position of automatically assuming a set of past patterns. He thought we should give the British every chance to work their way back into a position of influence and respect in the Middle East.

Mr. Hoover said that the Soviets are "putting on the screws" as regards traffic from the Suez to West Berlin. After discussion the President said he thought Bohlen should see the Soviet authorities in Moscow and make the strongest possible protest, recalling that they once created a situation which got very close to war by similar activities.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 21, 1956; 10:00 A. M.

Others present: Secretary Hoover, Mr. Bowie, Secretary Wilson, Admiral Radford, Admiral Strauss, Governor Stassen, Mr. Peaslee, Mr. Wm. Jackson, Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Stassen took up the elements of his proposal paragraph by paragraph. He said that paragraphs A, D and E have been concurred in by State, AEC, and Defense. He commented, regarding paragraph E, that if paragraph A is established, the U.S., the USSR, and the U.K. would then transfer in successive proportionate increments some of the fissionable material in the atomic weapons stockpiles over to peaceful uses in future years.

Mr. Stassen said that paragraph F regarding tests has also been concurred in by State, AEC and Defense. Mr. Stassen said that on numerous points Mr. Murray of AEC had filed an individual dissent, which was set forth on page "M". Admiral Strauss said that he concurred in the proposal, although recognizing that there is some sacrifice of readiness. The President suggested changing the phrase "to strictly limit" to "to limit or eliminate."

Governor Stassen said that paragraph I regarding right of withdrawal from the agreement had also been concurred in by State, AEC and Defense. The President questioned the thought underlying the provision for withdrawal without cause. There was discussion regarding the possible appearance of lack of sincerity in concluding the agreement, regarding the necessity not to bind ourselves, and regarding the international difficulties in withdrawal or denunciation of the treaty in case of necessity. Some amendment to remove the reference to "without cause" was agreed upon, but it was also agreed that the amendment should anticipate the possibility of a warning of intent to file notice of withdrawal for cause.

Governor Stassen next indicated that paragraph L, giving provisions for the handling of Communist China in this matter, had been concurred in by State, AEC and Defense. Mr. Hoover suggested, and the group agreed, that the reference be enlarged to cover Soviet satellites and allies (i.e., not restricted to Communist China).

The group next considered paragraph J, on which there was a Defense dissent. The question was whether there should be progressive installation of the inspection system in conjunction with reduction of forces, or whether inspection should come first, with reduction beginning only when an effective inspection system was in operation.

The President said he thought the Defense position seemed unnecessarily rigid. He thought that inspection, by verifying where striking forces are, and their strength, would make it possible to undertake some reductions on a step by step basis. Admiral Radford said the Chiefs were afraid the reductions would be agreed upon and that we would carry out our part, but that world opinion would prevent us from making good our insistence on effective inspection. The President said he would be willing to say that every reduction must have an inspection system to verify it. Mr. Wilson indicated he was willing to take the limited risk in going down to a strength of 2.5 million. The President said that what he had in mind was a sequence of first exchanging blueprints, then inspecting to verify the blueprints, then agreeing to make certain reductions in forces, then inspecting to verify these reductions, etc. Mr. Wilson brought out that we may not achieve a perfect system of inspection, but we could make the chances very great that any substantial violation would be caught. Admiral Radford asked for assurance that the U. S. would make a unilateral determination of the adequacy of inspection, and the President said that was his clear understanding. As a modification to eliminate the strict sequence of steps, but to stress the need of inspection, the President and the others present indicated acceptance of the Defense "note" as an addition to the drafting conference revision.

Governor Stassen next took up paragraph H, relating to placing the Eisenhower and Bulganin proposals in effect. There were divergent views on this paragraph. The President recalled that he had suggested exchaning blueprints, and then conducting aerial photography to verify the good faith of each side. He said he did not for a moment consider that his proposal, together with Bulganin's, constituted a completely satisfactory inspection system. They would constitute a first step which would in turn make successive steps more feasible. With some editing to make clear the President's points, an agreed version was developed.

Governor Stassen then took up paragraph G, relating to long-range missiles. After discussion, the President suggested that the statement be recast giving the majority proposal the character of a short preface stating U. S. purposes, and then picking up Defense language as the means of carrying out these purposes.

Governor Stassen next took up paragraph B relating to the "atoms for police" proposal. He reported that all Departments were opposed to this proposal. He said that one of its purposes was to head off the development by other nations of atomic weapons. The President said he was inclined very much to agree with what Governor Stassen was seeking to do. He said, however, that, from his own experience in the early days of the U.N. efforts to set up a military force, he saw the practical problems that are involved. He thought he would agree to this proposal if it came from some other nation. He did not think it should be in a disarmament document, however. Also, he did not think that atomic weapons were suitable for policing purposes. All in all, he felt this proposal should be kept on ice for the present. Mr. Hoover stressed the importance of not mentioning this proposal publicly.

With regard to paragraph C, which is the NATO counterpart of "atoms for police," the Pres dent said he thought this action should be taken -- to give NATO a centrally held atomic capability -- but as a security, not as a disarmament measure. He said that timing would be very important in this regard.

Governor Stassen then took up paragraph K relating to consultation with Germany. There was feeling that now is not an appropriate time to raise problems relating to disarmament with the Germans. Mr. Stassen stated his view of the key importance of understanding by Adenauer and Germany of the U. S. policy. He spoke of the cable from Conant reporting the Adenauer-Senator Green talks. Mr. Stassen went on to discuss follow-up action. He thought that the U. S. should consult the U.K., France, and Canada separately. Mr. Hoover said that this should be done very quietly, and the President later suggested talking to the U.K. and Canada only at this time. With regard to Germany, Mr. Stassen said he thought we should say only, in very general terms, that we are not weakening ourselves through our disarmament plans at this time. The President thought we should stress with the Germans that nations can only exert influence in the world today from a position of strength. Until Germany gets to a position of reasonable strength it is too early to talk about disarmament. Mr. Hoover referred to the NATO talks beginning December 11th. He said we are anticipating a very sensitive and delicate situation there, and that it would be better not to raise disarmament questions with the French and the Germans prior to that conference.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 24 - 10:00 AM

Others present: Mr. Hollister
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Hollister first discussed the question of the amount of non-military aid which should be sought in next year's budget. He said that, although Budget has suggested a cut of 200 to 250 million dollars from the 1850 million dollar figure of last year, he and Mr. Hoover -- with whom he has been working closely -- are agreed that it would be a serious mistake to request the lower figure. The President said he not only strongly agreed, but even felt that there should be made available to him the authority to obligate up to 200 to 300 million dollars additional to this figure. Mr. Hollister said he has worked up a 300 million dollar unallocated reserve in his program, but would like to go to Congress for the same total amount as last year. The President said he thought this was the right thing to do.

Mr. Hollister next recalled the confusion that followed the bipartisan meeting last year in December, in which the Congressional Leaders did not apparently carry away an awareness of the size of the new obligational authority to be sought. In part, this resulted from incomplete presentations by the top men -- Secretary Dulles and Secretary Wilson in particular. He thought it was quite important to have them here for the full meeting this year. (At this point, the President asked me to find out if there was any possibility of starting the NATO meeting on December 10th instead of December 11th in order to have the group back from Paris on the 14th. I later learned from State that this proposal was not likely to prove practicable, and in the meantime the President decided to change the Leadership meeting to the 27th and 28th of December).

Mr. Hollister said he thought he should go ahead with the development of his program and presentation for next year, not waiting for the Fairless report. He said he was inclined to doubt whether anything substantial would be available from it. The President was a little surprised to hear this, but said he thoroughly agreed on going ahead. He asked Mr. Hollister to be sure to get any ideas that Mr. Fairless may have as the program goes to Congress, and incorporate them to the extent possible.

Mr. Hollister finally said he had come to the conclusion that his operation should be an integral part of the State Department. He knew of Secretary Dulles' reluctance to include "operating" functions in the Department. He commented on the coordinating work now being done by Mr. Hoover in support of Secretary Dulles. The President commented that Mr. Dulles, being a lawyer, likes to work alone a good deal. He personally was inclined to think that we may be moving toward a kind of super department, something like the Department of Defense, which might be headed by someone with the title of "First Secretary" who could take over a good many of the President's representational and coordinating functions.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 23 - 12:00 noon

Others present: Secretary Hoover
Mr. MacArthur
Colonel Goodpaster

I joined the meeting a few minutes after it had begun. Mr. Hoover was saying that State's study indicated that it would not be possible to set a time table of precise dates. The President said he agreed, but what he was looking for was the sequential order in which certain conditions might be expected to develop or be created. Mr. Hoover said that they did believe that this could be prepared.

Mr. Hoover next reported to the President regarding U. S. action on two resolutions affecting the Suez. The first of these is being put in by the Secretary General, and we intend to support it. The second is an Afro-Asian resolution, which tends to embarrass Britain; on this we plan to abstain. The President pointed out that, if the Secretary General's resolution carries, the second one is not necessary.

Mr. Hoover said that State is exerting all possible pressure to get the U N forces into the Suez. Hammarskjold is progressing slowly -- now planning to take until about December 7th, and we are trying to accelerate the movement.

Mr. Hoover said he planned to have Ambassador Caccia in for a talk regarding the latter's query whether we were going to consult with the British. He proposed to say that we have consulted steadily. On their side, they have maintained practically a blackout for the last five weeks, and have not consulted us in advance of decisions or actions. Mr. Hoover said he will ask if they intend to start consulting us now. The President said he should stress that we are avoiding anything that can be interpreted as abandoning the U N position.

Mr. Hoover said the oil situation is becoming very critical. European countries are feeling the pressure, and are putting pressure on us. Although the companies are doing a good job, efficiency is below what it could be with pooling. The psychological factor -- the feeling of the Europeans as to whether we are supporting them or not -- is assuming major importance. In his opinion we can only delay for another 24 hours or so. He said that we have sent background information to all of our embassies, giving special emphasis to elements of our policy as the different areas require. The President said he thought Mr. Hoover should tell Caccia that the first thing we must all give our attention to is helping out on oil. But in order to do that, we must stay 4-square with the U N, so Britain must take some preliminary actions. He was certain that we should tell King Saud as the British take certain actions we feel that we should take certain measures of support. He thought this should be explained to all the Arab countries, excepting Egypt. Mr. Hoover referred to reports that Egypt had called on Saud to supply a quantity of oil, and to pay for it out of his own funds, and that Saud was doing so.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LIBRARY

The President thought that we are in a period in which we can strengthen our bilateral arrangements with the various Arab countries, not being so bound as in the past by the Arab-Israel dispute. These might tend to bring Egypt into an appropriate role. He would be prepared to take some bold constructive action in this regard. Mr. Hoover said that Egypt has been caught instigating violence in Libya and Lebanon, and there was discussion of the possibility of inducing those countries to break off diplomatic relations with Egypt.

Mr. Hoover said that Defense wants to put some U.S. jet fighter units into Iraq, and he thought this had not been agreed in last night's meeting. The President said he had felt that there might be some U.S. jet-trained officers in the MAAG, and that we might furnish some interceptors, as an offset to Syrian aircraft of Russian origin. He had felt the action might be acceptable if it were done as a training enterprise. After further discussion, there was tentative agreement that it might be possible to help Iraq indirectly by re-equipping a Turkish squadron with the latest type interceptors.

Mr. Hoover said he had done some reorganizing within the Department, providing for the delegation of operations after the policy had been set at the top. He mentioned Mr. MacArthur, Mr. Henderson, Mr. Murphy and Mr. Phleger as those to whom such delegations have been made.

AGRICULTURE

1. Farm Income. -- The Agricultural Outlook Conference, which meets in Washington next week, will be told that "Farm operators' realized net income turned up in 1956 following four consecutive years of decline and current prospects point to some further increase in 1957." (U)

2. Cotton Exports. -- Cotton exports for the 1956-57 season may be about 6.5 million bales, compared with 2.2 million in 1955-56. Some of the increase results from a rebuilding of stocks abroad on account of the Middle Eastern situation. (U)

3. Drought. -- Considerable rain and snow have fallen over much of the drought area since mid-October. The improved situation - except in parts of Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, and Nevada - is reflected in better morale and fewer requests for aid. (U)

Not enough to change basic situation as yet.

FISCAL AFFAIRS

4. Tax Exempt Organizations. -- Next week Secretary Humphrey will testify upon difficulties in administering the revenue provisions relating to tax exempt organizations. The statutes do not, for example, adequately define such terms as "educational", "social welfare", and "propaganda". The Secretary will emphasize Treasury's exclusive concern with proper administration and not with "witch hunting." (U)

5. Tight Money. -- Since GSA and Post Office have been unable to get lease-purchase agreements at the 4 per cent interest rate approved by Congressional Committees, construction of these projects with appropriated funds is being considered. As compared with lease-purchase,

6. Foreign Understanding of Military Assistance Programs. -- Comments by Chiefs of 27 Military Assistance Advisory Groups on the extent to which objectives and accomplishments of U. S. Military Assistance Programs are understood in recipient countries indicate: (a) generally good understanding by government officials and influential citizens; (b) limited-to-fair press understanding; (c) only an awareness with little or no knowledge of details by the general public; and (d) a good understanding by the armed forces, achieved through contact with MAP equipment, personnel, and U. S. trained associates. An Army analysis adds that (a) MAP publicity may be affected by recipient government reluctance to display military or economic weakness, detract from national prestige, or fully inform its citizens; (b) government officials and recipient country press organs may distort or delete MAP information, accomplishments or announced programs to suit their purposes. Understanding might be increased by lowering security classifications and eliminating wherever possible the "not releasable to foreign nationals" classification concerning MAP. (C)

7. P. L. 480. -- The Council on Foreign Economic Policy has recommended the extension of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act (P. L. 480) with a revision of Title III to allow barter with the Soviet Bloc when clearly in our interests. The Council also believes that the President should advise Congress of his opposition to permanent status for the legislation because of its conflict both with the Administration's foreign trade policy and with its desire to further the removal of Government from business. (U)

8. Afghanistan Army Officers. -- For the first time, at Afghan request, 7 Afghan Army officers will attend U. S. Army Service Schools in 1957. In addition, arrangements are being made for orientation visits for 3 more Afghans. (S)

9. North Atlantic Treaty Interpretation. -- The North Atlantic Council is considering the Turkish view that unauthorized Soviet over-flights constitute an armed attack under Article 5 of the Treaty. State believes that over-flights are not necessarily an "attack" and, furthermore, that it is neither possible nor desirable to anticipate determinations that would depend upon specific circumstances. (TS)

10. Syria and USSR. -- State finds no evidence confirming reports of a secret political treaty and military aid agreement between Syria and the USSR. Moreover, State has no evidence that Russia is committed to a massive build-up in Syria although we do expect continued Russian military support of the pro-Soviet Syrian regime. (TS)

11. Soviet Volunteers. -- After State informed the Egyptian Ambassador of our concern, the Ambassador telephoned Cairo and then told us that Egypt did not want volunteers from the Soviet Union. (C)

12. Maritime Screening Program. -- Since the Solicitor General decided not to seek Supreme Court review of an injunction directed against Coast Guard maritime screening procedures, some 1,800 seamen determined to be security risks under the former screening procedures will be permitted to return to sea. (U)

13. Water Resources and Public Works Policy. -- Because of apparent dissatisfaction with the stringency of Executive Branch review, two Senate Committees have asked the agencies for suggestions upon the review of public works proposals. Budget finds that the replies submitted for clearance generally support the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Water Resources Policy. (U)

The President opened the meeting saying it was for the purpose of gaining an understanding of the sequence of actions planned in the Middle East, and the means of dovetailing actions in the fields of oil and finance, for example, with these plans. The meeting was not intended to result in decisions. Mr. Hoover gave the President a preliminary document, which he stressed was not thoroughly co-ordinated or refined, outlining such steps, and the President read it to the assembled group, interspersing comments from time to time.

[redacted] He thought that we must make sure that Saudi Arabia, Iran, and Iraq at least are aware of what we are doing, and give their assent. We must explain a number of points to them very carefully. We must prevent the dissolution of Western Europe, and once withdrawal from the Suez has begun, we must let them know that we are going to aid Western Europe financially. We must stress the importance of restoring Saud's oil markets in Western Europe. If we raise output from the U.S., it will be very hard to cut back. It at all possible, we should use Buraimi as an ace in the hole. We must face the question, what must we do in Europe and then the question, how do we square this with the Arabs?

Mr. Hoover said that as soon as a major movement of French and British out of Suez begins, he felt sure we would see a relaxation throughout the area. The President thought we should not simply assume this, but should work out an understanding with the Arabs. Mr. Rountree thought a schedule showing a sequence of steps would be valuable. Mr. Phleger suggested that it seems likely the British Cabinet will decide to get the troops out of the Suez area. Mr. Humphrey said that our next step must be to get squared with the Arabs, once withdrawal has begun.

Mr. Robertson made a strong statement in behalf of U.S. adherence to the Baghdad Pact. He felt that Iraq, Iran, and perhaps Saudi Arabia would welcome such action, the latter particularly if it were tidd to an agreement on Buraimi. The President thought that if the British get us into the Baghdad Pact -- as the matter would appear to the Arabs -- we would lose our influence with the Arabs. The British could then take a very intransigent stand. He suggested the possibility of getting the British out of Buraimi; then we and the Saudis should declare our support for the Baghdad Pact.

Mr. Hoover said that timing is the key to the whole problem, and said that we might do well to make a declaration in support of the Pact, rather than joining it.

The President reiterated that we ought to approach the U.K. asking them to express readiness [redacted] This would give us something with which to work out further agreements with the Arabs. [redacted] He said he had talked to Mr. Anderson, and was planning for Mr. Anderson to go out next Tuesday.

Mr. Humphrey thought we should not let Butler and MacMillan come until after a talk with Saud had been conducted. Thus, we would establish our position, so that he would understand the British being here. Mr. Hoover said the essential step is that the British and French get out of Port Said. The President pointed out that this really had two parts -- the first when they start to leave, and the second when they are completely out.

Mr. Allen Dulles stressed that the situation is worsening very seriously in Iraq, and that Nuri may not be able to survive very long. There was discussion as to what could be done to bolster his position, with a consensus indicated that provision of some military aid, particularly radars, and possibly some U.S. air units, coupled with a statement of some sort in support of the Baghdad Pact nations, seemed to be a desirable plan. As to the relative importance of the Middle East and of Western Europe, culminating in statements by the President and Secretary Humphrey that the two must be considered together, and are together the most strategic area in the world -- Western Europe requires Middle Eastern oil, and Middle Eastern oil is of importance mainly through its contribution to the Western European economy.

Personal and [illegible]

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

There was discussion

Dr. Flemming said we must know soon about going ahead with our oil pooling. He could see the way clear to do this if the Arabs agreed, but if they did not, he wondered what our line of action would be. Mr. Hoover said that the Canal can be cleared to 25 feet within 30 days, according to British estimates. Mr. Humphrey said that more than oil is involved. The British are facing a financial crisis within ten days. He thought the sequence of events was this: the British will start out of Suez in a few days; the British will want to come over here a few days later, and this will be the time when we must bargain hard with them; between these dates we must let King Saud, and even Nasser, know that, in starting talks with the British, we have not reversed our stand toward them, and that we want an understanding with them prior to the British talks; by December 3rd our arrangements must be in hand, since this is the date of the British financial announcement.

Mr. Hoover said that we are dealing with slow moving Governments in the Middle East and we cannot expect quick results. He would try to give the Arabs the idea that we helped to get the British and the French out of Suez. The President said that the moment troops start out of Suez we should tell the Arabs that we are starting to confer with the Western Europeans on how soon we can restore Middle East oil markets in Western Europe.

The President finally asked whether there is anyone we can send out to Iraq to try to help out in that situation. He thought that we could perhaps help in Iraq by working through the Saudi Arabians. Mr. Rountree raised the possibility of a unilateral declaration in support of Iran and Iraq. He thought this would bolster these countries.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 20, 1956; 5:30 PM

Others present: Secretary Humphrey
Secretary Hoover
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Humphrey referred to cables from the United Kingdom indicating the possibility of a Cabinet change, and commented that, in his opinion, Butler would be the stronger of the two men being mentioned. The President said he has always thought most highly of MacMillan, who is a straight, fine man, and so far as he is concerned the outstanding one of the British he served with during the war.

Mr. Hoover showed the President a memorandum that had been drafted in State concerning the next steps in the Suez matter affecting Britain. He and the President thought the United States might say that the day the British agree to start withdrawing at once, Under Secretary Burgess will be over to see how the financial and economic problems can be faced.

Mr. Humphrey said he had made a study of what could be done to help financially if we were to decide to do so. The French can, through taking out their money in the World Bank and borrowing the same amount in addition, obtain about $260 million. The UK can obtain $560 million by the same method. The Export-Import Bank could establish a credit of $600 million with which the British could pay for exports from the United States to Britain. He said the British should definitely not go to U. S. banks to try to obtain the $600 million they want. There is not that much free money, and their attempt would simply throw the financial community into disorder. He indicated that the other countries in Western Europe (except for Italy to which some help could be given), are in good shape dollar-wise.

Mr. Hoover said that Ambassador Brosio had been in to see him, and had asked for the oil coming through the tapline for Italy. Mr. Hoover had told him he understood the OEEC was working on the basis of share and share alike, both as regards oil and dollar burden.

By EXH 9/3/81

Mr. Humphrey said that the key point in his mind was that we are in position to supply the "fig leaf" which the British say they need to cover their nakedness in withdrawing from the Suez. We can furnish dollars to meet stringent needs, providing they start to get out of the Suez at once.

The President thought that if we have confirmed that such help on our part would be acceptable to the Saudi-Arabians and to the Egyptians, we could say publicly that we would help out as soon as the French and the British agree to start getting out of Suez at once. Mr. Humphrey thought we should simply indicate this in an informal way to the British now, rather than publicly. The President thought we should say to Saud that as soon as the British and French start getting out, we would like to know that he is agreeable to our trying to restore the situation (including restoring his European markets). Mr. Hoover said we had better wait for the start of the British and French out-movement. To approach Saud now may be too early. He said that the problem is now one of delicate timing, and the President and Mr. Humphrey strongly agreed.

The President thought that Mr. Hoover should tell Aldrich of the sequence that is shaping up in our mind, and suggested that he advise Butler or MacMillan to get on the phone with Humphrey or Hoover tomorrow, and that the latter tell what could be done if the United States so decides -- and if the British and French promptly move to settle the Suez situation. Mr. Humphrey said we could say generally that we will be glad to supply the fig leaf and to support them financially.

The President said the sequence as he saw it was as follows: First, we are ready to talk about help as soon as the pre-condition (French and British initiation of withdrawal) is established; second, on knowing that the British and French forces will comply with a withdrawal undertaking at once, we would talk to the Arabs to obtain the removal of any objections they may have regarding the provision of oil to Western Europe; third, we will then talk the details of money-assistance with the British.

Mr. Hoover questioned whether the British might not have another idea in mind when they speak of the "fig leaf." They might want us to take the responsibility for obtaining some satisfaction internationally which they can then offer as their reason for leaving the Canal. Mr. Humphrey thought that if they have the idea we are receptive to a request for help that is all they are looking for. The President said we can simply couch our statement along the lines "on the assumption stated by MacMillan (that is, that they will announce at once an immediate withdrawal) they can be assured of our sympathetic consultation and help." Also that MacMillan can meet with him on that assumption. There was discussion as to how this could be conveyed to the British, considering the unknown relationship as between Butler and MacMillan at the present time. The President thought we could, through Aldrich, ask the Foreign Office to present the matter to the Government. The possibility of having Aldrich advise MacMillan and Butler together, privately, was also discussed. Mr. Humphrey thought we should try to find out from Aldrich whether he could meet with both without embarrassment. The President thought we could simply tell Aldrich we would assume that he could give the message to Butler and MacMillan. At this point the President put in a phone call for Aldrich. In further discussion, the President said we must keep the whole development on the basis of "their assumptions," not introducing conditions of our own. He saw merit in Burgess making the trip, and Mr. Hoover agreed.

THE DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LIBRARY

The President and the others saw the possibility of some blessings in disguise coming to Britain out of this affair, in the form of impelling them to accept the common market. The President said that Bech of Luxemburg, for whom he has the highest regard of any European statesman, said that if the EDC had come into existence when planned he felt sure there would have been no Suez problem, and no European problem now.

At this point the President's phone call to Aldrich came through, and the President asked him if he could talk to Butler and MacMillan, (Aldrich apparently said he could) and mentioned the possibility of Burgess making a trip in the next day or two.

After the phone call Mr. Humphrey said that we must talk to the Arabs soon, and tell them that we are putting great pressure on trying to get the troops out of Suez and we need their agreement to actions to bolster up Europe after this is done -- a selling job needs to be done, in which we would point out that the effect of our action is to re-establish their oil markets. He also wondered whether we could not approach Nasser and tell him that he will not get value out of the Canal as long as it cannot be used in confidence. Great efforts will be made to circumvent its use. He must re-establish confidence, and this can only be done through some acceptable form of international control. He could then increase his tolls and improve his income. Mr. Hoover said that the Canal income will be taken up in paying off the Canal Company, and in widening and deepening it. He did not think Nasser could be relied upon in any way. He said in fact that before this attack occurred the other Arab leaders were beginning to turn against him. The President recalled how he has stressed the importance of building up King Saud.

Mr. Hoover finally pointed out that if the British and French withdraw, Nasser must then come to an agreement with the U N, or the whole world would turn on him.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

On Thursday, November 15, 1956, the President met with their Eminences, Cardinals Mooney, Spellman, and McIntyre.

First, they heartily congratulated the President on his re-election.

Next, the Hungarian problem was discussed, and the President indicated clearly how he felt about the brutality visited on these people. The President spoke of Cardinal Mindszenty and the reason why the United States had not released his moving letter to the President - the reason being that had we released it, it could have been considered by the Russians as a political letter which would have placed the Cardinal's right of sanctuary in jeopardy and perhaps subjected him to being taken into custody by the Russians.

The Mideast problem was discussed, and the President explained what he was doing to prevent the possibility of a third world war. It was pointed out that the Catholic Bishops had fully backed the President in his search for peace.

Some of our educational problems were then discussed. Cardinal Spellman mentioned the petition for certiorari, the California case involving tax exemption of private schools, which was decided in favor of private schools. Cardinal Spellman had hoped the petition would not be granted. The President had not heard of the case and was interested in it.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 21 - 2:30 PM

Others present: Admiral Strauss
Secretary Robertson
Admiral Radford
General Loper
General Luedecke
Colonel Goodpaster

There was discussion of proposals for dispersal of nuclear weapons. A memorandum on the matter was shown to the President, and discussed with him. Charts showing the planned deployment were also shown and discussed.

The President stressed the desirability of having a considerable number of weapons in "safe reserve." If too many were in forward bases, our ability to strike back after attack might be endangered. Admiral Radford thought that attention could well be given to assuring greater safety of those intended for SAC units in this country.

There was discussion of the advisability of carrying weapons in aircraft during their changes in deployment.

The President said he thought we must distribute these weapons in accordance with the best judgment of the Joint Chiefs. He would assume that necessary State Department concurrence was obtained.

Following further discussion, Admiral Radford undertook to determine what percentage of the total destructive kilotonnage would be in the U.S. as against other areas.

INTERNATIONAL

1. NATO Baltic Naval Command Proposed. -- SACEUR has proposed to the NATO Standing Group the early establishment of an Allied Naval Command for the Baltic as a means of providing local NATO guidance during the German naval buildup. Only Denmark has yet to approve. Several of our embassies have commented that open German participation might frighten Poland and disturb the Finns. The Finns fear any move which might appear threatening to the Soviets and cause them to invoke their 1948 pact which provides for Finno-Soviet consultation leading to Soviet "assistance" in the event of a threat from Germany. In addition, the Swedish policy of freedom from great-power alliances would surely lead to a public protest even if they secretly welcomed the move. (TS)

2. Aid for Morocco and Tunisia. -- We are prepared in principle to provide Morocco and Tunisia with economic and technical assistance but not of the magnitude they are discussing with the French. In addition, we will coordinate aid programs with France. By informing all three governments of all of this, State hopes both to allay French apprehensions that we are supplanting them and to counteract the chronic suspicions of the two Arab states that we are "clearing" our actions with the French. (S)

3. Military Assistance for UK and France. -- Although we will continue scheduled MDAP deliveries to England and France, maintenance and spare parts for equipment in the Suez area are being discontinued except as necessary for the return of such equipment to the NATO area. (S)

4. Adenauer Suggests Washington Visit. -- Although no formal representations have been made, Chancellor Adenauer told Senator Green that his anxiety over present developments and their effect upon NATO make it important that he visit the President early in 1957. Senator Green replied that he felt sure that the Chancellor would be cordially welcomed. (S)

5. Bilateral Atomic Exchanges. -- State approved the initiation of negotiations with Argentina, Cuba, Uruguay, and Japan for standard agreements under which the U. S. would supply nuclear fuel for power reactors without exchanging classified information. Negotiations with other countries are being considered. (U)

COMMERCE AND TRADE

6. Commercial Investment Abroad. -- Commerce is now completing a survey of a large number of U. S. companies in Latin America which will provide, for the first time, the information necessary for a comprehensive and reliable appraisal of the economic effects of foreign investments and their mutual benefits to foreign countries and the U.S. (U)

7. Employment Situation. -- Labor surveys in 149 major metropolitan areas showed continued strong employment during the autumn in almost all sections of the country. Of the eleven major areas where unemployment has decreased, two in Connecticut had an overall labor shortage and four in the Midwest were removed from the substantial labor surplus list which was thus reduced to twenty major distressed areas. (U)

8. Unemployment Insurance. -- Labor will announce this week that the number of workers drawing unemployment insurance benefits during fiscal 1956 had sharply declined from the previous year. The total amount of payments also decreased although both the number of workers eligible for benefits and the value of the average weekly benefit eligibility reached all-time highs. (U)

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 19, 1956

Others present: Secretary Hoover
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Hoover reported that Secretary Dulles had been vigorous and in excellent spirits when he left for Florida. He had talked with Secretary Dulles by phone this morning, and Secretary Dulles already seemed to be getting a lot out of his stay there. The President said he was delighted, and asked Mr. Hoover whether he would like to make a quick flight down in the Columbine in a few days to meet with Mr. Dulles. Mr. Hoover said he would.

Mr. Hoover said that there are, in addition to a number of Prime Ministers, about thirty-eight friendly Foreign Ministers and seven or eight not so friendly who are here in the United States at the present time and all of the friendly ones, at least, would like to see the President. He was inclined to recommend, after having discussed the matter with the Secretary this morning, that the President see the Prime Ministers. He named Ceylon, Tunisia and Venezuela as the countries concerned (with regard to Venezuela, it is the Foreign Minister, but the visit has been scheduled for a long time).

The President said that in normal times, when Foreign Ministers are here singly, he likes to see them. He suggested that it might be possible for him to have a lunch for the Foreign Ministers, and Mr. Hoover said he would study this, or, as alternatives, a tea or a reception. The President indicated preference for the idea of a luncheon. Although nothing definite is scheduled, the President referred to the possibility that he might be away during some of the period between November twenty-fifth and December eighth.

The President told Mr. Hoover that Ambassador Luce had met with him this morning, and had shown extreme concern over the pattern of developments in Europe, and the possible need for radical action. The President said he had talked with her about her ideas and suggested to Mr. Hoover that he also talk with her, to set the ideas in a little broader perspective.

Mr. Hoover said he was inclined to feel that there has been some improvement in the general situation in the last day or two, although nothing marked as yet. He referred to indications of difficulties within the Soviet ruling group, and also to recent exchanges between ourselves and the Arab countries, including instructions to Wadsworth to give King Saud our thinking regarding the developing oil situation. The President reiterated strongly his feeling that we should be trying to build up Saud as an element of strength and stability in the Middle East.

Mr. Hoover reported that pressure is being generated by the British for large U N forces to go into Egypt. They evidently feel they need this action as a means of saving face regarding their own withdrawal from Port Said. Mr. Hoover said, in his opinion, we must back up Hammarskjold regarding U N insistence that the British and French withdraw very strongly. The President said that when the U N forces go in to the area, so long as they are of reasonable size -- enough to prevent brigandage -- the whole U N prestige is pledged, and the question of exact numbers is not too important.

Mr. Hoover referred finally to reports that are being received of tensions within the British Government and Cabinet at the present time.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 19, 1956

Others present: Mr. Brundage
Mr. Arnold Jones
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Brundage showed the President tables indicating the results of Budget consideration of a number of non-military departmental programs. After discussing some of these in detail, the President said that the responsible officers should be told that they must be able to prove their case and show that the Federal Government should do everything that they proposed, because they will soon have to do exactly this before the Cabinet. The school program is bound to show some increase -- he thinks that the same program should be put forward but proposed for more rapid execution. Another large component is in the field of agriculture; here he was unsure as to the effects of the soil bank.

Mr. Brundage referred to planning for "new starts" and said he was inclined to feel that the Administration policy should be that there would be no new starts. He said that engineering capacity is now being taxed to the point that the different bureaus are bidding up engineering costs. The President said he thought the matter should be stated along the lines that, since we are now operating at a rate so great as to bid up costs, the future rate of activity must be such as to avoid this effect.

Mr. Brundage asked regarding Administration policy with respect to the bomb shelter construction. He thought this should be held off until the NSC had considered the matter. The President agreed, but said we should foresee that our people may demand provision of shelters.

Mr. Brundage next asked about Administration policy regarding provision of hospital spaces for the care of dependents. The President said that where civilian facilities exist, there is some reason for using them, but that the key question would be whether effective use was made of doctors in such case. He had the impression that military doctors, in military facilities, take care of a much greater patient load than would otherwise be the case. He asked Mr. Brundage to ask Dr. Snyder to talk directly with General Heaton and Dr. Radven about this.

Mr. Brundage next asked for any comment by the President on military and mutual assistance programs. The President said he had asked Secretary Wilson to work the estimates down as far as possible in close collaboration with Budget. The matter would then come before the NSC. He said he wanted the Bureau of Budget to study the business management features. With regard to economic assistance, the President said as a matter of policy he would like to have more funds provided for economic assistance than estimated to be needed. In this way a much needed flexibility would be obtained.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

You might like to see the following extracts from a letter I have received from a classmate of mine who lives in Georgia:

"We couldn't overcome the entrenched machine, and the old traditions in Georgia, enough to carry the state, but did get the heaviest vote ever cast for a Republican. We had hoped to elect a congressman from this district (Atlanta), but too much old machine, and blind loyalty to a party. Out of it however came a strong organization, of reputable people, with the backing of a sizeable group of young voters. All of the old line party hacks that once controlled the Republican organization in Georgia were washed out, and it isn't a disgrace to be called a Republican in Georgia, when approximately a third of the voters were for Ike.

"The dignity and sincerity of the entire campaign certainly paid off, and the tribute paid Ike by the voters proves that the people appreciate sincerity and common sense."

The Iraqi and perhaps the Turks ~~had been~~ would be involved, and the partition of Jordan seemed probable. Mr. Hoover said he thought the key question is whether the Israelis are in the picture.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 15, 1956

Others present: General Bragdon
Colonel Goodpaster

General Bragdon asked the President if he would speak at the next West Point Founders Day dinner (March 16) and the President said he would try to come and extend greetings. He would not plan to speak unless he could think of something worthwhile to say in the interim.

General Bragdon discussed with the President the "Class gift" planned to be placed at West Point. (It is a marble bench, to be placed at the southeast corner of the Parade Ground, bearing the National Seal, that of the War Department, that of the U. S. Military Academy, and that of the Class of 1915. The President indicated he wished to make a substantial contribution to the gift.

General Bragdon then went on to give a summary of the recent activities of his office, concentrating on the "new concept" in Public Works Planning. He said that, while initially a good deal of reservation had been expressed concerning standards for determining need and relative urgency, the sceptics are beginning to be converted. He left a copy of the concept with the President.

He next gave the President a four-page report on the activities of his office, and indicated to the President that he wished to release it, together with a letter of "re-affirmation" from the President to him. The President asked me to have these reviewed by the staff, and suggested Dr. Hauge.

General Bragdon next discussed proposed legislation on a program of grants in aid to states and major metropolitan areas to accelerate public works planning. The President indicated support and interest, and suggested that the matter be taken up with the Bureau of the Budget, indicating that he might wish to mention it in his State of the Union address. He asked me to ask Mr. Brundage to look at the proposed legislation "quickly and with a sympathetic eye."

The President next spoke regarding his strongly held view that greatly improved coordination, on an over-all basin basis, is urgently needed. He recognized Congressional and other tendencies to oppose these efforts at coordination, since they tended to take the "pork" out of the barrel.

General Bragdon said he felt that there should be someone established on a statutory basis in the Federal Government heading up Public Works Planning -- until this is done states and other agencies will hold back from participating fully. The President indicated agreement. General Bragdon also said he thought the same individual who serves as coordinator of Public Works Planning should be the Coordinator of Water Resources. The President said that he felt the functions should be closely dovetailed, and indicated he was inclined to agree.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

Re: Indian Ambassador Mehta appointment with the President
November 13, 1956 - 9:56-10:12 A. M.

Present: Ambassador Mehta, Mr. Rountree and Mr. John Simmons of State, and Mr. Shanley

The Ambassador first expressed the Prime Minister's delight at coming to the United States and his regret at not having been able to come as previously planned. The President indicated that this was perhaps the ideal time for the meeting in view of recent events.

Ambassador Mehta suggested that the Prime Minister would be here a very short time - really only 3 full days - and was not anxious for any public functions, but they thought that as planned previously, he would go on TV late one evening for approximately 15 minutes. Also, he might have a press conference.

The President suggested that the meeting could be held at White Sulphur Springs, Camp David (this, he said would not be too comfortable in December), Florida, or any other place in the United States they would like the meeting to be. The Ambassador indicated that probably Washington would be best in view of the shortness of time. It was left that he would take this question up with the Prime Minister and let Mr. Rountree know and he in turn would contact us.

The President asked who would be coming on the visit and it was indicated that the Prime Minister's daughter and possibly the Minister of External Affairs. The President told the Ambassador that he was anxious to take care of the Prime Minister's travel from perhaps London to Washington or from any other place in Europe where he might be and then from Washington on to Canada. It was assumed the Canadians would wish to fly the party from Canada after the visit there.

The President said he wanted to assure the Prime Minister that the Columbine would be at his disposal.

The President indicated that Mr. Hagerty and his office would aid as they had previously done in planning the Prime Minister's TV broadcast and also the possible press conference which could be held at the Pentagon or at the Press Club. He indicated that the Prime Minister would be pressed to speak to the Press Association but the Ambassador indicated it would probably be turned down as it had before.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

Re: Senator Theo. F. Green's appointment with the President
November 12, 1956 - 9:30-9:50 A. M.

Present: Senator Green and Mr. Shanley

Senator Green discussed his recent visit with Emperor Haile Selassie in Ethiopia. He said that after their personal conversation, he had suggested to the Emperor that he give him an aide-memoire relative to it, which was done. The Senator pointed out that the American Ambassador had taken it and had it copied and then handed it to the Senator.

Senator Green's point was that the oral statements were far stronger than the aide-memoire. The Senator recited some of the aid program agreements which had been entered into. He likewise mentioned the funds to be provided for the study of ship patrols and their military aviation problems. He pointed out the Emperor's disappointment in the aid program generally and particularly the lack of funds. It was indicated that their neighbors had been criticizing them for cooperation with the United States and the Emperor stated that our Military assistance policy "is expected to change."

The President discussed our economic, Point IV and military assistance programs. Senator Green said that the Emperor's disappointment seemed to be that we had not lived up to our agreements. The President indicated that if we had an agreement, we lived up to it, even though in some cases it developed the aid was too great for the country to digest. He said we would do so in this case, and that he would have this looked into to see whether we had lived up to our agreements.

Senator Green ended by pointing out the tremendous influence America has in Ethiopia as evidenced by the number of their students (approximately 200) attending American colleges.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 9, 1956; 8:45 A. M.
Others present:

Sir Anthony Caccia
John Simmons
Colonel Goodpaster

The meeting was held for Ambassador Caccia to present his credentials to the President. I joined the meeting after it had been in progress about five minutes. The President was referring to the measures presently under way in the United Nations for the resolution of the Middle East crisis, and said that once those had been agreed, and forces removed, the next stage is to keep the Russians out.

The President said that just because Britain and the United States had had a sharp difference over the attack on Egypt, there was no thought that we would not keep our friendship over the long term. As indicative of the reason why we opposed the British and French action in the Middle East so strongly, he cited a letter he had received from a member of the Hungarian Government, which has now been liquidated, to the effect that it was only the attack on Egypt by Israel, Britain and France that led the Soviets to seek to reimpose their domination of Hungary by force. The President referred to the great difficulties in developing an understanding of the Soviet action in the proper light. He referred to a letter from "someone in the Far East" who had told him that the Soviets had had to go back in order to restore order. People in the Far East had indicated that, to them, colonialism is not colonialism unless it is a matter of white domination over colored people. [redacted] The President said that it seemed as though, when he points out the murders that are being committed in Hungary, some of the Far Eastern leaders just shrug them off.

Ambassador Caccia said Eden sent every good wish and hoped it would be possible for him to get together with the President on the broadest possible front. The President reverted to his bafflement that the Russians, as cruel and brutal as they are, can get away with murder, domination, etc. However, if we breach the smallest courtesy, the whole world is aflame. The only explanation he could give himself is that the West has been so successful in achieving high standards of life that there is an unconscious jealousy on the part of the others.

Ambassador Caccia said the Prime Minister hoped that the United States would not forget its other two resolutions on the Middle East situation. The President said there was no thought of that, and that such would be tragic indeed. He felt that, if we get this matter settled, he would do a little to keep the area from being touched by the Soviets -- specifically he would spend a lot of money to raise the standards of life of the people of the area.

The President said it is necessary to think beyond a single battle such as the Suez seizure, to the campaign as a whole. We must have world opinion with us in the Middle East if we are to bring about acceptable conditions in that area.

Ambassador Caccia asked whether the President had further actions in mind in the Middle East. The President referred to the two committees which will seek to achieve permanent solutions, and his intent to help raise living standards in that area. He would insist that acceptance of our help means that the countries must cut themselves off from affiliation with Russia.

In response to a question as to our plans concerning ~~fast~~ phased withdrawal of UK-French forces, and entry of UN forces, the President said that as soon as the international police force begins to enter, others must leave. From that time forward any attack on the UN forces would be an attack on the UN as a whole.

In closing the President said he would look forward to a productive association with Ambassador Caccia.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 8, 1956

Others present: Secretary Wilson
Admiral Radford
Governor Adams (for first few minutes)
Colonel Randall
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Wilson advised the President of policy questions that are now up for decision in the Defense Department, and of the general basis on which he proposes to decide them unless the President sees objection. These relate to: roles and missions; simplification of research and development programs; overseas deployments; the reserve program; force levels; the FY 58 budget; and military assistance programs.

After glancing over the summary paper, the President said that the questions were largely technical, and would require his getting back into the whole atmosphere of military planning.

In the succeeding discussion the President said he saw no reason why the Army should have jet aircraft, requiring jet airfields. He was opposed to the unrestricted procurement of aircraft by others than the Air Force. Regarding force levels, the President thought the effort must be to find particular areas where savings could be made -- he did not think over-all reductions realistic. The President said he thought that a cold-blooded look at the big-missiles program was needed; several lines of development could perhaps be closed out -- for example, he heard that the Redstone was showing particular promise. He thought that we should, in the present critical world situation, probably focus our attention and our priorities somewhat more on the shorter term.

In connection with deployments, Mr. Wilson said he hoped that it would be possible to pull some elements back, from Japan, for example, or from some of the MAAGS. Admiral Radford thought not much could be saved in that way, but Mr. Wilson said he would be looking for perhaps 15,000 spaces. The President said that there had been too much talk about this whole matter, which should have been accomplished quietly through reorganization and staying at under-strengths.

With regard to funding, Mr. Wilson said he proposed to concentrate attention on expenditures, where a modest increase seems reasonable to him, and give little attention to the $48 billion estimate of obligations requests. He observed that expenditures were going up a billion and a half, and the President said that this could not be done every year without requiring a complete reworking of the program. Mr. Wilson said he had brought the obligations figure down to $41 billion, but any further reduction would make it very difficult for him to hold his people in line. Mr. Wilson said he had thought of pushing personnel strengths down to 2.6 or 2.65 million, but it did not seem the world situation would now permit this. Admiral Radford said the situation is so upset at the moment that it is almost impossible to forecast needs a year and a half ahead. The President said it may, in the final analysis, be necessary to go to the old system, which he always decried, of saying each could have so much. Mr. Wilson thought that after he had brought in a budget along the lines he suggested, it would be possible to set lower figures in light of the impact of the program. The President concluded by saying that if the picture looks to be as presented, we may find that our task is to convince the people that an increase in taxes is necessary.

Mr. Hoover observed that the President had read the Bulganin note, and Bohlen's comment on it. He handed the President a proposed statement to be issued by the White House on the matter.

The President said that there should be a passage indicating that the United Nations, including the United States, would oppose any effort to violate the U N plan. In other words, we should give the Soviets a clear warning.

The President said his concern is that the Soviets, seeing their position and their policy failing so badly in the satellites, are ready to take any wild adventure. He thought it might be well to have a full-dress session of the NSC to examine the matter.

Mr. Phleger said the Soviets are making their offer to go in through the U N, and the President said our representative should say to the Arab States, "do you want the Soviets in the Middle East doing what they are now doing in Hungary?"

The President commented again how concerned he is over the possibility of Soviet armed intervention.

The President, in following a suggestion, said he would like to send a message to Nehru to bring Nehru's weight to bear on the side of peace and a limitation of the hostilities.

The President next reported that he intended for Governor Adams to send out on Wednesday a request for the Legislative Leaders to meet on Thursday or Friday. The group he had in mind would include the leaders on both sides, and the top men of both sides in the foreign affairs and military affairs committees.

The President then indicated, at the request of the State Department representatives, the general lines of the message he would like to send to Nehru.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

On being informed by Mr. Hoover (who had been called by the President) that the President had received a call from Eden this morning in which Eden asked for and obtained the President's agreement to his coming to Washington with Mollet tonight, Governor Adams and I met with the President to take up with him some questions that seemed to arise in connection with such a visit. The major point was the possible appearance that we were now concerting action in the Middle East independently of the U N action. The President said he had made clear that there could be no departure by the French and British from their agreement on cease-fire, and said that Eden had asked for the meeting because of the developing threat from Russia.

The President talked to Eden a second time, indicating that the United States is committed to the Hammarskjold plan, and that he had considered the meeting's purpose to be to concert our positions in NATO and for the future. If, by any chance, Eden and Mollet were not in agreement, it would be very unfortunate to have a communique issue which would indicate we are in disagreement.

While the call was in progress, Mr. Hoover came into the President's office. When the call had ended he said we must be very careful not to give the impression that we are teaming with the British and French. He said he had talked to Secretary Dulles by phone, who said he was very much opposed to the visit at this time. I suggested to the President the desirability of letting Hammarskjold know about the visit, so he would not be thrown off balance in his efforts. Mr. ~~Hammarskjold~~ Hoover said we would have to get out to the world that we have not changed our principles and our position. He said the Soviets have offered Egypt 250,000 volunteers (I left the meeting to call Allen Dulles for a check of this.) Mr. Hoover also said there is danger of a complete turn-about by the Arabs in this matter, placing themselves in opposition to Hammarskjold's efforts. The Russians are making great efforts to put themselves in the position of liberators.

Governor Adams asked the President whether he was still thinking of having the Congressional leaders in on Friday, and the President said he was. After further discussion the President decided to call Eden again and say that the timing of the visit was bad, and that it should be postponed. In discussion it was suggested that he might refer to the dangers of throwing Hammarskjold -- who is having a hard time getting the Egyptians and Israelis to unconditional agreement to cease fire -- off balance, the possibility of having General Gruenther -- who is known to have the complete confidence of the President -- go up to London to see what the British view the Russian threat to be, etc.

Secretary Humphrey (who joined the meeting) said he appreciated how hard it was for the President to tell a man that he wouldn't talk to him, but thought that the timing question was overriding. The President said he had really looked forward to talking with Eden, and was quite disappointed. The President then called Eden who accepted what the President said, though with obvious disappointment.

I obtained at this point additional intelligence data which gave increased indications regarding the Russian threat, although nothing solid seemed to be involved.

Governor Adams (part of meeting)

Mr. Dulles showed the President late intelligence indicating that the Soviets told the Egyptians that they will "do something" in the Middle East hostilities. Following discussion of the possibility of Soviet movement of Air Forces into Syria, the President asked Mr. Dulles to conduct high reconnaissance in this area, avoiding, however, any flights into Russia. Flights over Syria and Israel should be conducted.

Mr. Dulles and I reported developments as set forth in the intelligence summary and the State Department summary today.

The President said our people should be alert. If the Soviets attack the French and British directly, we would be in war, and we would be justified in taking military action even if Congress were not in session. Mr. Dulles raised a question as to the status of Cyprus with respect to the NATO obligation. The President said that if reconnaissance discloses Soviet Air Forces on Syrian bases he would think that there would be reason for the British and French to destroy them. The President asked if our forces in the Mediterranean are equipped with atomic anti-submarine weapons.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT

The President asked what were the differences between the "Afro-Asian" and "Canadian" plans regarding the Middle East made in the United Nations. Mr. Phleger said that although they differ they are not inconsistent, and that both had been adopted. The reference was to the Indian and Canadian plans. Last night Hammarskjold reported that he had sent messages under the Indian plan to Britain and France, without reply as yet. He said the Norwegians, with support of others, had put in a follow-up resolution to establish a command which would exercise the police function in the Middle Eastern war areas. He understood that Canada, Colombia, Norway and India had agreed to put in forces. He said there was some indication that Eden now wants to join in with the other free nations to settle this matter. The President mentioned his two letters from Eden, received during last night, and said he would try to prepare a reply to Eden endeavoring to bring him into an acceptable position in this matter.

Mr. Hoover pointed out that our position is completely free with regard to the U N action now that the French and the British have in fact invaded. The President said he thought we should stick with the plan as developed thus far in spite of the UK and French landings.

Mr. Hoover reported that he had called Secretaries Robertson and Wilson with a request that military planning be started on how to move in the U N troops. The President indicated he was especially interested in getting the Colombians (and any other Latin Americans who might contribute) quickly into position.

Mr. Hoover showed the President a brief paper setting out the essentials of the policy we are following, and the President said it looked excellent to him.

Mr. Hoover reported he had learned that Pearson had called Eden and told him that he has no support and will have none from Canada in this matter. Mr. Nixon said it was too bad that Bevan is allowed to make political capital out of supporting the same position we hold, since any swing to that school of thought would be tragic for us. Mr. Hoover said we must be careful not to appear to condone what the French and British have done. He reported information he had received to the effect that the British and French plan to make landings in Alexandria as well as the Canal zone. I mentioned the question of whether the French might be trying to widen and worsen the conflict for their own ends, which may now begin to depart from those of the British. The group indicated considerable concern over any possible landing in the Alexandria area, as drawing the British and French forces into a long struggle. The President said he would try to write up a message for Eden to try to influence him against any such action.

Mr. Hoover expressed his great concern over the situation in Syria, and the possibility of the USSR sending forces, volunteer or other, into Syria. The President said he understood the airfields in Syria were very poor. [redacted]

Mr. Hoover said that oil supplies from the Middle East are now largely cut off -- only the tap line from Saudi-Arabia remains in operation. The oil supply of NATO military forces in Western Europe may soon be endangered.

The President suggested we should put heavy tankers and oilers into use immediately, including all fleet oilers, and any used for non-military purposes should be on the basis of reasonable charges and rates. With regard to the oil problem faced by the French and the British, the President felt that the purposes of peace and stability would be served by not being too quick in attempting to render extraordinary assistance, and the Vice President reinforced this view. The President asked that ODM and Mr. Hoover work out arrangements for the Navy to help out in the over-all situation with its oilers.

Mr. Hoover said the whole matter of East-West exchanges and trade fairs must be reconsidered. The President thought we should suspend all of this, and that there should be no attendance at the November 7 celebrations of the Soviet Union. Mr. Hoover said he would arrange this.

Mr. Phleger reported that on the Hungarian resolution the Arabs and India abstained and that there is some appearance that they may have made a deal with the USSR to abstain on the Hungarian question in order to have strong Soviet support on the Middle East question. He thought that the General Assembly would take up the question of sanctions on November 6th or 7th.

Mr. Phleger said that Cardinal Mindszenty is in our legation. We will refuse to turn him over. We will try to keep him quiet. Our international position is not too strong on trying to safeguard him. Perhaps we can get the U N into the matter to help him.

Mr. Phleger said the Soviet trap was such that they were able to get almost all political leaders in Hungary out of hiding to negotiate with them, and then seized them all.

The Vice President asked why Nehru is supporting the USSR by abstaining, and the President suggested that Nehru thinks of only one thing, which is colonialism, by which he means the white over colored people. The President said he thought it might be well for him to write to Nehru, bringing out that we are witnessing colonialism by the bayonet in Hungary. Mr. Nixon said he thought that if Nehru would line up with us in this matter, Russia would be ruined in Asia. He asked if Nehru's visit to the U. S. could be expedited and the President said he was afraid that Nehru might find that things are so active that he cannot leave his Government at this moment.

There was discussion over the release of the President's letter to Nehru and the President said that the question is one of protecting the ability to exchange such letters without having them released for propaganda purposes.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 2, 1956

Others present: Secretary Dulles
Secretary Hoover
Colonel Goodpaster (for part of meeting)

When I joined the meeting, the President was discussing the idea of a neutral strip around Israel, and explaining to the Secretary his thought of proportionate contributions to the width of the strip by the countries concerned -- on the basis of their over-all land area.

The discussion next turned to the proposals that had been mentioned in New York that the President and Nehru might serve together to develop a solution to the Middle East dispute. Mr. Dulles spoke of the possibility of their serving as an elder statesmen "board of appeals" -- he thought that they should not take responsibility for primary developmental action. He thought Britain and Israel will soon be coming to the United States for economic cooperation. There are several questions that must be considered in connection with the proposal. Does it build up Nehru too much? How strenuously would the Pakistanis object? Mr. Hoover commented that Nehru is likely to be offensive to the U K. The President said he thought Nehru was important to the U K economically. Mr. Hoover said he believed that India's trade was not as important as formerly but the President said he thought it was larger.

The President, referring to the plan for two ~~countries~~ country Heads, said the key will be to find names which will bring maximum moral pressure on the participants. Mr. Dulles said there was good possibility that Mr. Pearson of Canada would suggest the Eisenhower-Nehru approach. The President thought it might be better to start out with the committees and to set up himself and Nehru later if needed. There was then further discussion of possible names for the committees, including Lange, Aranha and Amini (on the assumption that Nehru would be "saved" for the higher group).

Mr. Dulles said we need to move quickly, keeping momentum and keeping out in front in the rapidly developing action. We should avoid any implication that we are simply going back to the situation that formerly existed in the area.

The President asked if there would be any point in having one or two others serve with Nehru and himself, and Secretary Dulles brought out that the Soviet Union might then press to serve. He added that the objection to Nehru might not be so great if someone other than the United States suggested his name.

The President asked whether the two committees could be handled separately, or whether the two questions were linked. Mr. Dulles thought that they could be kept reasonably separate, and the President indicated agreement to trying to set up the two committees.

Mr. Dulles said he would retain the idea of the President and Nehru serving if the suggestion could come from elsewhere. He thought it would be important for them not to take on the primary staff or detail responsibility.

Mr. Hoover suggested not getting into the matter too early because there is still bloodshed ahead. The President said the U N has ordered a cease-fire, but there must then immediately be machinery for straightening out the situation.

The President concluded by saying that if it were thought that he could be useful serving in this way, there should be no worry about pre-empting too much of his time.

MEMORANDUM OF CONFERENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT
November 4 - 1:30 PM

Others Present: Under Secretary Hoover
Mr. MacArthur
Mr. Murphy
Mr. Phleger
Mr. Rountree
Mr. Bowie
Mr. Allen Dulles (for part of meeting)
Mr. Hagerty
Colonel Goodpaster

Mr. Hoover began by saying he would like to review to the President the latest development in the Hungarian situation, including the plan to submit a resolution to the UN General Assembly in its meeting at 4:00 PM, and also the situation in the Middle East, including the progress being made by Hammarskjold.

Mr. Phleger recalled that the Security Council had met at 6:00 PM on November 3 on the Hungarian matter, had adjourned because the Soviet representative said negotiations were in progress, had then reconvened urgently at 3:00 AM on news of the Soviet attack, with action resulting in a Security Council veto by the Soviets of a U.S. - proposed resolution. A second resolution was immediately put forward and passed transmitting the matter to the General Assembly for today's action. He reported that a U.S. resolution was in hand for the afternoon meeting, and overwhelming support was expected.

With regard to Middle East developments, Mr. Phleger said the U.S. resolution had been presented, but not pressed to a vote, in order to enable action to be taken on resolutions submitted by Canada and India. The first of these called for the Secretary General, within 48 hours, to develop a plan, in consultation with the parties concerned, to introduce a U.S. police force into the area. This was passed with a vote of 55 to 0, with 19 abstentions. The Indian resolution, also passed, called on the Secretary General to report in 12 (or 18?) hours whether the cease-fire was being complied with. The vote on the resolutions was 59 to 6, with 7 abstentions.

Secretary Hoover reported that great progress was being made by Hammarskjold, who was trying to get at least a token force quickly, and forestall French-British invasion. The possibility of having the force composed of Canadian, Indian, Norwegian, and Columbian contributions was mentioned. It was expected that Hammarskjold would appoint General Burns of Canada as the chief of the force. Mr. Hoover also reported that Hammarskjold had sent a message to the U.K. urging them not to move in with invasion forces. The President commented that if the U.K. would stop the invasion, they could then join in the resolutions on Hungary.

Secretary Hoover next discussed dangers that were appearing of an Israeli attack on Syria and Jordan, and reported discussions between Mrs. Meir and Ambassador Lawson.

The President next considered a draft which Mr. Hoover handed him of a proposed letter to Bulganin. The President redrafted the letter in order to offer a line of action to Bulganin by which he could reduce the shock and dismay the world has felt at Soviet actions in Hungary, rather than leaving the letter entirely denunciatory.

Finally, the group discussed a public statement that the President might make through Mr. Hagerty reporting the developments and actions of the day by the U.S.

Others present: Secretary Hoover
Mr. Phleger
Mr. Rountree

Mr. Hoover said he would like to review the situation, in view of the Secretary's incapacity. The President said the first question was how the plan for the two committees (one for the Israeli-Arab question and one for the Suez question) was coming along. Mr. Hoover first commented on a message received from Eden (which had been put on the tickers before it was received) and handed it to the President. It suggested having the U N take over the situation once French and British forces were installed in the Canal area, and we must be careful to avoid appearing in concert with them. (Eden said that he had furnished this proposal to Washington prior to his speech in Parliament.)

Mr. Hoover discussed the possibility of mob action arising in Cairo, as Army forces from the Sinai area reach the city. Mr. Rountree had talked by phone to Cairo and things seemed quiet at the moment.

The President said that the State Department spokesman yesterday, in announcing the suspension of shipments into the Middle East, had not handled the matter very well. He could have mentioned that we have had requests from others in the area for shipments, and these too are being held up. He referred to an oral message from Nasser, and suggested that we go back to Nasser cautioning him against mob action. Mr. Rountree said that we had sent back an oral message to Nasser already, and that he was very appreciative and said that for the first time he realized that the United States was not simply playing the British game in the area.

Mr. Hoover said he is confronted with two problems at the moment. The first relates to the Hungarian resolution. The Security Council is meeting at 3 P. M. today to take up this matter. The Hungarians are asking for U N help, and the British and French want us to join them in a resolution on the matter. Mr. Phleger said Secretary Dulles did not want to join the British and French, and the President said that such a thought was almost absurd.

1 COPY OF 3 COPIES

Mr. Hoover's second point related to the two Middle East resolutions. The situation has been complicated by Eden's statement. Mr. Phleger said there is now danger that Pearson, for Canada, will propose as the "sound action" of which he spoke in the U N meeting that a U N force simply take over from the British, French and Israeli forces in the Suez and Sinai areas. This is exactly what Eden is now suggesting in order to get himself off the hook.

The President said he understood the gist of the resolutions to be the formation of a Suez committee and an Israeli committee but said we must also indicate interim action, such as a neutral zone around Israel with depth of space contributed proportionately to the areas of the countries concerned, and clearing the Canal and operating it.

Mr. Hagerty said we need an American position quickly, and need to announce it. Otherwise we will get ourselves mixed up in the proposals of others. The President agreed we should get in with our resolutions quickly, calling on all parties to open the Canal. The President said we should also bring out that there is no cause for the U K and the French to go into the Canal area -- that the U N can put in the force and provide the select committees. It is important that we bring out that we are not waiting for or accepting the entry of the French and the British. In this way we would remove any need or basis for their landings. Mr. Phleger recalled that there should be a prompt call for the landings not to be made, and prompt withdrawal. (It was pointed out that the Egyptians would be happier to see a U N force enter the Canal area if the French and British were already there than if they were not.)

Mr. Hoover next referred to a message from Libya asking if the President's reply could be released and the President agreed that it could.

The President asked whether it was thought he should get in touch with Eden, so as to keep the channel open, and there was universal suggestion that he wait until after the resolutions had been submitted to the Secretary General.

The President began by asking Admiral Radford if he would be willing to be Grand Marshal of the Inauguration Parade, assuming the President is re-elected and Admiral Radford said he would. The President said he is choosing a military man because he wants the parade short and on time.

Mr. Wilson asked the President whether he would have opportunity to see him in the next day or two after next Tuesday, in connection with the Defense budget. He said he has been engaged in preparatory work, such as a number of papers of basic importance -- including roles and missions -- and has a number of "splits" to resolve. Next Wednesday afternoon, on his return from voting, he could give the President the high spots of the problems and exchange views with the President.

The President stressed the importance of molding the figures into something that makes sense from Secretary Wilson's standpoint before they get into written form.

Admiral Radford reported that the Net Evaluation Sub-committee report reached him yesterday. He plans to study it in his office for the next few days and then make it available to the individuals who are supposed to comment on it.

The President said he is not certain as to his own plans following the election, but it seems likely that he will not now go to Georgia in view of the Mediterranean situation and Secretary Dulles' illness. He might spend a few days at Gettysburg.

The President said Mr. Wilson should tell his people that they should approach their planning on the basis of having to carry a military load for up to forty years, and not simply to try to build up more and more for the individual services.

November 30, 1956 - AUGUSTA.

The President talked to the Secretary of State, who was in Key West.

A statement is to be put out on the international thing and Dulles had made a few minor changes in it. Wanted to emphasize Western Europe and the troops we have there. Also don't want to hurt Butler's feelings.

Dulles asked the President if statement Adams was going to issue on Herter could be deferred until he, Dulles, saw Herter next Thursday. President agreed. Apparently Herter was being brought in on some sort of a stop-gap arrangement -- Dulles thought something else could be worked out, maybe not.

Going back to the statement, the President said he thought it was perfectly correct that he should issue the principle and the plan, but the details should be given out in statement by someone else.

Dulles told the President how nice the people in Key West had been to him; that he is getting back into the swing of work, etc.; is working on a statement to be issued Sunday from here.

President told Dulles about the Lew Douglas letter he had written.

The President called Governor Adams about the survey being made by Gerald Lambert and Mr. Bachelder. The survey is to be ready tomorrow and will then be studied. Another survey is being made by the National Committee as a check. Particular attention is being paid to states, and counties, that switched in the last election .

The President suggested that certain of the people who had worked during the campaign -- such as Sig Larmon, Roy Larsen, Charlie Jones -- be shown the survey, either by Mr. Lambert, or later, by Governor Adams. They, though amateur politicians, have some pretty good ideas and would find the survey interesting and valuable. Governor Adams said he would work it out.

The President asked how survey was to be financed and Governor Adams said by the National Committee.

9:25 The Secretary of State, in Key West.

The President said he has a message from Pug Ismay which is very desperate in tone. They have been the best of friends over the years -- but now he is adopting the European conviction that we deserted our two friends in their hour of trial, and now won't even help them out with oil and gas, etc. Whereas, we are trying to time it properly so as to help them out permanently -- which they don't seem to understand. Ismay says that the man who now seems to be kicked out will come back for sure; thinks they have done a terrible thing, and that NATO might be broken up.

Message from Britain says the boys are ready to go along with UN on assumption that cleaning up the Canal can proceed. The President thinks it is about time for us to try to make it clear that the second we know this, we can say that now we are going to make plans. Wadsworth had a talk with King Saud -- and Saud seemed reassured when they gave him timing on troops being brought out.

Mr. Dulles mentioned George Humphrey's conversation yesterday with Rab Butler. Dulles' feeling is that we will just have to give them those few days.

The President agrees on taking no action. But since we said the second they gave just an indication, we would resume our great effort. (Citing an example, from Dillon's message of transmittal: service stations are refusing to fill American cars with gas; taxis are refusing to pick up Americans.)

Mr. Dulles said of course that is bad -- but it is awfully hard to see how we can begin to use that oil to meet their needs before they have indicated that they would comply with the UN Resolution. The President said the public does not know this, and wondered if we shouldn't let it be known? Mr. Dulles thinks the public need not know, that a public statement might do more harm than good because it would look as though we were publicly subjecting them to pressure, which would be resented. He feels they would prefer to act under their own steam. The President's only thought was to say that we understand they are going to comply.

The President will reply to Ismay by saying simply that this is exactly what we are working on and to please sit tight. We are doing everything that is humanly possible.

New subject. Secy. Dulles said the Vice President is stopping at Key West to have lunch with him tomorrow, before returning to Washington. And that he (Dulles) is planning to stop at Augusta on way back Sunday. Agreement made to announce it to the press today. The President asked Dulles if he would want to come early enough to attend church service, then to Club for lunch. But this would require Mr. Dulles to get started about 6 a.m. The President will go to church, and meet Mr. Dulles afterwards.

Dulles asked if Jim Hagerty would expect him to talk to the press here. The President said if things go along as at present, it might be a nice time to make a statement, and tell of his attendance at NATO meeting.

Mr. Dulles said we must make it clear that our position does not in any way mean we are trying to be friendly with the Arabs for the price of our British friendship. Once that principle is recognized, everything else falls into place.

This gave the President the idea that, while the Secretary could develop this subject in a press conference, he should perhaps say something on that order right now. He will get up a very short statement, which he will ask Jim Hagerty to phone back to Mr. Dulles for approval.

The President expressed concern about the kind of thing that is beginning to spread through documents : "might compel their withdrawal from the UN."

[redacted] He said, "Nothing has been stronger and clearer than your letters to Eden."

Regarding the Pug Ismay message -- because of long and close friendship, the President thinks a warm reply will be very helpful. Certainly don't want Ismay to resign from his NATO post now.

Will get Mr. Dulles' approval of the proposed reply, then will send it up to Hoover. If he should see anything questionable in it, he can call back. Want it to go out today, on an "Eyes Only" basis.

9:30 -- Secy. Humphrey (calling from Mr. Hoover's desk).

He reported to the President:

"We talked to Foster this morning. He approved of going ahead and it was very helpful in bringing up the point that ultimately what we have got to get to is this Point VI Program. We have to impress that. Then we got Rab (Butler). I told him you knew this, and that Foster and Herb knew it, and he is at liberty to use it in any way he thought useful and discreet.

"He told a couple of encouraging things, and some suspicious. One encouraging thing: He was very grateful for picking up right where we left off. The principle thing he wanted was time. He said he has a difficult situation, and, if we could just not interfere with him -- not have any more resolutions -- he would appreciate it very much indeed. He wound up by saying we would hear from him as soon as he could get his affairs arranged.

"A bad thing: (and Herb was on the phone, too; but we can't decide whether this was just for the record). He said he had great confidence in Kasha (?). Also, he heard from Anthony, who had a good trip over. He then said he would carry on under those circumstances.

(The President feels all this was for the record, since he was on the phone.)

"We have now reported back to Foster. He agrees the thing for us to do is to keep our shirts on for a little bit. Herb will talk to Cabot and tell him to be as careful as he can, to let things rest for a few days now. They know exactly what our real attitude is -- they now have it in their background."

The President said he was sorry to see in the resolution the word "immediately."

TELEPHONE CALLS

3:07 November 24, 1956
President called Secretary Humphrey. Apparently "fig leaves" did not mean merely financial help. It may have been something else that we have not even guessed. Humphrey said he had a hunch it was something else, as he thought had Hoover. Said something had come through on the ticker to indicated that the UN would undertake to close up the Canal. He questioned whether Burgess should go over to England now, said he thought the US had accomplished the purpose we wanted to accomplish -- it looks to him as though it is up to the British to make the next move. He saidif // he were doing it alone, he would stick still now and wait until we hear further from them. The President said "that is correct." He said further that somewhere as between the British and ourselves there was a vagueness, not a frankness that he would like. We don't get the points cleared up that we would like. Humphrey agreed that the only way there would be frankness would be by a meeting. He said he thought "one of them" (Butler or MacMillan) ought to come over here.

President suggested an OEEC meeting, but Humphrey is afraid of OEEC trying to get in and decide where// the money the United States will lend will go. He does not want another "Marshall Plan"

President said he made suggestion because of timing, does not want to lose everything we have gained. He repeated his conversation with the Prime Minister of Tunisia. He said he was not going to fall under Nasser. Dismissed "Israel as a minor thing."

Humphrey said we have got to keep working with the Arabs. We are on their side until these fellows get out. After they get out, we ought to be in the position of neutral friend of both that both can trust to try to work out a fair deal. The President agreed.

Humphrey reported that Hoover talked to the Italian Ambassador and the Italian Ambasssador repeated to the press everything he said. He referred again to the fact he did not want OEEC to divie up the money. He said we want to be generous, but at the same time watch our step and certainly make ur- our own decisions.

8:45 Mrs. Andrew Parker.

The President inquired about her father (Charlie Tompkins). She said that after yesterday's esophagus operation, Dr. Blades was encouraged -- he was able to get a small opening. So today they will try him again on some food. It may not stay open too long. Yet if this is successful, they might be able to do it again later on.

The President asked if she would tell him this: A couple of years ago, he & Charlie spoke about placing little bronze plates in the White House, scattered about where his Company did some rebuilding. For example, in the West Wing where it was rebuilt after a fire; also, part of the Shelter. The President said he asked for these plates, but that, of course, in a busy life they are forgotten. But now he has ordered them & is having them put up -- wants Mr. Tompkins to know they will be up in a matter of 24 hours.

Mrs. Parker said she knows that will please him very, very much. She recalls his talking about it some time ago. She plans to go visit him this morning, & will certainly tell him. She personally thinks it is wonderful, thanked the President for calling, said it is good to hear his voice.

The President said he called her the other evening, but that she was out to dinner. She explained that they had business acquaintances from Italy whom they had to take out. And that this sort of thing is good for her father, too, since he enjoys hearing all about their visitors & activities.

The President has, from Jerry Morgan, cases Brownell sent over. He approved the 3 involving soldiers (in Germany, I believe).

But the one with recommendation for denying clemency to a Mr. Carter who shot a member of the District Police Force, after having committed robbery. The President agrees with all but one thing: that this man would be better off out of the way. He has young wife & 3 children; apparently was robbing to help them; turned money over to his wife.

Jerry Morgan's opinion is that the wife would re-marry, & possibly lead a better life thereafter. Mr. Brownell said the fact that turned his own mind finally was that he did shoot a law enforcement officer; and to policemen all over the country, this is a very emotional matter.

The President pointed out fact that the policeman was in civilian clothes. As for the effect on the deceased's family, he died a hero; no matter what their anguish or economic situation may be, their pride is not completely hurt. As for the other family, here is a man who has done something with a few mitigating circumstances -- but he was desparate.

Mr. Brownell agreed there is real heartbreak in that case, that it is the family who suffers. And if one concentrates on the family, of course a conclusion such as the President's would be reached. But he feels the family relationship in this case was not a close one. And through his legislative experience, he has found it important to think about any officer who may be shot.

President: We have been getting your messages, & I want to make an inquiry. You are dealing with at least one person -- maybe two or three -- on a very personal basis. Is it possible for you, without embarrassment, to get together the two that you mentioned in one of your messages?

Aldrich: Yes, one of them I have just been playing bridge with. Perhaps I can stop him.

President: I'd rather you talk to both together. You know who I mean? One has same name as my predecessor at Columbia University Presidency; the other was with me in the war.

(Note: presumably, Butler and Macmillan.)

Aldrich: I know the one with you in the war. Oh yes, now I've got it.

President: Could you get them informally and say of course we are interested and sympathetic, and, as soon as things happen that we anticipate, we can furnish "a lot of fig leaves."

Aldrich: I certainly can say that.

President: Will that be enough to get the boys moving?

Aldrich: I think it will be.

President: Herb (Hoover) probably will send you a cable later tonight. You see, we don't want to be in a position of interfering between those two. But we want to have you personally tell them. They are both good friends.

Aldrich: Yes, very much so. Have you seen all my messages? Regarding my conversations with them all?

President: Yes -- with at least two.

Aldrich: That is wonderful. I will do this -- tomorrow?

President: Yes, first thing in the morning.

Aldrich: I shall certainly do it. And will then communicate with you at once. Can do it without the slightest embarrassment.

President: Communicate through regular channels -- through Herb.

3:25 Ambassador Winthrop Aldrich, from England.

Regarding the message he sent after seeing Harold Macmillan -- the guess that Aldrich made is correct.

The President said he did not recall it just this second. (Later, we learned it was in State Dept., but not immediately delivered to the White House.)

Amb. Aldrich said he guessed there was going to be a change. Will send a message right off, giving President the details. He said Harold Macmillan is terribly anxious to see the President as soon as possible; but he will spell that, too, out in his message.

The President asked about Harriet, said to give her his best wishes.

3:35 Actg. Secy. Hoover.
The President inquired about the message to which Amb. Aldrich referred.
Mr. Hoover received it today, said a copy should now be on its way over here to Col. Goodpaster.
The "guess" is that the Cabinet is completely to be reshuffled, and that Eden is going out because of sickness.
(He read entire message on the phone.)
Since there was some reference in it to George Humphrey, the President suggested Mr. Hoover tell Mr. Humphrey of Amb. Aldrich's phone call, confirming this, & that he is sending a long follow-up message on it. President asked that the message be sent to him at the House just as soon as State receives it.

Mr. Hoover said it is very interesting, in that they are putting proposition up to us. They will either have to withdraw from Egypt, & have their Cabinet fall -- or else they would have to renew hostilities, taking over entire Canal. Mr. Hoover's comment: Obviously things are very much in the making there. I think this is one time to sit tight, awaiting his further information.

9:05 Secy. Hoover.
On the Fairless Commission, going into all our economic aid, its need & necessity throughout the world. The President said we set up this Commission when we failed to get a joint committee with the Congress. The question comes up: Should the Fairless Commission go into the matter of the need for, or wisdom of, political & military decisions in a country such as Korea, Formosa, Turkey -- where a lot of this money is going. President thinks he should tell them not to challenge these decisions, but to have State & Defense come before them, go through the line of reasoning that led to the answer, & therefore will know how to go from there. The President said we have to be careful that neither Department feels that it is being kicked around; that here is an investigation we have to put on in a very honest way.

Mr. Hoover said the President is completely right, & that of course they (State) have been in the dark as to what the Commission is doing.

Mr. Fairless is coming in this morning to give the President his report. He realizes that they can't help but look at our statistics & find that Korea, Formosa, Indo China & Turkey are getting the greatest share of what we are sending. The Commission has been reluctant to get into anybody else's business, but the President thinks State & Defense should make some arrangement to work with them.

Mr. Hoover said he would be delighted to do so, & thinks President should suggest it to Mr. Fairless. Hoover said he knows that John Lewis (& one other person on the Comm., name forgotten) have been going into another problem -- on how much can we afford to give? Particularly, they went into the drain on our gold reserves. Mr. Prochnow gave them a great deal of information. Mr. Hoover thought President might want to bring it up -- should be straightened out in their minds. He said Treasury has helped a lot.

9:11 Secretary Hoover called. Said something about "we should not give aid to anyone who was playing with the Russians -- we do not have problems, however, in political strings attached to foreign aid."

This was in reference to press conference of this morning. President said he was not going to discuss the matter.

President said he gave to Doug MacArthur this morning his idea of what the "party line" of the Administration should be in the matter, and asked Mr. MacArthur to work out a policy that could be transmitted to Ambassadors, to Voice of America and to Radio Free Europe, etc.

9:50 Jim Hagerty called Mr. Hoover, to say the President wanted him (or a representative) to come sit in on pre-Press Conference briefing. Mr. Hoover & Doug MacArthur will be right over.

12:02 Secy. Hoover.

3:16 Bill Robinson called from Augusta.
Discussed plans for a bridge game Sunday. The President told of the great compliment George Allen payed Mr. Robinson -- said he's tired of this experimentation, & wants Mr. Robinson for his partner. When Bill Robinson returns to N. Y. Thurs. morning, he will check with Cliff Roberts, Pete Jones & Slats Slater -- & will then call the President on it. The President suggested Mr. Robinson come Fri. & stay through Sun., & that he could stay here.
Mr. Robinson asked about Press Conference. The President said he received reports that it was "the best yet." Great portion of it of course dealt with foreign affairs, but he did have a chance to talk a little politically, on modern Republicanism & the need for following along with it.
Bill Robinson asked if Mid East situation looked better. The President said the legalistic problem is the big one now.

Mr. Hoover said Jim Hagerty told him about press conference tomorrow, & possibility of having himself & Adm. Radford sit in on it.
The President said he told Jim he would agree to the press conference if State thought it would be a good thing. However, he does not think it would be good to have Hoover & Radford come along; instead, he would refer the reporters to Hoover for details.

Mr. Hoover agreed. He said there are a lot of points they want to make -- one is to get the story over to the American people; also, there are a lot of these things we need to get out abroad.

President does not want to make a speech, merely dwell on a few points. Could get together about 9:30 tomorrow morning.

He told the President he had been on the Hill 5 hours straight. President thought that was ridiculous, that 2 hours should be enough. He suggested that whenever they are requested to come there, they should say they have just so much time to give, are too busy & have to get back to their offices. Just to stay on & let them grind away certainly adds no respect for them.

Mr. Hoover said Sen. George has lost a lot of his influence -- it was pretty obvious that he has no control over them.

The President thought a working agreement could be reached with Sen. Green. When he brought in the Aide Memoire this morning, he did say that he was well aware that the Executive was responsible for foreign relations, & that he wanted to work with us. Mr. Hoover said that Sen. Green had sat back & did not do a thing. The President thought Secy. Hoover could explain to Green that they are short-handed & very busy; that their people have no time for rest & recreation; & that therefore these meetings should be held to a minimum of time, & no more often than once a week unless something vital is happening in the world. Mr. Hoover's comment: "I wish we could."

Mr. Hoover said Secy. Dulles enjoyed the President's visit. There's a possibility of his leaving hospital this week end. Gen. Snyder is trying to work something out with Capt. Beach to have a place ready at Key West.

The President said he found Dulles just as anxious as himself to play fair with Ethiopia.-- "they seem unhappy about something." Mr. Hoover said they had something on an airplane. He turned it down the other day -- could not give one man, for his personal use, one airplane for $2 million, when we had total program in that country of $5 in one year. The President said you have your "best drag" in that country when you do something for the Emperor. Hoover said CIA & State are taking good look at it.

On the Cardinal Minzenty message. President does not think we should release it. However, if it does come out, then State should have statement ready. Mr. Hoover thinks Hammarskjold has left -- was scheduled to leave at 5 o'clock for Rome & Naples. It is true that he has large powers under the Resolution, but Hoover believes the Secretary General feels we should get the Asian-African-Arab powers to join with us in sponsoring the Resolution for forces & armes for the area.
The President repeated his thought that Hammarskjold should act resolutely right now.

Another thing, Mr. Hoover said he might call the Egyptian Ambassador in to ask his intentions in this matter. They made some broadcasts asking for volunteers, & Hoover would ask if it is true.

This afternoon, Kasha is coming to see Hoover. Plan is to have friendly talk, but at the same time tell him exactly what the situation is as we see it. They have not consulted us on the numerous difficult things that came up.

The President agreed they should have a very frank talk with him, but said don't let them switch around now. The President added that he personally liked Kasha, that they were together in Africa.

2:58 Actg. Secy. Hoover.
President inquired if he had planned to come over this afternoon. Answer was no, he knew the President wanted to get away. Then the President asked if he thought it would hurt anything if he went to Gettysburg tomorrow morning about 9:30 or 10, & return later the same day. Would fly, so would be only a half-hour away.

Mr. Hoover thought this a splendid idea, but suggested President should go tonight & stay through Sunday. President does not want to stay away that long at this time; & there's the problem of opening the house overnight.

About Eli Ginzberg. Mr. Hoover knows him, agrees he is a smart fellow -- a friend of Bob Anderson's.

President said he is a great friend of Ben-Gurion's. He gave the President a new slant. One thing very important to us: a recent message was delayed somewhere, took 14 hours to get to him, & he first read about it in press reports. Mr. Hoover said he does not believe that. State gave the message to their Embassy here, & also sent it direct -- which ordinarily is not done. Then President recalled one message coming from them, which we knew was coming, but never did get.

Dr. Ginzberg told the President that Ben Gurion trusts him personally, for some reason, & is most anxious to come see him. President told Dr. Ginzberg he would not do so now. Ginzberg questioned, why not get both Ben-Gurion & Nuri* to come together? Mr. Hoover expressed opposition to that idea. Dr. Ginzberg believes Ben-Gurion & Nuri want to get together, since both are concerned about what happens in Syria. Then probably the 2 of them would more or less watch Syria. The President of course gave no quick answer, but suggested that if anyone in State (Bill Rountree, perhaps) would like to talk to Dr. Ginzberg, Gen. Snyder can contact him while he is in town today.

*Iraq.

The President added that of course Dr. Ginzberg is prejudiced in favor of Israel. He is a very capable person, & State's Mid East desk could probably learn a lot from him.

Mr. Hoover plans to go to hospital to see Mr. Dulles this afternoon. Wants to discuss with him the Syrian thing. As Mr. Hoover sees it, if they built it up past a certain point, then it will be hard to handle. He thinks there is a time element concerned. He admittedly does not know the military side -- wouldn't know how long it would take them to run merchant ships in, build air strips, etc, in order to be in a position to be a tough nut to crack.

[redacted]

Mr. Hoover again suggested President go to Gettysburg for entire weekend, but he said he won't.

About this morning's Leaders meeting. Mr. Hoover thought it went off very well. The President thought Allen (Dulles ?) took a little longer than necessary. Mr. Hoover apologized for his own presentation being so long; but the President, on the contrary, thought his was very good & very keen.

3:15 Secy. Hoover again.

Since Mr. Hoover is visiting Mr. Dulles this afternoon, the President will give him something to think over:

Russia at one time proposed reduction in armed forces, including withdrawal of forces from foreign bases & so on. Suppose we now took advantage of this? They might want them out. Perhaps we could talk to them about it on disarmament level -- if they withdrew, then we could consult parties to NATO, & talk about pulling our NATO forces back of the Rhine, & take most of our ground troops home. Could not of course hurt NATO, & certainly would have to talk it over with NATO partners first. But maybe there is a formula that could be worked out. Could at least talk in terms of mutual disarmament proposal.

Mr. Hoover thought, if this were done at all, it should be done by some individual who is not known today in public life - who could wander up as a tourist, so to speak, & start talking -- would have no authority if suggestions should be brought out.

At any rate, the President wants Foster Dulles to have the thought. As long as we are before the world, just calling each other names, being horrified all the time by their brutality, then we get nowhere. But do they really want to go back to their policy of easing up here to gain good will of the world? Do they move into the Mid East, or take things on the economic side? We could have their disarmament committee & our own talk it over.

First of all, of course, we have to get the Mid East situation stabilized. The President said he is not bringing this up as a substitute, certainly. But just see if Dulles thinks there is any evenue to be exploited.

The President wants Mr. Crim to look into possibility of White House vacancies -- whether we would have any room for a displaced person. President is trying to bring into the U.S. 5,000 of the displaced Hungarians. Would like to get one checked out in the kitchen, the garden, or any other place where he or she would be qualified. If we could do it, the President would even be disposed to stretching requirement to put one in to advertising an American.
Mr. Hare said they will let the President know first thing in the morning.

4:48 Cabot Lodge, from UN, N.Y.
Resolution coming to the floor again tonight on Hungary. Amb. Lodge wondered if President could find his way clear to sending Bulganin another message, urging consideration of it. Lodge said there is the feeling at UN that for 10 years we have been exciting the Hungarians through our Radio Free Europe, & now that they are in trouble, we turn our backs on them.
The President insisted that is wrong -- that we have never excited anybody to rebel. Said further that Lodge can check State & USIA. Amb. Lodge said that is what they are beginning to throw at him, & he is glad to know this from the President. He will call State Dept. & ask them to prepare something.

PHONE CALLS, 11/9/56 -- 5

4:50 Secy. Dulles (in Walter Reed)
First, Secy. Dulles said he heard this morning's meeting went very well. The President said it really did; & that afterwards, Johnson, Halleck & whole group of others said it was the best thing they ever saw. They were urged to just keep still.

About the week end, Secy. Dulles asked why didn't the President consider going to farm for a little longer period -- after election strain, & all this. But the President won't.

The President told Dulles of Cabot Lodge's call. Second Hungarian resolution coming up, & they will pass it tonight. It seems that at the UN particularly many of our European friends are asking why we are so fretful about France & Britain with a few troops in Egypt, while we don't show as much concern about Hungary. Lodge wants President to send another message to Bulganin, saying this is before the Council again this evening, & urging them to consider & act on it. Again to say we would send in UN observer team, to determine needs for food & medicine, & getting out the wounded.

The President, however, feels there have already been too many messages. Dulles said he was not very enthusiastic about another to Bulganin. The President's question: Are we in danger of putting ourselves in wrong in that we will urge Ben-Gurion & people like that if we don't try to put same pressure on this fellow?

Dulles' reply was, I think, "Well, but you have."

The President repeated feeling that we have excited Hungarians for all these years, & now turning our backs to them when they are in a jam. Dulles said we always have been against violent rebellion. The President said he had told Lodge so, but was amazed that he was in ignorance of this fact.

The President said, finally, he might dictate a short message saying this is again before the Council, & he wants to point out again the great feeling of relief if he would support that Resolution & act upon it. Then give draft message to Herbert Hoover for an opinion.

Dulles (cont'd.)

The President doesn't want to let Cabot down. But hates to send messages back & forth, when we know they won't pay any attention to them...

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

Mr. Dulles said he doubts that the feeling about turning backs on Hungarians exists in any quarters but the French & British. President said that Lodge had mentioned France in particular.

President asked if Mr. Hoover told Dulles about suggestion of trying to get Ben-Gurion & Nuri to come over here in succession? Mr. Dulles had heard some suggestion about bringing King Saud over. President said the thought was to bring them over in succession, but to let it be known that we are not favoring one over another.

Mr. Dulles thinks it is a dangerous game inviting all these people over. Would invite one; communique would be issued; everybody else would get mad; get that patched up; invite another, etc. He does not think there is much profit in it.

The President will go ahead with Bulganin draft message. He is sure it will have no influence on Bulganin; whether it has any influence on the UN, he is not sure.

PHONE CALLS, 11/9/56 -- 7

5:06 Actg. Secy. Hoover.

The President told him of conversation with Secy. Dulles, & about the proposed message for Bulganin. One thing President overlooked in discussing it with Dulles, was that the first paragraph would be an acknowledgment of their note of congratulations -- & then call his attention to the Resolution that is up again, urging him to consider it, saying there is nothing else that could contribute to peace of the world.

President told Hoover, also, of the 2 erroneous feelings in UN: (a) that we more or less egged the Hungarians on into this mess, & then turned our backs to them; (b) that we get very indignant about our friends in Egypt, & don't show any concern for the others.

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

Hoover thinks that the French only are expressing that feeling. He pointed out Bulganin's short criptic note on the message pertaining to foods & medicines -- & now all we could add would be the one on the observers going in. He thinks if we really wanted to accomplish something, we should get Nehru fired up a little bit; however, Hoover does not know whether Nehru would go in on the observer idea.

President expressed wish that we had an Ambassador out there to whom this morning's film could be sent. Instead, he suggested Indian Ambassador. Mr. Hoover said it could be flown over -- will give that some thought.

As for this next message, Hoover thinks there is very grave danger of wearing out President's appeal on this situation. He wasn't aware that there had been so many, until it came out at this morning's meeting.

The President will send him draft anyway, to be considered by State people. Asked that Mr. Hoover let Ann know whether or not they send it out.

Said the Israeli Ambassador has come back with informal note that Ben-Gurion would like to come over very soon to see the President. Mr. Hoover would like to reply that we will consider it after they have dropped completely from Egyptian territory.

The President suggested telling him such a visit would be misunderstood while he is standing on the statement he made the other day.

12:40 Secy. Humphrey.
The President said he just had preliminary session with Wilson & Radford on the budget. President said funny thing is, much as he opposed their allowing 48.5 new expenditure program to be advanced, they are using that as a base to cut back. Wilson has estimated expenditure program for the year, & is cutting back. Has brought up a number of things -- decisions of an operational character to cut out duplication, etc. But he seems anxious to get back majority of 41 billion, & asking President's support to get back that far.

The President said he asked Wilson: What are we going to do -- go back to police state? raise taxes? Both Wilson & Radford said, with present state of world affairs, who can possibly take responsibility of cutting back these things very much? They are going to cut back on guided missiles. Will increase our readiness within next year (instead of next 10 years) by keeping up research on a reasonable basis.

On money end of all this, the President took liberty of referring them to Mr. Humphrey. Humphrey said he's happy to take over this one of the President's many problems.

The President told them, finally, that their job is to cut back wherever they see duplication or unnecessary activity. And then President would put it before the NSC, & they could bring it up there.

The President said he does not see a leveling-off spot -- if they make it 2 billion this year; 38.2 next year; another billion the following year, & so on. When we do get into the guided missiles, we will be spending money very fast.

Mr. Humphrey will contact Mr. Wilson on it now -- will see how near they can come to levelling them out. The President said Mr. Wilson is going to "battle" with his own people, & point up the things that would save us money.

Mr. Humphrey's opinion was that the President has given Wilson a good start, which is what he needed; now he (Humphrey) will move in. Will take some of this worry off the President.

Mr. Humphrey asked the President to call him over, sometime when he finds a completely quiet moment "with nothing to do, & feet on desk." He has a few things to talk over.

3:15 P.M. The President called Secretary Humphrey and said that this morning he had called to talk about spending -- and now he has just figured a way we can save a lot. He referred to the Mid East. If settlement is gone through with, as now seems hopeful, we have got to move in to try to repair the damage and to secure the area against the Russians; we have got to help these arrangements through bilateral treaties and be prepared to spend some money in the ultimate hope of reducing our defense budget. Can gain much through friendships and close ties with peoples of these countries.

President said he wanted something constructive to talk to the leaders of Congress about tomorrow. Wants Humphrey's approval of modest amounts. I will go back in the Aswan Dam, but I want these people to see we will deal with them. Willing to give 75 million loan to Egypt.

We want to demonstrate that we will be friends with them.

The Secretary agreed, and thought that private capital could do much to help their developments.

10:27 a.m. -- Sir Anthony Eden.

President: I am sorry to keep bothering you, but I have some problems. First, are we talking submarine cable & not on the air?

(Did not hear Eden's answer, if any.)

President: First of all, you have given us something on the military side I didn't know. First thing we should do -- I have just had a partial Cabinet meeting on this thing, & they think our timing is very, very bad, & I am calling to tell you about it. First, we have got to get quickly in some way a coordinated military intelligence view. And what I could do is to ask Gruenther to come over to see you -- and he could see your military people and could find out anything ..... we could find out in a coordinated way just exactly what this thing is.

Next, although I had a landslide victory last night, we are not like you, and we have lost both Houses of Congress. Therefore I have to have the Senate and House leaders in right now. We have already issued invitation. They are to be here Friday and Saturday, and I have to be meeting with them. This is not so bad, you must remember, Anthony, because I have got to get them to back up whatever we agree to. My Congress won't be back in session until January 6.

And next, we ourselves have not made a study on the line you and I were discussing -- and I don't want to repeat. We have to have the military in that even as seriously as we do the political side.

And then, finally, I find that the boys at the UN they are trying to put the pressure on now are Egypt and Israel. They are trying to put the squeeze on them. The general opinion is that any meeting until that gets done would exacerbate the situation, and they are going up in the air about that. As I told them, I am very anxious to talk to you and Mollet about our future. But I do believe, in view of what my people say, we will have to postpone it a little bit. I am sorry. We haven't said a word.

President: I just don't see how we could do it now with so much on our plate -- we just can't handle this at the same time. I am really sorry because, as I told you this morning, I want to talk to you.

Eden: [redacted]

President: No, I know it wouldn't harm anybody. What Egypt and Israel would draw from any announcement that we would make, might throw the fat in the UN.

Eden: [redacted]

President: I am not talking about not meeting and talking with our friends. But I have had opposition about the timing.

Eden: [redacted]

President: I will have to call you back -- must have a full Cabinet meeting. I'm going out shortly to talk to Foster. Also must talk to State, Defense, ODM and others. I have had only a few of them in so far.

If the purpose of the visit would be to concert ourselves in NATO & what we are going to do in the future, then we have nothing to fear. If we are going to discuss this plan & your people would find it necessary to disagree with us, then the resulting divided communique would be unfortunate.

Eden: [redacted]

President: I think that is very good. The only thing I didn't want for us to have to say we would discuss points that are up for discussion (before the UN).

The President also said that an invitation would immediately be sent to Mollet (and the President later called Secretary Hoover to be sure that this was done). They are leaving tonight, meetings here Friday and Saturday.

10:45 Mrs. John Eisenhower returned call of 9:40.

11:05 Actg. Secy. Hoover.
President has messages from Nehru, Libya & Ceylon. All 3 should be answered quickly. Wants State to get up some friendly reply, saying that we agree with them, & are doing everything in our peaceful power, proceeding through UN.
One from Libya to get special attention. Say we have had same dilemma but of course Britain has been our friend for many years, & we too are nonplused. Doing our best on both sides.

Mr. Hoover, new subject. Stevenson's talk of last night, condemning us for conduct of foreign affairs. Both State Dept., & people working in Gov. Adams' office, are busy trying to get up answer to him.
Mr. Hoover reported that Nixon & Bill Rogers said it is by far the most effective thing he has done in the campaign -- obviously a speech that was written & worked over by New Deal brain-trust down here. Should be answered right away.

Mrs. Hobby called in -- said it was his most effective argument used.
He is asking, "Have we thrown away our Western allies for Russia?"

The Vice President is on half hour tonight; Tom Dewey, half hour tomorrow night.

11:16 Secy. Hoover.
President now learned more of what Stevenson had said. Suggests this in answer: "After we had been talking & working & negotiating with allies since July 26th, we were faced with one question only: Do we approve or disapprove of force in this case?" Also -- does he say we should throw away South America, our Asian allies, etc. President said Tom Dewey could say these things. Mr. Hoover added that if we had approved, we would have American boys in the streets of Cairo by now.

Hoover (cont'd.)
President mentioned the telegram he started, but did not send, to Sir Anthony yesterday. Perhaps he should revise & send it over for Hoover to see.

[redacted]

The President said that would be all right if they did not have to be identified -- but they are part of the Commonwealth. President mentioned that, indirectly, dozens of similar messages have come through Cabot Lodge.

Secy. Hoover thought they could be put out, without mentioning names of anyone, just giving general flow of what the language is..
The President does not want to wreck the ability to get confidential messages from these people, so we have to be very careful.

[redacted]

The President suggested Mr. Hoover either see Jim Hagerty about it, or come over to his (President's) office.

12:09 Secy. Humphrey.

(1) President's speeches both last night & night before were superb. Never better, in the way he did them & set the tone for them. That goes also for Foster Dulles' performance last night in UN.

(2) Mr. Humphrey is scheduled to make 2 speeches in Cleveland, plans to leave here at 2 p.m. today, returning Sunday afternoon. But if President wants him back earlier, can change plans & come back in a minute's notice if we let Miss Renner know.

Mr. Humphrey said he believes this is the time for us to keep our shirts on, & just not get panicky at all. Must not get NATO involved in this present situation -- we will work on NATO later.

With regard to Humphrey's 2 speeches, the President mentioned Stevenson's outlandish charges of last night. Mr. Humphrey said he has talked with Mr. Hoover, & is getting copy of the Stevenson speech in order to put something in his own with reference to the charges.

The President: "They said, are we abandoning our long, firm Western allies, & going to make Russia our allies? I would say the first man to do this was Gov. Stevenson, for adopting their plan for tests. If we do what they want us to do, what boys would he want to send to Egypt?

12:20 Mr. Hoover.

The President thought, in connection with the UN Resolution, that another might be passed, calling for an arbitration commission to examine, not on a formal specific outbreak, but the entire Mid East situation -- & if the UN would want Nehru & the President to meet, President would be perfectly ready to do so, anywhere (he mentioned Greece). Wants Mr. Hoover to talk to Foster about it, & discuss it further when they come over this afternoon. Now that the resolution is passed, we have do keep up the momentum -- this is too important to be standing on dignity. Mr. Hoover agreed we have to keep it moving.

PHONE CALLS, 11/2/56 -- 4

4:36 Secy. Dulles called Mr. Rountree from President's office.
Asked if Mr. Rountree came up with any names on these committees.

Mr. Rountree said yes, but wanted to check first with several people in State Dept. Considering committee of 5: 2 Europeans, 2 Asians, 1 South American.

TELEPHONE CALLS, November 1, 1956

Secretary Dulles called at approximately 8:35 AM. He said that there were going to be some important decisions to be made today -- named the whole attitude of sanctions against Israel and course the US will take at the UN General Assembly meeting this afternoon. President had thought that the major question was to come before NSC this morning, but Dulles said the major part of the discussion was to be on the satellite states (but now events have overtaken position there). It was decided, so far as I could gather, that the satellite discussion would be brief, and concentration would be on Egypt vs. Israel, France and Britain.

[redacted]

Also agreed that by 5:00 we must have a position to take.

President brought up Lippman article, which the Secretary brushed aside by saying that Lippman had not written a favorable one since 1952 and that anyhow he had his facts all wrong.

President emphasized we should not do anything that looks as though we had found an excuse to "pick on Israel."

Secretary said we were going to live up to the tripartite agreement; President said that statement was "overtaken by events," the statement of last Sunday night being made when Israel was doing the invading.

11:10 The Secretary called the President and read him text of proposed statement, which the President said was all right, though mild. Dulles later said that some of his staff members felt the same way.

President urged that the Resolution (upon which Dulles is now working) must get up to the UN as soon as possible, so that Cabot can take it around before the five o'clock meeting and secure as much support as possible. [redacted] The President agreed that the first objective was to get a cease fire, to keep the warm from spreading and find out what objectives on both sides are. You are not going to get a cease-fire by saying everybody please stop.

Then the Secretary read the President a copy of a cable from Dillon, reporting an interview with Pineau, [redacted]

12:25 -- Secy. Dulles.
The President said he has tried his hand at writing a message to Anthony. It might do some good & might not. But it tells what we are trying to do in UN today, & makes suggestion to them to minimize future crises.

PERSONAL

Dear Malcolm:

I have read with interest your recent letter. Of course I agree that our friendship with the people of Great Britain and Western Europe must be maintained and must be strengthened. It represents a priceless asset of which I have never, for one moment, lost sight. We may among ourselves have occasional difficulties -- all "families" do -- but I assure you that I cannot and shall not, if I have the power, permit anything in the nature of a permanent rift to develop. You understand, I am sure, that I must be guarded in my statements, even to someone I know as well as I know you. I can only say that we are doing everything possible to restore our former good relationships with our friends.

In much the same spirit I view the NATO alliance. That organization must continue to function and to grow; any other possibility is unthinkable.

It is not even necessary for me to comment on your paragraph regarding General Gruenther. My regard for his ability and perception -- and his talent for doing a difficult job with tact and skill -- is second to none. I have had several talks with him since his return to this country, and I know he continues to stand ready to serve his nation and the cause of peace in any way he can. If necessary, he can take on specific assignments while still acting as President of The American Red Cross.

I have written you fully and as frankly as possible. Again let me thank you for your letter and for your confidence.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Skouras:

Thank you for your note of the twenty-third. While I deplore, along with you, the fact that at times our foreign policy does seem to become a "political football," yet I am afraid that the suggestion in your letter would not serve to prevent such a thing. I am heartily in favor of a bipartisan foreign policy, but I do not believe that a Secretary of State of the opposition party would automatically assure that fact, nor, in my opinion, would such an appointment obviate an attack by a political candidate seeking political expediency. Nonetheless I shall pass along your interesting thought to others in the Administration for their consideration.

With my thanks to you and Mrs. Skouras for your prayers, and best wishes,

Sincerely,

Mr. George P. Skouras

Dear Cy:

Min suggested that I send you a personal note to inquire in a preliminary fashion if you would like to attend the Inauguration and the other festivities that are held in connection with it. Invitations will soon be going out and you, of course, will receive one of the first. However, I wanted to assure you that if you find it inconvenient to attend, you should not by any means consider coming merely as a compliment to me. On the one hand the whole business is very trying and exhausting, with very little time for any kind of personal conversation; on the other, we want you to come if you feel like it.

If you do decide in the affirmative, either Tom Stephens or Colonel Schulz will be glad to be of whatever assistance you need in the matter of hotel reservations, etc. Either one can be reached through the White House.

As ever,

(Night Letter) November 23, 1956

Sam R. Heller
President
The Eisenhower Foundation
Abilene, Kansas

I most deeply regret that Mrs. Eisenhower and I cannot be with you and our other friends and neighbors for the dedication and unveiling of the Murals in the Eisenhower Museum, and for the re-opening of the old Eisenhower home in Abilene. Both of us are greatly touched by the personal significance of this ceremony. The honor done to our family by those who planned these improvements in the home and in the Museum cannot, of course, be properly recognized in a message such as this, nor can we adequately express our thanks to those individuals who made all this possible. My brother Milton, who will represent the family at the ceremony, will of course want to express the gratitude and appreciation of the rest of us. I do hope that you will extend to the citizens of Abilene, to the participants in the program, and to your guests and visitors the warm greetings and best wishes of Mrs. Eisenhower and myself.

Dwight D. Eisenhower

November 23, 1956

Dear General Marshall:

I am more than grateful for your longhand note of felicitations on my re-election. Quite naturally, the confidence of the American people gratified and reassured me, particularly in these troubled days.

Actually, I found the campaign this year fairly easy -- at least by comparison with the '52 effort. I tried to make most of the trips one-day affairs, which, while temporarily exhausting, did give me time both to catch my breath and to keep up with the necessary official business.

Mrs. Eisenhower joins me in affectionate regard to you and Mrs. Marshall.

As ever,

General George C. Marshall

PERSONAL

Dear Dr. Milton:

The President does wish you would handle the business about becoming a Mason for him. He doesn't want to, you know, and suggested you use as an excuse the fact that he is too busy to think about such things now.

Many thanks.

As ever,

Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower,
President,
Johns Hopkins University,
Baltimore, Maryland.

Dear Dillon:

While your note of the twentieth requires no answer, I do want to say this. When my brother called me to say that the Board of Directors wanted to offer you the Presidency of TWA, my first answer was "I can talk to you quite a while about his qualifications, but first I should say that it is my conviction that you can't get him."

My very best to your lovely bride.

Mr. Dillon Anderson,

Dear Harry:

I hesitate to suggest a definite date, primarily because I almost desperately hope to get away in the next few days for a short rest. At any rate, do call my office the next time you plan to be in the vicinity.

With warm regard,

Dear Bill:

I thoroughly enjoyed your paper "The Fourth Area of the National Effort in Foreign Affairs." On one part only do I have any criticism. This criticism applies to the first three paragraphs under Section IV. Those three paragraphs seem to me to be a little bit fuzzy and are unnecessary to your main theme. If this criticism is valid, then it would probably eliminate also the very short first paragraph in Section V.

In any event, I found your paper both interesting and, I thought, correct.

As ever,

The Honorable William H. Jackson,

Dear Allen:

Recently Cardinal Mooney, while in my office, made the statement that in certain parts of Czechoslovakia the persecution of citizens based upon religious belief -- actually in the hope of stamping out religion itself -- is as cruel as anywhere in the world. What do your reports on this matter indicate?

Dear Aks:

I suspect you have come as close as possible to identifying the reasons for Dan's defeat -- though the whole thing still leaves me a little puzzled, in view of his previous record, as does Don Brotzman's similar failure. However, what is done is done.

Since November sixth, I have been trying to express my appreciation to people and groups who worked hard during the campaign (in the spare time I have had away from the international situation and official routine, that is). I am afraid that just because you are such a steadfast friend, I have neglected at least a "simple thank you" for all you did to be helpful. I know I don't have ever to tell you of my gratitude for everything you do, in so many ways, for the Eisenhower-Doud family -- but once in a while I ought to mind my manners. However, as always, I shall in the end have to rely on your intuitive knowledge of how I feel!

Mamie and I were delighted that you and Helen were with us election night, and are counting on seeing you long before the inauguration.

With warm regard,

As ever,

Mr. Aksel Nielsen.

MINUTES OF CABINET MEETING

Dr. Hauge
Mr. Harlow
Mr. McCann
Mr. Murray Snyder
Col. Goodpaster
Mr. Rabb
Mr. Patterson
Mr. Minnich

The President opened the Cabinet meeting by paying tribute to Dr. Burns, who would soon be leaving government, and cited his honesty, accuracy and frequently uncanny ability to prophesy. In response, Dr. Burns stressed the basic importance of preserving economic freedom in the country and took note of the desirability of such things as the housing program and the termination of government competition with business. Sec. Wilson, at the President's request, spoke of his admiration for Dr. Burns.

Vacation Schedule (CP 56-57) - Chairman Young presented briefly the alternatives set forth in CP 56-57. Mr. Stans noted the problem peculiar to the Post Office. The President suggested that the Cabinet agree on ordering December 24th as a holiday and advocating a liberal leave policy for December 31st.

Sec. Mitchell noted the possible adverse impact on public opinion of closing the government for four full days. The President said that skeleton staffs would, of course, have to be maintained where necessary. Sec. Wilson thought such action might stimulate union demands for including the day before Christmas as a holiday in contract negotiations. The President was willing to accept that possibility. Sec. Wilson also took note of the fact that blue collar workers did not get paid for the day.

The President asked that the memorandum he would sign on this matter be checked with Chairman Young and interested departments, and that it include a statement about the maintenance of skeleton forces.

Dear Pete:

When last I saw you, I did not mention, since it is characteristically hard for me to do in conversation, my lasting appreciation of all you did to be helpful during the campaign. At the same time that I realize there is no real necessity for me even to try to convey to you the measure of my gratitude, there is the desire at least to go "on the record" however inadequate the result. So this note is merely a simple "thank you" for your substantial contribution on many sides to the effort.

I am still hopeful that I may be able to get away for a week or so if conditions in the world stabilize somewhat; if we do get to Augusta, I hope that you will find it possible to be there at least for part of the time.

As you know, I tried to reach you for bridge last week end, but found you and Charlie were out chasing bear. I hope your venture was successful, and I shall be relieved when I see you all in one piece.

With warm personal regard,

As ever,

Dear Charlie:

Whenever I have had time for casual conversation with my friends since November sixth, almost invariably the details of the campaign come up for discussion. Time and again someone will remark -- about a matter which I had previously not known -- "Charlie Jones took care of that." I realize now a little more than in the past what a gigantic chore you undertook and how very helpful you were in a thousand and one phases of the entire operation. For everything you did, including the things I know and do not know about, my lasting appreciation.

I had hoped that you would make your way East sometime soon, but I now hear that you have decided that bears in Utah are more exciting game than is provided by the social life of these parts. I don't blame you in the slightest; as a matter of strict honesty, I envy you greatly.

Until I see you, once again my gratitude for your friendship as I add this latest business to my long list of indebtedness to you.

As ever,

Dear Sam:

Up until now I had hoped that Mrs. Eisenhower and I could come to Abilene for the dedication of the new murals next Saturday. As things stand, the trip is completely impossible -- a situation that I regret but cannot control.

I shall be glad to send you a telegram to be read to the audience attending the ceremony.

I am particularly appreciative of your felicitations on my re-election.

Dear Bob:

The clubs arrived this morning. I could spend some time talking about the beauty of the whole layout, but I must mention especially the putter. Welded to the top of the putter blade is an elephant, making the blade itself quite heavy -- and possibly for that reason, pretty good for me. On the bottom of the putter is the following inscription "Grand Old Putter." It looks to me like the boys at Spaldings were really interested in the campaign while they were making up these clubs.

I have not yet given up hope of getting to Augusta this fall. If I do, you will see me arrive with a complete new red and blue bag, with red, white and blue decoration on each club. Each of course bears both my name and yours. This I like because it is a reminder to me each time I pick up one of them how much I owe to your continued courtesy and thoughtfulness.

Give my love to Mary and, of course, warm regard to yourself.

Dear Earl:

I have forgotten whether my suits fit you well enough that they are worth the alterations that you have to have made when you get them. I have one or two now that I don't like for one reason or another (one of them is a brown one that is just a little too brown to suit me) that I would send along if you thought it was right.

Please let me know as soon as you can, because if you don't want them I will give them to my brother-in-law, who seems to like them.

Give my love to Kay.

Dear Pick:

Until a memorandum just now came to my desk, I had no idea that you were ill and in Walter Reed Hospital.

Of course Mrs. Eisenhower joins me in the earnest prayer that you will soon be fully recovered. In the meantime, I occasionally get out to Walter Reed for one reason or another. If I come that way soon again, I shall ask the doctors to permit me to call on you for a moment's chat.

Mamie and I are greatly distressed to hear of Helen's death. I know that these last few years have been difficult beyond words for you and for her, and while there is nothing I can say that can be of comfort to you, I do want you to know that we are thinking of you and the children. To all of you, our profound sympathy.

PERSONAL

Dear C.D.:

It has been too long since I have written personally to acknowledge various of your recent communications. I suspect that my neglect has been based upon the definite knowledge that you, of all people, would understand the pressures of the last weeks.

First, but most unimportant, is my appreciation of your telegram of November seventh. In addition to the two ingredients you mention, there is a terrific job ahead in the political arena, for every one of us -- and I am hopeful that you will, with your usual enthusiasm and energy, take an active part in it.

Now about your suggestions concerning Hungary. Bill Jackson and I have talked them over, and at least some of Colonel Sarrazac-Soulage's ideas have already been put into effect. I know that your whole being cries out for "action" on the Hungarian problem. - I assure you that the measures taken there by the Soviets are just as distressing to me as they are to you. But to annihilate Hungary, should it become the scene of a bitter conflict, is in no way to help her. At the same time, if the United Nations is to work, Mr. Hammarskjold must act as he, and the United Nations, see fit.

One of my friends sent me a particularly moving document on the case of decency versus extinction. I quote from it two or three sentences:

PERSONAL

PERSONAL

"Partisanship has no place when such a vital question (as atomic self-destruction) confronts us. Mothers in Israel and Egypt, sons in England and France, fathers and husbands in the United States and in Russia are all potential victims and sufferers. After the event, all of them, regardless of nationality, will be disinterested in the petty arguments as to who was responsible -- or even the niceties of procedure . . . That War (would be) so terrible that the human mind cannot comprehend it."

I realize that this letter in no sense answers your urgent suggestions. Someday perhaps you will be down here and we can talk matters over.

With warm regard,

As ever,

Mr. C. D. Jackson

PERSONAL

November 19, 1956

Dear Mr. Brooks:

I am deeply grateful to you for your interesting and thoughtful letter, dealing with the impressions you gained during your recent trip to the Mid East. Your report on the general concensus of the less prejudiced Arab people coincides with my own impression, though of course I have not had the benefit of as many direct contacts as have you.

Whatever the reasons that have brought the situation to the critical stage, our present problem, if matters, militarily speaking, can be stabilized, is to determine how we are going to proceed in the best interests of the peoples of the United States and of all these countries.

This country wants nothing for itself, as you know, but we do want to provide assistance to these nations to enable them to maintain their own independence and to establish themselves economically so that they can provide for their peoples a rising standard of living, of health and of education. If they can foresee a brighter horizon, I am hopeful that much of the bitterness will be relegated to a less important place in their thinking, though at the same time I realize that an imbedded feeling of injustice is probably the most difficult thing in the world to eradicate. The United States stands ready at all times to be of assistance in the providing of technical know-how and tools to bring about a better future for these peoples.

At any rate, I do want you to know that your letter has been helpful in many ways; and I am grateful to you for taking the trouble to write me at such length.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Kirstein:

May I extend through you to the members of The New York City Ballet Company the appreciation of myself and their government for the four-month tour in Europe which they have just completed.

As representatives of the United States, all members of the Company can be justly proud of the contribution they have made to a better understanding between peoples through the exchange of cultural presentations.

Mrs. Eisenhower and I were particularly saddened to hear of the personal misfortune suffered during the tour by Maria Tallchief and Tanaquil LeClercq. I have had the pleasure of meeting Miss Tallchief here in Washington, and I hope that her recuperation is progressing satisfactorily. As for Miss LeClercq, I can only hope that she will recover soon from her attack and be able to rejoin the Company in the near future. Both are fine artists whose services would be greatly missed.

Won't you personally extend to each member of the Company my congratulations and best wishes for many successful seasons in the years that lie ahead?

Sincerely,

PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Ed:

It frequently occurs to me that the further removed an area is from this city, the more prolific are the rumors as to what is going to happen here. If I were you, I would stop worrying about the subject you mentioned in your note of the fifteenth. While I do not know who could have been considering the employment of Pearl Wanamaker, I assure you that no one could ever do it with my consent. I have known her for many years, and I have neither liked what she had to say in public or her mannerisms. My refusal to approve any appointment for her has nothing whatever to do with politics.

As ever,

Mr. Edgar N. Eisenhower,
Puget Sound Bank Building,

PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL

November 19, 1956

Dear Bernhard

Many thanks for your note of the eleventh. I much appreciate your personal felicitations on my re-election.

As you know by now, Al Gruenther is to become the President of the American Red Cross. Selfishly, I am delighted that he has chosen a post in Washington, and I assure you that I intend to call upon him for such help as he can give consistent with his new duties.

Drop me a line just before your next trip here, and I am sure we can get together if I am in Washington.

Mrs. Eisenhower joins me in warm personal regard.

Dear Mr. President --

May I add my personal congratulations to the many you have received by now -- and I think the elephant bracelet works well.

What a tremendous personal success for you this was -- really wonderful. It is also an inspiration! I'll be over in February for a Conference which we'll hold in Georgia and will, provided you are there and have time for a drink with me, call on you after the Conference.

What is Al Gruenther going to do when he leaves here -- with all his brains and knowledge of us all over here -- where is he going to use it?

Hope the world situation will give you a chance to relax after the campaign -- we all are full of sympathy with those poor Hungarians.

Please give my respects to Mrs. Eisenhower -- and accept my warmest regards and best wishes.

Yours very sincerely

/s/ Bernhard

For 2-3 days he had uncomplicated recovery after operation; then on third day developed a "leak which required drainage; since that time he has been getting along well with no systemic, cumulative reaction. Now is coming along fine, 10 or 12 days more in hospital, then home, with return unpredictable.

MEMORANDUM FOR GOVERNOR ADAMS

Herewith a memorandum given to me by Senator Wylie. On the face of it, the argument is quite plausible.

From Secretary Dulles I learn that the State Department has done some study on the international aspects of this matter, but I do not believe our government has ever studied it exhaustively or in its entirety.

Will you please organize a study, possibly under ODM -- because obviously the matter has some important security aspects -- to examine the whole matter and to make a suitable recommendation?

Dear Colonel Turner:

Of course I am delighted that you are now assured of that Hawaiian assignment, though I know you will leave Denver with regret both because of your associations there and that cabin up in the hills. I sincerely hope that Mrs. Eisenhower and I will see you here before your departure.

Don't worry about my weight -- my problem now is not to gain. General Snyder still insists on a liberal daily ration of yogurt and carrots, but even so I have to be very careful lest the scales go up.

I am sorry that you did not get in touch with Mrs. Whitman while you were here, because we wanted you to be with us up at the Sheraton Park the night of the election. But I daresay that you probably saw more of the actual returns on television than did any of us in our crowded suite.

PERSONAL

Dear Canon Parshley:

Thank you very much for your letter of the seventh. I am, of course, highly gratified by your complimentary references to myself, but I think that some of your conclusions have been reached without a clear appreciation of the facts, as I see them.

I did not say that the victory of last Tuesday was one for the "Republican Party" as you state in your letter. I said it was clear evidence that America approves of "modern Republicanism." This is a term that I used for want of a better one to describe the philosophy, principles and proper functions of government as I understand them, and which I try to promote in all that I say and all that I do.

To me it would be fantastic to believe that the United States elected an individual -- or two individuals -- merely because of a very great liking for one or both as personalities, or even solely because of a belief in their integrity and purity of purpose. It seems to me that it is belittling the intelligence and judgment of the American people to conclude that they cross party lines in voting unless there is basic similarity between their own convictions and those of the person for whom they are voting.

Now on your side of this argument, I readily admit that the public in general does not believe that my own convictions are yet largely characteristic of the Republican Party as a whole. While I know that these convictions are shared by the great majority of the Party, this is not yet true for the whole.

PERSONAL

PERSONAL

The Republican, or any other, Party aspiring to be an instrumentality for serving well the interests of the United States, must be bound together by principles that appeal to the vast bulk of our citizens.

As to your hope that I will not become too intensely partisan, I submit, in all modesty, that this implied charge cannot, in my opinion, be properly levelled against me in anything I've ever said or done.

I do believe in the two-party system, and I have always held that if I were to be elected President, I would prefer a Republican Congress because then the American people could more accurately determine and fix responsibility for success or for failure.

But before all else, I am an American, just as is any other member of either Party. I conduct this office in that attitude, and certainly I have never used it merely to promote the interests of my own political Party. But I still maintain that it is my duty as leader of the Party to make it a better instrumentality for serving the United States. I shall continue to keep so trying.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

The Reverend Canon Anthony R. Parshley

Foreign Situation - At the President's request, Mr. Phleger reported on the UN force being sent to Egypt. He emphasized that many details were still to be arranged, that Egypt seemed intent on limiting the authority of the UN force, and that Secretary General Hammarskjold was earnestly endeavoring to enlarge the UN role as a means of speeding peaceful agreement among all parties concerned. He pointed out that the possibility of the entrance of Soviet volunteers on the scene was now disappearing after an extremely tense three or four days. He reported that Nasser had assured the United States that he had no intent at present of permitting the entry of volunteers and thus flaunt the UN position, but he reserved judgment as to the future should the French and British not withdraw promptly. Mr. Phleger believed the Canal could be reopened more rapidly than the six months estimated by the British.

Mr. Phleger stated that the immediate objectives were to achieve a cease fire, the withdrawal of troops (other than UN), effective prohibition of entry of any new forces, and the clearing of the Canal. For the long run, he said, the objectives were permanent settlement of the Suez Canal problem and the Israeli-Arab dispute. He stated that the United States had submitted to the UN resolutions for both purposes. The resolutions called for establishment of an appropriate UN Committee in each instance. Mr. Phleger saw the coming week as very critical because of the likelihood that the Soviet would move in if the presently planned arrangements do not work out.

Mr. Phleger concluded his comments on the Middle East by noting the unstable situation in Syria and the unconfirmed reports of agreement between Syria and Russia for military and economic aid.

In regard to Hungary, Mr. Phleger noted the desire of the Kadar Government to obtain greater popular support without accepting Nagy in the Government. There appears to be no food problem in Hungary. The deportation movement is the most distressing aspect currently, according to Mr. Phleger. He reviewed briefly the UN actions, the desire of Hammarskjold to visit Budapest, the situation of Cardinal Mindszenty, and US relief efforts through the International Red Cross.

In Poland, according to Mr. Phleger, Gomulka is now firmly established and there is a process under way of weeding out Stalinists. He indicated that our offer of economic aid has drawn a guarded reply from the Poles who desire no publicity.

The President commented on the importance of letting the State Department make whatever comments are to be made in so delicate situations as these.

Dr. Flemming outlined Europe's oil requirements and possible means of helping to meet the situation. He stressed that if the US acted wrongly or prematurely the result could be the loss of oil still coming to us from the Middle East. He stated that some countries were already beginning to ration oil supplies and that all of Western Europe would be in a very serious situation within thirty to forty-five days.

Government Competition with Business (CP 56-14/3) - Mr. Brundage reviewed CP 56-14/3, noting especially the progress made since the last report. Of the recommendations in the paper, he stressed the one advocating that the Defense Department continue its program despite the Congressional Committee comment about "no increased costs". He emphasized that the Committee comment had not been voted by the Congress. Sec. Wilson noted his desire to terminate activities like these which cannot be closely supervised, but he did not wish to invite difficulty with the Congress.

The President asked that a careful cost accounting be made in each instance, for he believed that such an accounting would in most cases reveal termination to be economically desirable. Mr. McKellar cited the difficulty of obtaining exact cost figures but the President believed the difficulties could somehow be overcome or compensated. Mr. Brundage agreed to get cost estimates, and the President gave his approval to continuation of terminations by the Defense Department.

Legislative Program - Governor Adams set forth the need for Cabinet members to prepare materials for the legislative program and the State of the Union Message, along with any possible special messages. He emphasized the need for brevity, in which the President quickly concurred. Governor Adams asked that the department heads give the programs of independent agencies in related fields.

Economic Situation - Dr. Burns made a lengthy presentation on the policy of credit restriction which he generally approved, but pointed out the possibility that such a policy could modify in socially undesirable ways the distribution of economic activity. Such impact was beginning to show, he believed, in respect to home building and small business and he cited pertinent statistics. He believed it possible to pursue a policy of vigorous credit restraint even while taking action to reduce the impact on small business by opening certain safety doors. The major action yet to be taken, he said, was that of persuading Federal Reserve banks to make direct loans.

The President believed that so important a matter as this deserved careful study by all interested departments and he asked Dr. Burns to circulate an appropriate paper.

Mr. Weeks referred to evidence he had that sufficient money is available for sound firms. Dr. Burns disagreed. The latter emphasized that inflation currently stems not from too large a money supply but from increasing wages.

Dr. Burns pointed out that this matter had been discussed extensively with Sec. Humphrey and Randolph Burgess, both of whom agreed with his views. The President concluded the discussion by repeating his request for a formal paper.

Inaugural Arrangements - Governor Adams noted the formation of the Inaugural Committee and the chairmanship of Robert V. Fleming. He indicated that Cabinet members could make their requests directly to the Committee or, if they preferred, they could look to Tom Stephens for assistance. The President commented on the need for submitting requests early, noted that he had asked Mr. Fleming to have a large number of balls and also to keep the parade limited in time.

The President also noted the Postmaster General's illness, received a "progress report" from Mr. Stans, and directed him to relay the Cabinet's best wishes to Mr. Summerfield.

Staff Notes - Governor Adams recalled the establishment of this reporting activity in the White House, and asked that each Cabinet member discuss the project with the pertinent departmental assistants in order to accomplish improvements in the system and a greater flow of information.

Dear Emmett:

The other day I received a wonderfully heartwarming message signed by scores of my Abilene friends, including you. It is particularly gratifying to me that so many of the people of Abilene maintain their confidence and support of one of the old town's former residents.

PERSONAL

Dear Bill:

My grateful thanks for the compliment you pay me in your letter of the ninth. I agree thoroughly with your thesis that if the Republican Party is to establish itself as a dominant influence in American life, it must do two things. First, it must adopt and live by a philosophy of government that I call "Modern Republicanism" and it must convince all America that it does live and act by this philosophy. Secondly, it must organize itself far better than it has in the past, particularly at the precinct, district and county levels. We have had a Party that I am afraid wanted to have too many generals and too few fighting men.

One part of the first job is gradually going forward; that is the conversion of most Republicans in public life to the need for making their creed modern and suited to the conditions of the day. The selling to the American people of this conversion has not been so well done, as the late election proves. Because of my special responsibility for getting the kind of legislation the country needs, and the fact that the Congress is in the hands of the Democrats, I cannot, of course, be too partisan, but in my appearances before the public, I can preach political philosophy -- the kind that America seems to approve. This ought to increase the fertility of the field in which the more partisan politicians can work fruitfully.

It was wonderful to hear from you.

With warm greetings to Mrs. Paley and, of course, personal regard to yourself,

As ever,

Mr. William S. Paley,
Columbia Broadcasting Company,

Dear Cliff:

Despite the fact that the last thing in the world you want is any note of appreciation from me for your efforts during the campaign, I feel impelled at least to say "thank you" once again for the friendship and devotion that inspired you to do so much during the recent weeks and months. You well know that my emotions are mixed as I face the next four years, but paramount is the gratification I feel by the verdict of the voters, coupled with the compliment implicit in the actions of so many of my hardworking friends.

I still don't have any idea as to when I might possibly get away for a few days, but I'll be in touch with you toward the end of the week.

With warm regard,

As ever,

Dear Bill:

Despite your telephoned admonition, I cannot let your note of the tenth go unanswered, even if I have neither the time or the talent to write as moving a letter as do you.

Only in the last day or two have I had the opportunity really to think about the results of the national election. Of course I am gratified that voters in such large numbers over the country supported the present Administration. Two things in particular pleased me -- the size of the plurality in New York, and the fact that the Vice President and I again carried Texas. We can talk all this -- and more -- over when I see you.

I am conscious, of course, of all you did to help during the campaign, and for your contribution I owe you, as always, a lasting debt of appreciation.

With warm regard,

As ever,

Mr. William E. Robinson,

Dear Maud:

Mamie shared with me your good letter of the Sunday before the election. While I could not find in my heart any room for a special elation over the outcome of the election -- principally because of the tensions and difficulties of the international situation -- I was, of course, highly gratified by the vote of confidence given to me by so many of the American people. Incidentally, I quite agree with you that Mamie could have won the election on her own -- just by smiling! She has turned out to be the star campaigner of the family.

I was, of course, surprised that Kansas -- good Republican State that it has always been -- chose this year a Democrat Governor, but I am too far from the actual scene really to know the true story there. I suppose the drought had a great deal to do with it, as did the primary fight in the Republican ranks.

I wish that I had known that Myra was with Bill Kent when we were in Minneapolis; I would have liked nothing better than at least to say hello to her.

Incidentally, perhaps you know that I have been recently in touch with Katherine Haughey, and that her husband sent me a painting. The picture is hanging just outside the door of my office.

Mamie and I hope that your health will steadily improve, and want you to know that you are constantly in our thoughts and prayers.

With affectionate regard,

As ever,

Mrs. Arthur Hurd
Sunflower Hotel
Abilene, Kansas

November 12, 1956

Dear Billy:

I have studied thoroughly the letter from Mr. Bratcher, and I return it to you because I know Tommy will want it for his files.

But the main purpose of this letter is to express to you, more adequately than I did yesterday, my deep appreciation of all you did during the just concluded campaign. George has told me something of your talents as a money-raiser, and I know that beyond that you contributed greatly of your time and energy. And I assure you that the result in Texas delighted me, as I am sure it did you. Because of sentimental reasons, I really wanted to carry Texas -- and with your help, and the help of a number of other good friends, we did the job.

Again my thanks for your efforts, and warm personal regard,

As ever,

Mr. B. G. Byars
319 Citizens Bank Building
Tyler, Texas

November 12, 1956

Dear Swede:

Just a note (a short one this time!) to acknowledge your telegram of felicitations and commiserations. Sometime or other I shall argue with you about the allocation you make.

Needless to say, both Mamie and I accept wholeheartedly the good luck that you wish us.

With warm regard,

As ever,

Captain E. E. Hazlett, Jr. (Ret.)
109 Boundary Street
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

November 12, 1956

Dear Ed:

I was alarmed by the first paragraph of your letter. I am quite certain of one thing: in view of all you say, a good long rest is clearly indicated. You and Lucy had better take off for Southern California and stay there for a month.

As for myself, my great personal disappointment is that our problem in the Mid East continues at such a critical stage that I cannot contemplate leaving Washington at this time. Since I shall be very busy indeed from December fifteenth onward through the next six months, it seems clear that unless the situation is markedly improved within a few days I am going to get no rest at all before I am in the middle of another session of Congress.

So far as I know, I am in remarkably good health for my age, but at 66 I am sure that no man can continue to take the steady daily beatings, worries and exhausting hours without finally showing some effects. But I am doing my best to get a short period each evening when I can swing my golf clubs for 10 or 15 minutes, and then go to the pool for another 10 or 15 minutes' swim. In this way I seem to be getting along very well.

Give my love to Lucy, and do take care of yourself.

As ever,

P.S. Of course when you come back this way I will be glad to have that long talk.

Mr. Edgar N. Eisenhower
Puget Sound Bank Building
Tacoma, Washington

MEMORANDUM FOR

THE ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE

Senator Green came to my office this morning to report on an audience he had been granted by the Emperor of Ethiopia. The substance of the conversation that Senator Green had with the Emperor is reported in the attached aide memoire. Senator Green told me that the only real difference between the aide memoire and the conversation was the fact that in the conversation the Emperor was obviously much more disturbed than would be apparent in the aide memoire and that he used language of a very strong character in expressing his dissatisfaction.

One of the points that the Emperor seemed to make was that the United States had violated an "agreement." He emphasized this point several times. I should like to know whether we have actually been guilty of violating an agreement, no matter whether such agreement was executed before or after this Administration was inaugurated in January 1953.

I promised Senator Green that the State Department would notify our Ambassador in Ethiopia that the Senator had actually delivered his personal message to me. Will you please instruct your Ambassador to suitably inform the Ethiopian Government?

Dwight D. Eisenhower

P.S. The friendship of Ethiopia
I consider of great importance.

November 11, 1956

Dear Tom:

At your insistence I have been so busy thanking people all week (whenever I get a moment off from the international crises we have by the hour) that I have completely ignored the major contribution you made to the campaign just ended. Your great political sense was at all times one of the best assets I had; and at the same time you handled the difficulties of trips, of personnel, and of arrangements with your usual efficiency and skill.

I know you hate extravagances, but you have at least to bear with me while I say that I literally do not know what we would have done without you during these weeks and months.

With warm personal regard,

As ever,

Mr. Thomas E. Stephens
The White House
Washington, D. C.

November 11, 1956.

Dear Al:

This last week has been turbulent, as I know you realize full well. Even though I did not personally immediately acknowledge your message of the day after election, you and Grace were much on my mind.

Rather than try to write you at length about the shifting, difficult situations we confront in the Mid East and in Eastern Europe, I suspect I better wait for your return to the States. In the meantime I have gotten your various reports, which have been extraordinarily helpful.

Even though I cannot but regret that you are leaving NATO at this particular time, I nonetheless realize that there will be great advantage to me in having you close by. I might as well warn you that your new association cannot possibly prohibit me from consulting with you on the problems we face in the areas you know so well.

I hope Grace has one final, glorious fling in the Flea Market -- and assure you that Mamie and I both look forward eagerly to your return.

With warm regard,

As ever,

P.S.: George is a little upset that your grandson did, or could have, outsmarted him on his political predictions.

General Alfred M. Gruenther.

Dear Cabot:

I am grateful for your congratulations both on the campaign and on the victory.

As I think you know, I want very much to see the Republican Party become, as I said on Tuesday night, the Party of Modern Republicanism. To this end we must lay plans now, I know. The difficulties you know as well as do I, especially when our days are so consumed by crises of one sort or another.

But if I did not believe in my heart that such a thing would be possible, I doubt if I could have gone into the campaign at all.

You cannot imagine what a lift your final paragraph gives me.

Mr. Shanley:

Annette Ward of the Fairchild Publications called.

Said that when Rosalind Russell saw the President while she was playing here in town recently, the President told her he would be glad to see her father-in-law, Carl Brisson, whenhe came to town. He apparently has been doing a lot of work on international cultural understanding.

He is coming today and she wondered if he might come in anytime tomorrow or Saturday. I explained awfully busy right now with the international situation but I would check.

I checked Ann and found that the Pres. and Mrs. Eisenhower did have Rosalind Russell in for tea one evening while she was in town and entirely possible he did tell her this.

P. S. She said she would drop a note in the mail this afternoon on this.

THE DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LIBRARY

The President began by stating that it was not a crisis situation that prompted the meeting, rather it seemed to him good to have a meeting for the general purpose of catching up with the world situation since the Leaders had had to devote the past several weeks mainly to other interests.

As a backdrop to this discussion, the President said, it was necessary to remember that this is the age of the atom and that the world has to find a solution -- either we achieve peace or we face extinction. Also the Russian menace now seemed to combine the old Stalinist technique along with the new style of economic penetration.

The President wanted to note particularly that Hungarian developments have served throughout most of the world to convict the Soviet of brutal imperialism. This was the opposite of the old situation when neutral nations would never view Russia as being guilty of either colonialism or imperialism, and when Russia would never be disbelieved and we would never be believed. Further, the Hungarian situation warns us again that the Soviet is capable of changing its face almost instantly.

The President noted parenthetically that he had communicated with the head of one Mid-East government who in his reply told about having had an early report from Bulganin stating that Russia had to go into Hungary to protect Russian women and children and to get them out.

Regarding the Middle East, the President recalled how the age old conflict between Arab and Jew complicated the present situation and how difficulties became acute first in the Russian-Egypt arms deal, and extremely so when Egypt took over the Canal.

The President referred to the thick file of his own messages in connection with this situation. He stated that the Administration's first effort was to get the French and British to see that it was not a good policy for them to try to get rid of Nasser, then the U.S. government was involved with exchanges with the Soviets, and in many other efforts which have produced the result that should the U.S. ever be forced to use economic sanctions it would have not only UN moral opinion in support but indeed the full force of world opinion behind us.

The President made a special request that the Leaders hold confidential everything said at this meeting since things were close to solution in the UN, and also the cost of saying one good word about one country is that 12 or 13 countries begin to hate you! The President then called on Allen Dulles to brief the group on intelligence developments.

Allen Dulles - Hungary - Mr. Dulles noted that Moscow some time ago had begun a process of cautious liberalization at home and then was forced to do likewise in the satellites when the news leaked out. He thought this was done by Russia at some great risk to itself, since he and others in this country were thoroughly convinced Poland and Hungary are definitely anti-communist. CIA had in August indicated trends setting in that might be irrepressible short of armed force -- hence the bread riots were not surprising.

The advent of Gomulka to power in Poland on October 20th had been reason for Khrushchev to fly to Warsaw, perhaps with the idea of finding out whether Gomulka might have to be crushed by military force. It is known how Gomulka walked a tightrope and how the Soviet decided to play ball to appease Polish sentiment without losing that country from the Bloc. This, said Mr. Dulles, touched off events in Hungary where there had long been violent dissatisfaction with Soviet rule and Soviet confiscation of Hungarian assets. Mr. Dulles then went on to recount the factual developments in Hungary from the beginning of demonstrations on October 23d through the Soviet massacre the next day of unarmed demonstrators, the establishment of revolutionary councils in various regions of the country, and on November 1st the agreement between Nagy and the rebels which constituted practically a declaration of independence from Moscow. At first it had seemed that Russia would accept a limited number of Nagy's demands but when the rebels pressed for a complete severance of ties and withdrawal from the Warsaw Pact, Moscow refused to tolerate a breakaway and the Soviet force re-entered Hungary.

Mr. Dulles stated that Russia had taken over most of the country by November 4th, and that while some resistance continues even now it cannot long endure.

Mr. Dulles stressed the ruthlessness and brutality of Soviet repression, citing the language of Soviet directives over ~~direct~~ radio communications. He concluded that Russia had lost a satellite and gained a conquered province, that in the outside world the myth of sweet reasonableness of communism has been destroyed with a resultant denunciation of it by former Party members and that the Soviets now realize that satellite armies are not at all trustworthy.

Allen Dulles - Middle East - After giving a brief historical background, Mr. Dulles outlined the origins of the present crisis as occurring in April, 1955 when Russia made a public offer to help any Mid-East country not already aligned with the West. Subsequently came the arms deal with Egypt through which a $1/4 billion worth of planes and other materiel poured into that country and the first Soviet submarine was en route to Egypt when Israel launched its attack. Israel sought to prepare itself against this threat and there were many raids and counter-raids. By turning to arms development, Nasser made economic development impossible, the Aswan project fell through and he was lead to seize the Canal to compensate for the economic failure. Among factors encouraging him, Mr. Dulles estimated was Russian advice to avoid compromise with the West.

Mr. Dulles stated that the Russians have continued to encourage Egyptian intransigence, that Russian notes to the major Powers are sufficiently vague to leave open the possibility of unilateral action, and that Nasser has apparently received assurances from the Soviet Ambassador in Cairo that Russia is prepared to support Egypt all the way, even risking World War III. Presently there are throughout countries like Syria, Lebanon and Jordan many rumors that the Soviet will intervene militarily. Also, Communist China has announced it cannot stand idly by and there are reports of great numbers of Chinese volunteers for fighting in Egypt.

Within Egypt Nasser seems to be playing both sides to get the best deal, and he still has a potential for waging guerrilla war though for how long cannot be estimated. There is no internal opposition to Nasser.

According to Mr. Dulles, other Arab states are not anxious to enter the fracas and Saudi Arabia is anxious to stay out of it. But there is virtually unanimous revulsion among the Arabs against the French and British attack. Mr. Dulles believed possible a variety of Soviet moves for the future such as attempting to sabotage the cease fire agreement, perhaps send in volunteers, or make a show of force in the Black Sea, etc., but it is believed that these moves will be restrained "short of war".

Mr. Allen Dulles concluded that for the long run Russia may have over-promised support and will lose face if it fails to deliver, but all this depends on whether Nasser holds out long in the hope of getting Soviet aid.

Mr. Hoover - Hungary - Speaking from a prepared paper, Mr. Hoover recalled the basic U.S. policy that the satellites should be liberated not by force but by the unceasing pressure of man to be free. Making clear that the U.S. had not encouraged revolt, he went on to recount developments from the Twentieth Communist Party Congress early this year through the change of government in Poland and the outbreak of riots in Hungary. He recounted in sequence the steps taken by our government in connection with the uprising. He concluded his presentation by noting the pending efforts of the U.S. to aid the refugees and by summarizing the outcome as (1) causing new problems for Russia in East Germany, (2) awakening Asian nations to the true nature of Soviet "assistance", (3) restrengthening the NATO alliance and (4) generally weakening Russia's position with respect to the Bloc countries.

Mr. Hoover - Middle East - After characterizing the situation as a real threat to world peace, Mr. Hoover traced developments since Nasser's seizure of the Canal on July 26th. He stressed the desperate feelings that developed in the French and British governments because of the implications of Nasser's action to their whole position in Africa and the Middle East. Throughout the period, the U.S. worked with our allies to prevent a resort to force, but this broke down when Israel invaded Egypt even as the Israeli Ambassador was assuring us (in response to the President's appeals to Ben Gurion) that Israel would not initiate an attack.

Mr. Hoover then described our efforts through the United Nations to bring an end to hostilities and the manner in which Russia had injected itself with an unacceptable offer to join the United States against the English and French. However, this Russian injection has served in part as a help toward restoring effective relations among the United States, France and England.

Mr. Hoover saw for the future the need to concentrate efforts on preventing a new outbreak of fighting and the importance of providing oil to Europe by getting the Canal repaired and keeping the pipelines open.

The President added that the British and the French had wanted to be included in the UN force, but our own view after much consideration was to keep the Big 5 Powers completely out of the task force so as to avoid any competition with Russia about dominating the force. The President noted particularly that the UN force would include India.

Oil - Dr. Flemming pointed out that even with the Canal blocked and the Iraq pipeline out, a 15% or 20% reduction of West-European oil requirements would permit fulfillment of needs provided we can move 500,000 barrels per day from the Gulf and South America along with 350,000 barrels we have been taking from South America which could be diverted to Europe. This would also depend upon keeping open the pipeline now operating, as well as moving some oil around Africa.

Dr. Flemming stated that the Ad Hoc Committee set up in August had collected all the necessary basic information but it had not been authorized to activate a plan, though it is ready to move when the government decides that can be done.

Mr. Rayburn and Sen. Wiley asked several questions about the location and operation of the remaining pipelines and proposals for new lines. Dr. Flemming indicated it would take from 2-4 months to restore the Canal whereas it would take three years to build the proposed line through Turkey.

The President stated that any public discussion of the oil situation could easily lead to action by the Arabs to blow up our line. Also the promise of help on oil should not be given until more progress was made with settlement of remaining issues. The whole situation was to his mind very delicate.

Military Operations - Adm. Radford recounted the measures taken by the U. S. Armed Services to prepare against any eventuality, the close watch that was kept on the situation, and action taken to evacuate Americans from the danger areas in Egypt and Israel.

Adm. Radford described briefly the military operations of the belligerents and the present status of forces and positions. He re-enforced the President's comment as to how Syria might destroy the Aramco line if they got the idea the U.S. was helping the French and British.

Adm. Radford described the concern of the JCS over the Russian notes earlier in the week which did not close the door against major hostilities. He noted the evidence of Russian air activity in the area and then assessed the capability of the Soviet for bringing force to bear.

In answer to a question, Adm. Radford stated that there are Soviet troops on the Iranian border but there are no signs of any increases.

Economic Assistance - The President spoke strongly on the great importance of the Middle East in the cold war and his conviction that the United States has to step up its efforts to assist the cause of freedom in that area. He felt that the United States could start with some advantage now that the pitfall of Russian assistance is evident, hence our efforts might be more successful in the future than in the past. He thought our efforts ought to be concentrated to a greater degree on helping these nations strengthen their economies, by which it would be possible to prevent growth of sympathies for Russia and perhaps win back those already sympathetic.

General Discussion - After Sen. Lyndon Johnson and Mr. Rayburn indicated they had no questions, Sen. Saltonstall asked about Egyptian influence in Morocco against the French. The President said there was no question but what arms for use against the French were being supplied through Egypt. Allen Dulles said that Cairo was definitely a center of help for the rebels in Morocco.

Sen. Smith inquired about developing increased oil shipments by using tankers. The President replied that we as a government are carefully keeping out of the oil picture so as not to endanger settlement of the main issue. Europe had some reserves at present and, of course, individual companies are working on it. Sen. Smith assumed then that the United States had not cut off oil supplies to the British and the French. The President responded that we must never forget that Moscow remains the big enemy and that our alliance with Western Europe continues to be strong even though it has recently been marked by a family fight.

Sen. Knowland thought the government should be commended for its handling of the situation in the Middle East. He then asked whether the UN had sent an investigatory commission to Hungary. The President replied in the negative, explaining that it is well known that the Commission would not be able to enter that country. Mr. Murphy stated that the Secretary General was still working on it and was in fact assembling the people for the Commission.

Sen. Green asked about the extent to which the NATO meeting in Paris would be complicated by these developments. The President thought that the meeting might be postponed until fundamentals get resolved. Mr. Hoover stated that Sen. Green was speaking of the interparliamentary group, and the President felt there would be no complications there.

Rep. Vorys asked as to what the British and the French had in mind. The President estimated that they had felt finally that the last straw had been loaded on and that they had to take action. The President went on to say that the U.S. had disagreed with them and had urged that time be allowed to run against Nasser, probably ending in his isolation. The President noted that in all his correspondence with Mr. Eden, he had urged patience but that for a period of some ten days Mr. Eden would neither call nor write in response to the President's communications.

The President noted that U. S. relations with Saudi Arabia were very good, as also with some others. The U.S. wanted to maintain these good relations, recognizing that we would have to be the ones to accomplish any restoration of Western influence in the area.

Rep. McCormack inquired as to developments should the Soviet move in. The President said this would constitute an entirely new problem, and that the U.S. would have to meet the issue like men. However, the issue would not develop if present projects could be carried through in timely fashion.

Mr. McCormack asked whether the United States would recognize the new regime in Hungary. The President stated that the question had not been canvassed very far but that he would doubt it.

There was a brief discussion of the situation in East Germany, Rumania and Bulgaria.

The Vice President referred to the effect of this on Nehru. The President said he had had many conversations with him and that he was anxious that Nehru should get the truth about Bulganin. He believed Nehru to be very bitter about the Russian activity in Hungary.

Sen. Wiley ascertained that there were no new significant developments re Korea and Formosa.

* * * * *

Speaker Rayburn as customary raised the question as to who should say what following the meeting. The President thought it would be in order for the Leaders to comment on the film about Hungary which they were about to see, and that they could probably refer to the seriousness of the situation. He would think, however, that there would be no need to call a special session of Congress should that be asked.

The President concluded the meeting by inviting submission of any bright ideas that anyone might have.

(The Leadership then adjourned to the Conference Room where they saw the Hungarian atrocities film.)

Dear Rav:

I must be a politician after all (despite my protestations to the contrary) if I have "inspired" you to doing a little campaigning on your own! I am, as I think you know, sincerely grateful for your confidence in me and for all you have done to instill that confidence in your friends and associates.

With affectionate regard to Betty and all the best to yourself,

As ever,

P.S.: I shall bear in mind your offer to be of service in the future -- thank you.

Dear Doodle:

Of the many messages I have received in the last three days, yours gave me the greatest joy. I am simply delighted that you are strong enough to write me such a long letter and that the x-rays continue to be encouraging.

As I am sure you realize, the campaign and the election itself were completely overshadowed the last two weeks by the seemingly hourly crises we faced. I cannot find it in my heart to feel any great elation over the outcome of the campaign, but of course I feel a renewed strength to deal with the problems we have because of the assurance of the majority of Americans.

I would not admit this to anyone but you, but I think tucked back in my mind was the desire, greater than any other, that I would carry the State of Texas. So I am more than grateful to you for your campaign tactics, and to all my friends down there for their confidence and support.

Always you and Rosa Maye are in our thoughts and prayers; Mamie joins me in affectionate regard to you both.

MEMORANDUM FOR GENERAL PERSONS

Here is something that might be significant with respect to the subject that you and I were talking about a little while ago. It is an excerpt from a letter from Dave Beck:

> "I am certain that all Americans realize that without your leadership at the head of the ticket, many members of Congress would not have been elected. I sincerely hope those in Congress who realize the assistance your candidacy provided will be conscious of the responsibilities imposed upon them to follow your forthright and imaginative leadership in the trying months and years ahead."

Dear Father Bunn:

In the note I wrote you expressing my sympathy to you in the death of Father Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., I failed to say that in 1928 I had the rare privilege of listening to a magnificent lecture of his on the growing menace of communism. I think that I could recite some parts of it today.

Dear George:

Thank you for your telegram of election day. I am glad that you felt the campaign was conducted on the right plane. Of course I am gratified at the vote of confidence given to me and to the Administration by the American people.

But a far more important matter is on my mind, one that at the moment I know I cannot discharge adequately. At any rate, won't you please realize that I am at least conscious of all you did. In my opinion you made one of the outstanding contributions to the successful outcome -- and I am correspondingly grateful.

With warm personal regard,

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Rosenwald:

I have just had the privilege of reading the thoughts you so eloquently express on the explosive and deplorable situation in the Mid-East. As I am sure you know, I firmly believe that the only way to "win" the war that sometimes seems so threateningly close is to prevent it. I pledge again every resource at my command to that end, and I share your prayer that we in the family of nations can prove ourselves spiritually and intellectually strong enough to find the true way to peace.

I rather hate to intrude upon this letter another subject, but Sidney Weinberg has told me of the contribution you and Mrs. Rosenwald made to the recent political campaign. I assure you that I am more than grateful for your confidence and support.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

Mr. Lessing J. Rosenwald

P.S. Your presentation of the case for decency versus extinction is so moving that I should not be surprised if you find portions of it quoted or paraphrased in a forthcoming Inauguration Address.

Dear Emmet:

In this rapidly changing world, I have only one thought firmly in mind. That is what sheer folly it would be to try to compete with you in the use of the written word.

So may I say simply that from the bottom of my heart I thank you for your tremendous and unique contribution to the political activity just ended? I literally do not know what we would have done without the benefit of your great talents.

I well realize that you and Eileen made a sacrifice to help me out; I shall always be grateful to you both.

I appreciate greatly, more than any other communication on the political side that has come across my desk in the last two days, your telegram of the seventh. Quite naturally, the verdict of the American people serves only to intensify my efforts, as I said late Tuesday night, on behalf of Americans and of peace.

Much on my mind has been a desire to get off to you a letter to try to express my appreciation of your tremendous contribution to the result of Tuesday. Your endorsement and your participation in the campaign played a large part, I know, in the vote of confidence the Vice President and I received.

With my deep gratitude and warm personal regard,

Dear Len:

Before you leave on that much-needed vacation trip to Florida, I want to send you a brief note to express my appreciation of your intensive efforts during the campaign. I know that the job of the Republican National Committee Chairman is difficult and exacting, and one that requires balance, judgment and experience -- and in all particulars you performed admirably.

While I am, as you are, disappointed that the Republicans did not carry the Senate and the House, I cannot help but feel a personal sense of gratification at the plurality accorded the Vice President and me.

I want also to tell you that my staff reported nothing but the finest cooperation from all the members of the National Committee in the political activity that has absorbed so much of the time of all of us for the last weeks.

With affectionate regard to Gladys, and all the best to yourself,

PERSONAL

Dear Lew:

The purpose stated in your telegram is one that is devoutly to be wished. However, so far as the Mid East is concerned, we now have enough complications in the United Nations without adding another. The great difficulty in the situation at the moment seems to secure Egyptian and Israeli compliance.

Nevertheless, I think that once all troops are withdrawn from that area (assuming that everything goes along successfully), then we should raise quite a storm of exhortation, through the United Nations, to get Russia to withdraw from Hungary.

With warm regard,

As ever,

SHAPE

Your long letter to President crossed with one in air mail for you. Thanks for it and for accompanying package and for everything. Political predictions so good as to be frightening but of course the ominous events in Europe and Mid East taking precedence over everything. We will all be thinking of you.

Ann

November 5, 1956.

PERSONAL

Dear Eli:

I cannot tell you how deeply I appreciate your note of the second. The times are indeed difficult -- and I am quite certain that justice will not return to the Mid East until all of us show more patience, more understanding and somewhat more wisdom than has yet been brought to bear in that troubled area.

You might be interested in a telegram I got from a man who signs himself "Bibo," who stated that he was leading a part of the Hungarian revolt. He thought that they were winning and that the future was bright with promise until the Mid East flared up. This he thought encouraged the Russians to come in and batter down the insurgents.

I quote this only to show that the influence of none of these violent incidents is ever confined to the exact area in which it physically is located. It is apparent that, rightly or wrongly, certain of the Hungarians will always feel that the Mid East venture denied to them, the Hungarians, their freedom.

With personal regard,

Sincerely,

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

Dr. Eli Ginzberg.

Dear John:

Thank you very much for your letter of the thirty-first, enclosing a letter from Congressman Reece.

By this time you know that I had to cancel my airplane trip to the Southwest, which would have included at least one stop in Tennessee. I regretted the need for cancelling -- but I had to do it because of the Mid East situation.

I have stopped active campaigning, but I shall have to do a little something on Monday night from 11 to 12 -- that will be 9 to 10 your time.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

Mr. John A. Culbreath

Dear Eileen and Robert:

I meant to write to you immediately after we stopped at Stapleton some two weeks ago, but I know that you understand how events -- international and political -- crowded up on me. Mamie and I were particularly sorry that we did not get to see our Lafayette Street friends, while at the same time we realize that any meeting at a political rally of that kind is extremely frustrating.

Thank you again for your nice telegram of good wishes on my birthday. As you can imagine, it was one of the happiest of such occasions -- despite the fact that I had to add another year to my already imposing total.

Sincerely,

Dear Art:

Many thanks for a pre-election present. I hope I can find the opportunity to use the hunting license in successful fashion before the end of the season -- at least I am going to try very hard.

With warm regard,

As ever,

PERSONAL

November 2, 1956

Dear Swede:

Except for an informal appearance on a "Round-up" telecast from 11 to 12 o'clock on Election Eve, I have finished my campaigning. It became too difficult for me to keep in touch with the various items of information that pour constantly into Washington from Europe and the Mid East and at the same time carry on the hectic activities of actual campaigning.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN LIBRARY

It is not difficult at all to operate efficiently in carrying on Presidential functions from any other point in the United States, if there is opportunity to set up the kind of communications required. But when I am gone from here for a period of eight to twelve hours, or up to two to three days, with no communications available other than commercial telephone, it becomes much more difficult, especially so with a world situation such as now exists.

But there is another reason that I decided to do no more in this campaign. Up until a few months ago, I had set my face determinedly against any campaigning except for three or four television speeches to be given in a Washington studio. Some weeks back, however, a lot of people in the Administration came to believe that the distortions and half truths peddled by Stevenson and Kefauver had to be answered -- and that no speaker of ours, other than myself, could gain a sufficient audience to answer them effectively.

So I took to the speaking trail, first to call the hand of the opponents on some of the wild things they were saying, and secondly, to awaken the American people to the importance of the contest and to the realization that each of them should record his own decision.

PERSONAL

This I think has been done. So in my last evening's talk, in Philadelphia, I confined myself to laying out the approach I have employed since 1952 to the whole problem of foreign relations and how I would approach it in the future if the American people want me to continue.

The Dwight D. Eisenhower Library

Actually, unless I win by a comfortable majority (one that could not be significantly increased or decreased in the next few days by any amount of speaking on either side), I would not want to be elected at all. This is for a few simple reasons, even though I believe that the Stevenson-Kefauver combination is, in some ways, about the sorriest and weakest we have ever had run for the two top offices in the land.

My first reason is that I still have a job of re-forming and re-vamping the Republican Party. Since by the Constitution this is my final term, my influence in these next four years with my own party is going to be determined by their feeling as to how popular I am with the multitudes. If they feel that my support will be a real asset in the next election they, individually and as a party, will be disposed to go in the direction that I advocate. If, on the contrary, they think that politically I am a rapidly "waning" star, then they would be disposed to take the bit in their teeth regardless of my opinions.

My second reason is that in any event, whether or not we win control of one or both Houses of the Congress, the division is certain to be very close. In almost every project some Democratic help will be absolutely necessary to get it accomplished. Again this strength can be marshalled, on both sides of the aisle, only if it is generally believed that I am in a position to go to the people over the heads of the Congressmen -- and either help them or cause them trouble in their districts.

For these two reasons I think that my only opportunity for doing anything really worthwhile is to win by a comfortable majority. This belief, incidentally, was an additional reason for my deciding to do a bit of travelling in the campaign. It also offered me a chance to prove to the American people that I am a rather healthy individual.

I had planned two more trips -- one for last Wednesday when I was going to stop at the airfields in Dallas, Oklahoma City and Memphis, and the other for the last day of the campaign when I expected to stop in Hartford, Connecticut, and Boston, Massachusetts. These I cancelled, mostly because of preoccupation with official business.

The Mid East thing is a terrible mess. Ever since July twenty-sixth, when Nasser took over the Canal, I have argued for a negotiated settlement. It does not seem to me that there is present in the case anything that justifies the action that Britain, France and Israel apparently concerted among themselves and have initiated.

The 1888 Treaty says nothing at all as to how the Canal is to be operated, although it did recognize the existence of the "Concession" dating, I believe, from 1868. I think, therefore, that no one could question the legal right of Egypt to nationalize the Canal Company. And what really became the apparent or legal bone of contention was, "Shall the world's users of the Canal, which is guaranteed as an international waterway in perpetuity, be privileged to use the Canal only on the sufferance of a single nation?" Even this, in my opinion, is not the real heart of the matter.

The real point is that Britain, France and Israel had come to believe -- probably correctly -- that Nasser was their worst enemy in the Mid East and that until he was removed or deflated, they would have no peace. I do not quarrel with the idea that there is justification for such fears, but I have insisted long and earnestly that you cannot resort to force in international relationships because of your fear of what might happen in the future. In short, I think the British and French seized upon a very poor vehicle to use in bringing Nasser to terms.

Of course, nothing in the region would be so difficult to solve except for the underlying cause of the unrest and dissension that exists there -- that is, the Arab-Israel quarrel. This quarrel seems to have no limit either in intensity or in scope. Everybody in the Moslem and Jewish worlds is affected by it. It is so intense that the second any action is taken against one Arab state, by an outsider, all the other Arab and Moslem states seem to regard it as a Jewish plot and react violently. All this complicates the situation enormously.

As we began to uncover evidence that something was building up in Israel, we demanded pledges from Ben-Gurion that he would keep the peace. We realized that he might think he could take advantage of this country because of the approaching election and because of the importance that so many politicians in the past have attached to our Jewish vote. I gave strict orders to the State Department that they should inform Israel that we would handle our affairs exactly as though we didn't have a Jew in America. The welfare and best interests of our own country were to be the sole criteria on which we operated.

I think that France and Britain have made a terrible mistake. Because they had such a poor case, they have isolated themselves from the good opinion of the world and it will take them many years to recover. France was perfectly cold-blooded about the matter. She has a war on her hands in Algeria, and she was anxious to get someone else fighting the Arabs on her Eastern flank so she was ready to do anything to get England and Israel in that affair. But I think the other two countries have hurt themselves immeasurably and this is something of a sad blow because, quite naturally, Britain not only has been, but must be, our best friend in the world.

Only a star-gazer could tell how the whole thing is going to come out. But I can tell you one thing. The existence of this problem does not make sleeping any easier -- not merely because of the things I recite above, but because of the opportunities that we have handed to the Russians. I don't know what the final action of the United Nations on this matter will be. We are struggling to get a simple cease-fire and, with it, compulsion on both sides to start negotiations regarding the Canal, withdrawal of troops, and even proper reparations. But the possibility that both sides will accept some compromise solution does not look very bright, and every day the hostilities continue the Soviets have an additional chance to embarrass the Western world beyond measure.

All these thoughts I communicated to Eden time and again. It was undoubtedly because of his knowledge of our bitter opposition to using force in the matter that when he finally decided to undertake the plan, he just went completely silent. Actually, the British had partially dispersed some of their concentrations in the Mid East and, while we knew the trouble was not over, we did think that, so far as Britain and France were concerned, there was some easing of the situation.

Just one more thought before I close this long letter. There is some reason to believe that the plan, when actually put into effect, was not well coordinated. It looks as if the Israeli mobilized pretty rapidly and apparently got ready to attack before the others were immediately ready to follow up, using the Israeli attack as an excuse to "protect" the Canal. In any event, British and French troops, so far as I know, have not yet landed in Egypt. Apparently there has been bombing of airfields, nothing else.

If you have any bright ideas for settling the dispute, I, of course, would be delighted to have them. From what I am told, Walter Lippman and the Alsops have lots of ideas, but they are far from good -- about what you would expect from your youngest grandchild.

Give my love to Ibby and the family.

Dear Al:

Life gets more difficult by the minute. I really could use a good bridge game.

I am not going to bore you with reciting all of our Mid East troubles; in many ways you know just as much about them as I do. At least I am certain that you are acquainted with the British and French side of the story.

Strangely enough, I have seen some of my old British friends in the last few days and most of them are truly bitter about the action taken by their Government. One man said, "This is nothing except Eden trying to be bigger than he is." I do not dismiss it that lightly. I believe that Eden and his associates have become convinced that this is the last straw and Britain simply had to react in the manner of the Victorian period.

If one has to have a fight, then that is that. But I don't see the point in getting into a fight to which there can be no satisfactory end, and in which the whole world believes you are playing the part of the bully and you do not even have the firm backing of your entire people.

But the only further remark I want to make on that is that sleep has been a little slower to come than usual. I seem to go to bed later and wake up earlier -- which bores me. Of course in some ways the situation in the satellites calls for just as much concern, but in a far different way. I most prayerfully hope that the Russians are sincere in saying that they are going to withdraw their troops from those areas, although I notice that they didn't say anything about Czechoslovakia in making this offer.

PERSONAL

PERSONAL

I have finished campaigning. Last night in Philadelphia I made a speech that dealt largely with foreign relations and which had almost no allusions in it whatsoever to the political campaign. My reasons for stopping active campaigning were principally two. My whole chance for doing something constructive for the United States is to have a good, comfortable popular plurality. If I have not that "comfortable plurality" now, nothing I can say in the next four days will change the thing significantly. If I do not have that, I would rather not be elected. If I could get only 50.1 percent of the vote, then I would feel that the American people have gone so far away from my philosophy of government that nothing I could do thereafter would be of any real help. This I think in spite of the fact that Stevenson and Kefauver, as a combination, are the sorriest and weakest pair that ever aspired to the highest offices in the land.

George told me the other day that he was going to write to you and give you a state-by-state analysis of election results -- one on which you could depend absolutely ! ! I merely advised him that if he did that, he was not, in the next few days, to send you a frantic telegram and ask you to disregard the whole thing.

I notice that as election day approaches, everybody gets the jitters. You meet a man and he is practically hysterical with the confidence of overwhelming victory, and sometimes you see that same man that evening and his face is a foot long with fright.

Respecting the election, I have one comment only for my good friends. If the American people decide that on the record they don't want me -- that they think I have made too many mistakes to be trusted again -- then you can be sorry for anyone you want in this world except me ! !

PERSONAL

PERSONAL

I have heard many people say a fellow would go crazy doing nothing. But I think a life of raising prize cattle, going shooting two or three times a year, fishing in the summer, and interspering the whole thing with some golf and bridge -- and whenever I felt like talking or writing, doing it with abandon and with no sense of responsibility whatsoever -- maybe such a life wouldn't be so bad. A man could pretend to have an office, establish his hours as twelve to one -- and take one hour off for lunch!

In any event, America will return somewhat to normal about next Wednesday evening. Until then, I shall hunt a cyclone cellar!

Love to Grace.

To the President of the United States

Dear Mr. President:

Clarifying our discussion, it is my view that a calm appraisal indicates that the entire weight of United States leadership and of your personal leadership should now be directed toward attaining a cease-fire in the Near East.

Subsequent and subordinate to that will come the matter of passing judgment on the actions of various nations in the area, of working out settlements, and of making restitution.

Any other course will seriously divide the United States internally, will divide us from our major allies - the United Kingdom and France, and may cause NATO to fall.

The major threat to future United States security continues to be the Soviet Union and its armed strength. This immediate series of events began with the Soviet's massive arms-aid intervention to Nasser and Nasser's seizure of the Suez Canal.

We must maintain a long-term perspective in this situation. The tone and outlines of your address last night was superb, and our approach to the United Nations and to the world should take the same course.

You did not last night, and I do not now include, condoning any action in the use of force by any of our friends. But the time and manner of passing judgment on them is crucial for the future of the United Nations and of United States security in the long-term.

Sincerely,
